

TAFT WITHDRAWS MUCH COAL LAND

Conservation Policy Applied to 35,073,164 Acres in Several States.

DAKOTAS MOST CONCERNED

Great Area Withheld Pending Examination and Classification Under New Law—Much Lignite Lies Under Land Withdrawn.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 7.—Continuing his policy of practical conservation, President Taft late tonight signed orders to withdraw 35,073,164 acres of coal land from the public domain in the states of North and South Dakota, Washington, Utah, Colorado and territory of Arizona.

Of the total withdrawals 20,698,449 acres are now while 14,374,695 acres are covered in confirmations and ratifications under the new law, approved June 25, of withdrawals made during the last four years by both Presidents Roosevelt and Taft.

Dakotas Most Affected.—North and South Dakota are the two states affected by the new withdrawals. From the public domain in North Dakota the President has withdrawn from settlement 17,826,182 acres of land believed to contain workable coal. In South Dakota the amount withdrawn is 2,870,287 acres.

Previous withdrawals confirmed by the President tonight are listed among the several states as follows: Washington 2,207,967 acres; Arizona 161,280 acres; Utah 5,814,287 acres; Colorado 6,191,161 acres.

The withdrawal orders prepared by the Geological Survey and approved by the Secretary of the Interior reached Beverly from Washington late tonight. They were sent tonight to the Taft cottage on Burgess Point, where they were signed by the President. This was announced as one of the few important matters that attracted tonight to Mr. Taft's attention during his ten days of real vacation.

Action Taken Under Law.—All the withdrawals and confirmations were made under the law passed at the last session of Congress, which definitely authorized the President to withdraw various lands from entry pending their classification and special disposition by Congress.

The President urged this law as the first step in his plan for practical conservation. He hoped to secure additional legislation at the coming session of Congress dealing with the terms under which waterpower sites, coal, petroleum and phosphate lands may be disposed of.

In Colorado the various orders of withdrawal tonight date from July 26, 1906, to June 21, 1910; in Utah from July 26, 1906, to May 9, 1910; in Arizona from November 29, 1909, to December 28, 1909; in Washington from July 26, 1906, to April 7, 1909.

In withdrawing the vast amount of new lands in North and South Dakota the President and Secretary Ballinger have acted principally on a report by Arthur C. Jaffa, a practical miner employed by the Geological Survey, director George Otis Smith, of the Geological Survey, in his recommendation for withdrawals in North and South Dakota.

"A consideration of the information available here, as well as of the report of Mr. Jaffa, leads us to the conclusion that these large areas in these states which are underlain by lignite, considered workable under the present regulations and which should be withdrawn from entry."

All the orders state that the lands are "withdrawn from settlement, location, sale or entry, and reserved for examination and classification with respect to coal values."

The President earlier this week signed orders withdrawing approximately 8,500,000 acres of waterpower sites, phosphate and petroleum lands in the United States, and all of the known coal fields in Alaska.

U. S. WINS COAL LAND Many Wyoming Contests Involving $1,500,000 Mines Decided.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., July 7.—The United States Land Office at Lander today rendered decisions in vital contest cases against 64 entrymen on the coal lands of the Owl Creek and Gobo mines of Big Horn County, involving 10,000 acres, valued at $1,500,000.

Fifty-seven cases were decided in favor of the Government, four in favor of the entrymen and two cases were set for rehearing. The mines were closed last February by injunction proceedings before the Federal Court here, 1000 men being thrown out of employment.

Criminal cases are still pending against eight prominent New York men for whose benefit it is alleged the lands were filed on in June, 1908. Four of them have fought extradition proceedings to Wyoming, and have announced they will carry their cases to the United States Supreme Court on habeas corpus proceedings.

CHICAGO EDUCATOR, ELECTED PRESIDENT OF NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

MRS. ELLA FLAGG YOUNG.

MRS. YOUNG WINS

N. E. A. Elects Chicago Woman as President.

HER SUCCESS PRONOUNCED

Remarkable Record in Improving Chicago Schools Is Made—New Executive Is 65 Years Old and Is Mild Suffragist.

To hold the next convention in San Francisco in 1911. The claims of San Francisco were eloquently presented by Alfred Roncovieri, superintendent of schools of that city.

Primary Work Discussed.—In the main work of the convention, special attention was paid today to children and teaching in the lower schools. Kindergarten work, various branches of child study, music and physical education were also discussed by well-known authorities.

The convention will close in Tremont Temple tomorrow evening with addresses by Mrs. W. N. Hutt, chairman of the woman's branch of the Farmers' Institute Work of North Carolina, Raleigh, N. C.; President Emeritus Elliot of Harvard, and the new president of the association, Mrs. Young.

Not very many years ago, reckoned in the broad sweep of events, the convention of the National Educational Association was held in the proceedings, N. Y. The women teachers who attended sat in the gallery. They had not risen to the dignity of "educators," hence all the business of the meeting was in the hands of men on the floor below.

Among those who sat in that gallery and looked down was Mrs. Young. She had no voice in the proceedings. She did not expect any when she went, for custom had decreed that she might be nothing more than a good listener. It was for the men to make the speeches, elect the officers, adopt the resolutions and shape the course of educational programs. Women might teach pupils in the schools at home, wherever men were not found willing to take the task, but it was not for them to presume to teach the teachers.

