PROTESTS ARE FEW

Property Owners See Justice of Assessment Increase.

KAMM'S ADVANCE HEAVY

Figures Show Increase of 82 Per Cent Over Last Year—Taxpayer Will Make Complaint—Many Visits Made to Courthouse.

"They've been coming in a line all day long to look over those blueprints and register their kicks," said E. D. Sigler, County Assessor, "and there haven't been near so many kicks as you might suppose."

The Assessor was talking about his new scheme of displaying the assessments before they are put on the rolls. For this week only, he will be open to the public, and Mr. Sigler will meet any taxpayers who care to go to him and talk over the value he has put upon their property. There has been an increase of from 5 to more than 100 per cent in the valuation of Portland property on the West Side, and the Assessor, at infinite labor, has marked in plain figures, where all who may wish may see, the value of each parcel of land on the West Side from the river on the east to the crest of the hills on the west, and from the Caruthers line on the south to the North Pacific mill on the north.

Few Complaint of Advance.

"In spite of the advance I have made in the value of the property," he continued, "people look at the values about their own land and remark that it seems to be a consistent increase, and that is the end of it. Of course, where anybody can show me that I have made an unjust assessment, I am perfectly willing to change the figures, but as a general rule people seem satisfied."

"I want it understood that people may feel free to come to this office and talk over their assessments," continued the Assessor. "Above all else I do not want to appear an arbitrary official, who carries things hishandedly. I want to be fair to all, and this is the only method I can think of by which everybody can have a voice in his assessment."

the larger property owners of Portland. Jacob Kamm is the victim of one of the greatest increases made. Last year his property on Fourteenth street, more than a block and a half, was assessed at $13,000. This year it is held at $35,000, an increase of $22,000, or 82 per cent.

W. COLLIER TO STAR IN FARCE HE HELPED MAKE

Comedian Will Desert Frohman to Cast Fortune With Lew Field—Expects to Have Theater of His Own.

WILLIAM COLLIER, comedian and sometime editor of Collier's Irrational Weekly, will not sail under the Frohman colors next season. In an interview with the noted actor at the Bungalow last evening, where he is presenting the farce, "A Lucky Star," Mr. Collier said that when he closes his engagement in Spokane the last of this month in his present play, his working days under Mr. Frohman's management will be over.

"I am not at liberty to make my plans entirely public, but this I may say, that I shall next season be under the management of Lew Fields and that I shall appear in a farce which is the collaboration of Edgar Selwyn and myself. The play is not yet finished, in fact, we have been at work at it only a little over a month. At present Mr. Selwyn is in Los Angeles, where he is trying out one of his plays in which Richard Bennett will appear next season."

Mr. Bennett was Maude Adams' leading man until that actress reached San Francisco, when he left her company and went into stock productions in Los Angeles, his opening play being "Hiel to the Plains," another of Mr. Selwyn's plays. Also interesting in this connection is the fact that Edgar Selwyn is the husband of Margaret Mayo, a former Portland girl who is now one of the best known playwrights and whose recent successes include "Polly of the Circus" and "Baby Mine," the latter of which is now taking Chicago by storm.

In answer to a query regarding the name of his new play, Mr. Collier was reticent. "We haven't really decided on that," he said, "and probably will not consider it at all until Mr. Selwyn and I meet in Denver. That will be on the 7th of August, when I open a four-week engagement in stock at Elitch's Gardens. "Until that time we will have no chance to confer relative to a name suitable to the play. I can tell you nothing concerning the play itself, other than that it is a farce, and entirely different in treatment from anything in which I have previously appeared."

who is himself considered by many the funniest comedian in the world. Mr. Fields is at present breaking theatrical Summer records in New York with his musical comedy, "The Summer Widowers," which is having a surprising run, during the heated season.

ALIMONY NOT PAID

So Frank B. Rutherford, Lawyer, Explains.

WIFE HOLDS FIVE NOTES

Court Advises Woman to Release Papers and Authorizes Bank to Send Money Each Month to Court, Disburser.

Frank B. Rutherford, the attorney who was recently divorced from Ella L. Rutherford, appeared before Circuit Judge Morrow yesterday to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court for failing to pay his divorced wife $50 a month alimony, as the court ordered.

