Work ox Milwaukie Street Slow.—
There is much complaint over conditions

MISS MAHR IMPORTUNED

SALESMEN BESIEGE HOSPITAL TO PRESENT SCHEMES.

Indignant Friends Urge That Girl Be Not Annoyed Until She Recovers From Injuries.

"Members of the finance committee who have charge of the Miss Marjorie Mahr benefit fund hope that persons who have anything they want to sell to Miss Mahr, be it real estate or anything else, will have the decency not to bother her during her illness."

The foregoing expression was provoked from a member of the finance committee yesterday afternoon after he had visited. Miss Mahr at the Good Samaritan Hospital and learned that the hepiess little woman had been besieged with advice by persons with mercenary motives, and some even had accessed the sale of whatwoman had been besieged with advice by persons with mercenary motives, and some even had pressed the sale of whatever they had on the market. Not wishing to complain, Miss Mahr said nothing and tried to conceal her worry. But these importunate visitors, who were regarded as friends by the hospital authorities, have become so numerous that they are detrimental to Miss Mahr's welfare. Yesterday was the first time a member of the finance committee has called upon her, and he was indignant when the circumstances were related. The finance committee is composed of the city editors of the Portland daily papers and word has gone out that if any future attempts are made to annoy Miss Mahr before she recovers, the names of those persons and the nature of their visits will be published. It is also announced by the finance committee that if anyone has anything to sell to Miss Mahr, the committee is open to consultation at all times and will consider all business proposals. When Miss Mahr completely recovers and is in a condition to make arrangements for the future, she will be consulted by the finance committee as to the disposition of the fund.

finance committee as to the disposition of the fund.

To show the public spirit and liberality of the people of Portland, the Commercial Club yesterday mailed copies of the reports of the benefit peerformance and the accumulation of the benefit fund, with photographs of Miss Mahr in a wheel chair in the hospital garden, to all the dramatic publications in the United States.

A noteworthy change was inaugurated in Constable Lou Wagner's office yes-terday, when a bulletin was posted to the effect that notary fees due the Constable will be collected hereafter and turned into the Marjorie Mahr benefit fund. STREET MAY BE WIDENED Plan on Foot to Make Portion of Burnside 80 Feet in Breadth.

Burnside street is to be widened from 60 to 80 feet from Thirteenth street west to its intersection with Wash west to its intersection with Washington at Sixteenth, and also the width of Washington street from Sixteenth street to the point where it will intersect with the extension of Morrison street, will be increased to 80 feet, if the plans are favorably acted upon by the City Council. C. T. Wheeler, a property-owner on upper Washington street, filed the petition yesterday with the City Auditor.

The proposed changes in the streets, it is said, will be met with opposition

The proposed changes in the streets, it is said, will be met with opposition on the part of some of the property-owners who think that the project will prove too costly and that irreparable damage would be done to their buildings. The matter will be considered by the street committee of the City Council at its next meeting.

800 Olds. Wertman & King Employes Are Busy.

STUPENDOUS TASK ENDED

Goods Into New Building, Which Covers Whole City Block. New Features Amaze.

Twenty-five wagons were lined up on Alder street, stretching from West Park to Seventh, half a dozen big motor wagons chugged heavily back and forth and over 800 employes worked the new big store of Olds, Wortman & King ready for the informal opening at 1 o'clock today.

The store has already taken posses sion of its new premises. For weeks past hundreds of men have been laying tures and wonderful electric light fittings. They have spent weeks over this preliminary part of the work, but on Wednesday night the order went forth that everything saleable from the old store on Washington street was to be transferred to the building that stretches from Morrison to Alder and from West Park to Tenth.

Two days have passed. Last night a tired employe locked the big building on Washington street. "Everything, and everyone is up at the new store." he said.

These two days have made a record for Portland. While a line of perspiring men has been loading wagons, a crowd of men has been unloading at the other end of the line. "It could not be done." people said. But it has been done. And before noon today the hundreds of salespeople will be lined up behind their respective counters, the wrapping girls will be standing at their tables, and the young women whose duty it is to see the price of articles is mechanically stamped on the little slips will be at their patent cash registers.

Children to Be Amused.

Up on the fourth floor are sand boxes for the children to amuse them-selves with, the big slides and the sce-saw that is almost as big as a street-car will be ready so that the most worried mother will be able to take her children there and check them in the care of an attendant while she does her shopping.

the care of an attendant while she does her shopping.

The children have a great space to themselves, railings prevent them wandering over the store and there are enough new means of having a good time for every child to feel happy.

A couple of floors down are the rest rooms. Behind the rest rooms is the nursery and a door with a red cross. Here will be beds with a trained nurse in attendance to take care of emergency cases which may occur. These will be treated right in the building. Next door is the nursery. It is not ready yet, but in a few days there will be a trained nurse in attendance to nurse fretful babies while the young mother buys the baby garments.

All through the building the visitor stumbles on unique things. There is the apparatus, for instance, which automatically tells the sales clerk whether your financial character is good. Impossible? Oh, no.

Credit System Prompt.

Let it be assumed you desire to have a purchase charged. The clerk takes off a telephone receiver. "Mrs. Robert Jones. $5.60," she says, and promptly hangs up. At the same time she sticks your bill in an attachment fixed to the side of the telephone.

In a few minutes a click will come.
The young clerk removes the slip, looks at the back and decides whether or not you are to be given credit.
To discover how it is done, the fourth floor, where the offices are, has to be approached. In a little room half a In a little room half a dozen girls are seated at a small tele-phone exchange. On racks around the rooms are series of cards with names, and the sum for which customers may credit. The telephone secure credit. The telephone girl glances at these, presses an electric button, and, presto! the thing is done. There is a wonderful tearoom in mo-sale and white.