In the light of the election of Mrs. Young to the presidency of the National Educational Association in Boston today, it would seem that sentiment has changed since the Ogdensburg convention. Mrs. Young was not relegated to the gallery, nor was the muffled of tradition worn by her or her women associates. On the contrary, she was chosen head of the National body with such cordial enthusiasm as to suggest the educators saw no questionable experiment in the proceeding.

Chicago Salary $10,000.

Rarely do honors come so fast to any educator as they have come to Mrs. Young in the last year. The first of the series was conferred when she was selected unanimously by the Chicago Board of Education to be superintendent of the Chicago public schools at a yearly salary of $10,000. The second came when she was elected president of the Illinois State Teachers' Association, the first time a woman had been elevated to that station. A third was awarded when Mrs. Young received the degree of doctor of laws from the University of Illinois. Smaller honors were involved in the invitation extended to Mrs. Young to deliver addresses in St. Louis, Philadelphia, Boston and other cities on modern educational methods.

Forty-eight years ago this little woman—she is small physically but wonderfully alert and energetic—began teaching in the public schools of Chicago. At 17 she became a teacher in the Skinner School, on the West Side, her salary being $25 a month. She has been teaching ever since and she is not backward about saying she is today 65 years old.

Tangle Is Straightened Out.—Mrs. Young took charge of the Chicago schools at a critical stage. There had been bickering in the School Board, friction between trustees and superintendent, bitterness of principals and teachers toward the superintendent. In the absence of harmony and wholesome cooperation, the school system was admittedly in a bad way. Nobody denied that. The task put upon Mrs. Young was to straighten out the tangle, to restore harmony and to devise a general ground plan upon which the Chicago public school system should start anew. She had not been in office a month when the rough places began to grow smooth. Trustees, principals and teachers in the ranks all were pulling in the same direction. Behind them was the solid support and commendation of press and public. Nothing more remarkable in the way of quick transformation ever was experienced in Chicago.

All the red tape was torn out of the superintendent's office. The way was clear for anyone to reach the new head of the schools for an interview, whether the president of a college or a pupil in the sixth grade. There was no playing of favorites. Lack of time was the only thing that embarrassed Mrs. Young in her zeal to give all callers a hearing. To overcome this handicap as far as possible she established and kept long office hours. It has been one of the marvels of her friends how her physical endurance has been equal to the task.

Every Grade Filled.—Beginning her teaching career as mistress of a room in the Skinner School, Mrs. Young thereafter taught in every grade, served as a district superintendent of schools for 12 years, was professor of education in the University of Chicago for a time and, in 1906, was chosen head of the Chicago Normal School, an institution whose particular enterprise is to fit teachers for their work in the public schools.

Affairs at the normal school bordered on the chaotic when Mrs. Young took charge. In this position she was a tireless worker. Her influence readily reconciled all discordant interests and so coordinated them that the institution became known as one of the best of its kind in the country. It was her work as an executive and harmonizer in this school that attracted the attention of educators to the thoroughness and sanity of her methods. In four years of her administration the enrollment in the school grew from 22 to 60 and the membership from 267 to 517.

Algebra Is Banished.—Mrs. Young banished algebra from the Chicago schools and in its stead established a course of study of the city—its history, topography, industries, institutions and its social and municipal affairs. She has interested herself specially in the physical welfare of the school children. Tubercular and anemic children enlist in her a concern that is actually motherly in the depth of its sincerity.

She is a zealous advocate of fresh air and wholesome nourishment, and she does not believe it is the function of the school authorities to be paternalistic, she herself indorses any plan that will bring the needs of the sickly or poorly nourished to the attention of those who are able to aid them. Roof school-rooms where pupils may study and thrive on fresh air at the same time find favor with Mrs. Young, who has carefully watched the results of the experiment.

She believes in educating girls in domestic science and in their physical culture. She has devised a school plan by which boys may study systematically and at the same time follow a track that permits them to earn a livelihood. She has a theory that amateur dramatic training in the schools will result in the bringing of intelligent, critical audiences to theaters in later years and that thereby the standard of the stage and of the drama may be raised.

Mrs. Young is a supporter of woman suffrage, but not of the militant or speaking class. She holds that the logic is all on the side of the women in this question, but for the present she is content to induce the men of her office and of the schools to go to the polls and vote the first duty of good citizenship. She belongs to the Chicago Women's Club. The Ella Flagg Young Club is an organization of her admirers, principally women school principals.

She was born in Buffalo January 15, 1845, but has lived in Chicago most of her life. In addition to other onerous duties she has edited "The Educationalist." Monthly and has written much on educational topics, notably "Isolation in the School," "Ethics in the School," "Some Types of Modern Educational Theory." She was widowed years ago.

COLLEGE TO GET $350,000

Catholic University Will Recover Part of $900,000 Shortage.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The Catholic University of America will recover $350,000 from the bankrupt estate of the late Thomas E. Waggaman, its former treasurer, who owed the institution $900,000 when he was adjudged bankrupt in 1904.

A compromise to this end was reached with H. Rozler Dulaney, trustee for the bankrupt, and today Justice Stafford, of the District Supreme Court, ordered the certification of the agreement unless the other creditors of Waggaman, on July 20, should show why the terms be not accepted.