Rutherford said he and his wife had made an agreement by which he should deposit five notes for $50 each with the Citizens State Bank at Myrtle Creek as surety that he would pay the alimony. He said his wife had so far refused to release the notes, and that until she did he was unable to pay the monthly stipend. The Judge suggested that Mrs. Rutherford endorse the notes and authorize the bank to send the money to the clerk of the Circuit Court, whence it will be disbursed each month to the divorced wife.

Money Due Seven Years.

The court order for alimony was made May 11. Rutherford must pay the money for seven years. He was also obliged to pay $50 attorney's fees for his wife. She has her two children.

Rutherford, in his complaint, alleged his wife to be of an extremely jealous disposition, declaring she even objected to his conversation with a Mrs. M. F. Kerby in his presence at the dinner table, demanding that his conversation be directed to her instead of the visitor. Her conduct made it impossible for him to transact business at his office, he charged.

Suit for alleged unpaid alimony, amounting to $3250 with interest, was begun by Addie M. Dewey against Morris M. Dewey yesterday.

She alleges that on June 12, 1906, she brought a divorce suit against him in the Superior Court of Los Angeles. The interlocutory decree of divorce is alleged to have been signed June 30 of the same year, the final decree being issued September 24, 1906, when Dewey was ordered to pay his ex-wife, it is alleged, $50 a month.

$50, which was to be applied on the alimony. The ex-husband has paid Mrs. Dewey nothing, she says. Besides the unpaid alimony she demands $200.00 costs with interest thereon.

INTEREST IS NOT ALLOWED

Grocer Secures Judgment for Bill Owed for Six Years.

One of the hair-splitting technicalities which attorneys often rely upon to defeat the issue in a lawsuit came to light in Judge Morrow's department of the Circuit court yesterday, when, in rendering judgment for F. T. Blake for groceries delivered to Nina H. Hartman, the court refused to allow Mr. Blake to collect $123.40 interest on the account, which has been owing for more than six years.

C. M. Ideman, attorney for Mrs. Hartman, who is the wife of F. L. Hartman, of a local detective agency, objected to one portion of the complaint because it alleges that Mrs. Hartman promised to pay the grocery bill. Judge Morrow held that there was no evidence that she promised to pay, that Mr. Blake's statement to her from time to time was not, therefore, an "account stated," but an open account, and that he could not therefore collect the $123.40 interest thereon. This was in spite of the fact that no groceries were sold her during the six years. Judge Morrow explained that if the attorney for the plaintiff had alleged that Mrs. Hartman made no objection to the statements as rendered her by the grocer, he could collect the interest.

Judge Morrow gave Blake judgment for $57.88, allowing Mrs. Hartman to deduct from this $50 for nursing Mrs. Grace Blake, wife of the plaintiff. The grocer declares he never agreed to pay this, and that she was sick only three days. Mrs. Hartman says she was sick five weeks. The defendant was formerly Miss Nina H. Gilluly.

EJECTMENT ATTEMPT FOUGHT

Protest Failing, Suit Is Brought Against S. Bromberger.

When S. Bromberger raised the rent of the store at 74 North Sixth street from $70 to $150 a month, Cranwell & Rosenthal entered a vigorous protest. But Bromberger was obdurate, and threatened, they say, to bring suit against them in the Justice Court, to have them ejected. They, therefore, filed suit in the Circuit Court yesterday asking that he be restrained from ejecting them from the premises during the term of their lease, and that he be compelled to accept the $70 a month.

The lease calling for the payment of $70 a month was made February 10, it is alleged, the provision being made that another lease might be made later at the same rental price. When the first lease expired, May 1, it is asserted, a new lease was made, of one year's duration. Bromberger is alleged to have refused to accept the July rent, attempting to charge the occupants of the store $150.

—The largest deal in farm land recorded here this year, being exceeded only by the Dumas orchard sale last week, involving a 400-acre wheat farm eight miles north of Dayton for $31,750, an average price of $30 an acre. This is the highest price ever paid for grain land in the Alto county.
