Husband of Dead Joyrider Confirms Description of Clothing as That of His Wife-Rings Are Still on Fingers.

All dispute as to whether Mabel Monto and Prisco Day cloped, or whether they drowned in the Columbia River were drowned in the Columbia River when their automobile plunged off the trestle near the Vancouver ferry, is at an end. The body of the girl has been found near Kelso.

A fisherman on Cottonwood Island reported to Coroner Bird at Kelso yesterday that his children had discovered a body on the shore. Investigation showed that it was the body of a woman apparently between 25 and 25 years old. The description of the clothing upon the body tallied in every detail with that given by the husband of the drowned girl, who is employed by the local Fire Degiven by the husband of the drowned girl, who is employed by the local Fire Department. According to Coroner Bird, the lower portion of the body is covered by a dark gray slik skirt containing white polka dots. About the neck is a black slik cord. The hair is light brown. Short kild gioves upon the hands have two clasps each, both of which were fastened.

Ring Is Described. Upon the ring finger of the left hand is a narrow gold ring, with an oblong set, about a half inch by a quarter of an inch. This is of very dark stone or glass, and in it is engraved a man's head and helmet. The band of the ring is about a sixteenth of an inch wide. Upon the feet are very high, French heel shoes, size about No. 3, of undressed kid. They are of the button kind, with seven or eight straps across each.

The Coroner could not tell last night whether or not any of the bones had been broken, but will make a more minute examination this morning, when the body will be taken to Kelso

Since the awful accident in which Mabe Monto and Frisco Day plunged into the swirling waters of the Columbia to their death, the woman's body has been washed down stream 36 miles.

Cottonwood Island, where the body was found, is about five miles due south of Kelso, just opposite Carrollton, Wash. The body was found lodged in the branches of a tree, which had drifted upon the bank three or four feet above e water at its present stage. Friday night, June 10, Mabel Monto and Frinco Day were drinking in downtown cafes. About 11 o'clock they left Tice Adkins' resort at Sixth and Stark streets in the automobile driven by Day, for Vancouver. Adkins bade them good night. An officer saw them on the Burnside bridge 16 or 15 minutes later and side bridge 10 or 15 minutes later and told the Monto woman that Day was too drunk to be trusted with the machine. She did not heed his advice and the two went merrily on. That was the last seen

Ex-President Climbs to Breakers and Gathers Grime as Boys Talk.

SEES GIRLS IN SILK MILLS

Identity Is Hidden Long as Possible, as He Learns of Life in Anthracite Coal Region-Crowds

Form When Recognized.

SCRANTON, Pa. Aug. 3.—Theodore Roosevelt spent the day in Dickson County among the workers in the heart of the Pennsylvania anthracite region. While the real object of his trip is not known, it is said he intends to write a story descriptive of the fileds.

He met and talked with the men who dig coal, as they came from the mines, black with grime. He talked with them about their homes, their children and about their homes, their children and their manner of living and learned from their own lips how they look at life. He climbed to the top of a coal breaker and spent half an hour there in the stifling coal dust so that he might see what the boys who work there have to do.

Black With Grime, but Smiling.

He spent another half hour in a sill mill, taiking with the girl workers. He plodded two miles through the dust, up hills and in all manner of places, and he returned to Scranton as evening was drawing near, black with grime, but smiling with delight at his experiences. Many of the toilers had no idea of the ex-President's identity, which he took care to conceal when possible, until after he had finished his talk.

Meeting Jake Kavanaugh, a miner, walking down the street, Colonel Roosevelt stopped him, saying:
"I want to go home and talk with you," and Kavanaugh agreed.

They welked up a side street to a small frame house with most of the paint worn off. Kavanaugh led the Colonel in and sat him down on the porch. Then he went inside and brought ut Mrs. Kavanaugh and the two little

Good Housekeeper Praised.

It was at the noon hour, so that Kavanaugh had time to talk with the ex-President, who spent half an hour there. He went inside the house, looked ex-President, who spent hair an four there. He went inside the house, looked at the small, nest rooms and complimented Mrs. Kavanaugh on her proficiency as a housekeeper. Then all hands went back to the porch, where the talk concerned mine life in general. Everybody soon became aware of Mr. Roosevelt's presence and the whole population rushed out to see him. Mr. Roosevelt tore himself away from the crowd at last and, turning from the main street, walked up the hill. At the top of the hill is clustered a group of ugly black buildings at the mouth of a mine. As he walked up, Isaiah Jenkins pattered down, barefoot, in the dust. Jenkins is a miner. He had no coat, no hat, no shoes. He had just come from the mine and was black with dust. Colonel Roosecvelt stopped him and the men shook hands. Jenkins offered to show him the breakers and the Colonel accepted.

Breaker-Boys Tell Story.

They climbed three flights of stairs to a dizzy height and reached the top of the chute. Colonel Roosevelt found three breaker boys, who kept on sort-ing the slate from the coal as they of the Ruth Trust Company, another three breaker boys, who kept on sorting knew of the accident until the following mothing, when a member of a ancouver car crew noticed that the silling had been carried away.

NO SEAT. NO FARE AGITATED

Initiative Petition Circulated-Unconstitutional, Says Josselyn.

An initiative petition is in circulation for an ordinance to be placed upon the ballot next June compelling the Port-land Railway, Light and Power Company to give every passenger a seat on its cars on the "no seat, no fare" basis. The attention of President Josseiyn was drawn to this last night.

"Such an ordinance would be most unconstitutional," he said. unconstitutional, he said. We obtained our franchise to transport people and not to give them seats. While we wish to give everyone a seat, it plainly is impossible.

"I do not think people will be attracted by petitions of this nature, which are clearly designed to fill up the ballot." The petitions were given birth by the action of the Central Labor Council, a week ago, indorsing the action of the Building Trades Council, which in-dorsed the "no seat, no fare" ordinance, and putting up the money to have the measure placed on the ballot.

OLD PREACHERS' HAVEN One Clergyman Wants Job as Watchman or Timekeeper.

Pittsburg Gazette-Times

Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

That clergyman who is advertising in New York for a position as watchman or timekeeper shows his practical common sense. There are not enough pulpits to go around, and so instead of waiting indefinitely for a "call" and then running the chance of being located somewhere in the backwoods on a starvation salary, he has decided to hunt a job. He proves his pluck, but his plight provides a sharp commentary on the kind of provision a great denomination makes for its faithful workers. This minister has served 20 years as a missionary in foreign lands. Two years ago he came to the United States from South America, hoping to do "wonderful things in this wonderful country. But I found that missionaries are not sought here and that the churches are over-supplied with pastors. I have

But there can be no doubt that he will do better pecuniarily by taking a job as watchman than by continuing in his profession. The average watchman gets higher wages than the average clergyman, and if he proves faithful he is likely to be better taken care of by his employer. One cannot soon forget the statement made by a speaker of authority at a recent religious conference: "An old horse receives better ence: "An old horse receives better treatment when his working days are over than the old minister." Old clergymen, sober, loyal and brave, should make ideal watchmen. Per-haps more of them will take the hint
