NEW BRIDGE PLAN TRIED
EAST-BOUND TRAFFIC IS GIVEN RIGHT OF WAY IN EVENING.
Police Give Vehicles Two-thirds of Space During Two Hours People Are Hurrying Home.

A plan which will do much to relieve the congestion on the bridges during the busy hours of the evening has been adopted by the police authorities and was put in operation yesterday. East-bound traffic is given the right of way over all bridges between 4:30 and 6:30 o'clock in the evening, allowing vehicles going in that direction to use two-thirds of the width of the bridges and limiting westbound traffic to one line of vehicles. During those hours by far the larger drift is to the eastward, with thousands of persons going homeward from the business district. It is believed that the limitation will work little or no hardship upon the westbound traffic, which is comparatively light at that time. A traffic officer is stationed on each bridge to hold vehicles in line. In case of an emergency, traffic from the east can be handled in one line the surplus is required to await its turn.

Instructions were also given to street-car motormen that they must be carefully obedient to the signal of the traffic officer in crossing the bridge, and must give way to other vehicles when conditions call for it.
Hitherto it has been customary for the faster vehicles in either line to cut out and pass on to the front, causing many blockades and delays. Under the new system, no vehicle going west, between the stated hours, will be allowed to leave the line, and the entire center of the bridge will be given over to traffic homeward.
