Attorney for Big Oregon Timber Concern Declares $18,000,000 Would Not Buy Out Minnesota Man's Holdings in Oregon.

The C. A. Smith Timber Company The C. A. Smith Timber Company has just completed the flotation of a $1,560,600 bond issue to be used for the extension of the Smith mill at Marshfield, the reforestation of the logged-off lands belonging to the company in Cocs County and a general improvement in logging conditions and work, according to Frank Alley, of Reseburg, one of the attorneys for the timber cencern.

"The bond issue is made up of $500 bonds, bearing interest at five per bonds, bearing interest at five per cent," he said. Mr. Alley denies the sale of the company's Oregon hold-lags. "They are serial bonds, by which is meant a certain percentage will be retired every year, the last bond being paid back 28 years from date. The issue was sold at par, which, in the present state of the bend market, speaks unusually well for the security offered.

The Issue was floated by McGrath and Neuhausen, of Portland, who induced three Eastern concerns to take up the issue. Representing the bond company, Judge Barthell and a Mr. O'Connor, of Nashville, Tenn. came here and visited the county seats of the counties in which the Smith properties are located for the purpose of thoroughly inspecting the abstracts of the property."

Government Forester Employed.

The Government was induced to release one of its head foresters, said Mr. Alley last night, for the purpose of taking charge of the reforestation. This work would be proceeded with

Mr. Alley asserted Judge Barthell and Mr. O'Connor visited John McCourt. United States District Attorney, and learned from him that no further acwas contemplated against the Smith properties.

Smith properties.

Mr. Alley denied the report that the Smith holdings had been sold for $6,000,000. "Three times $6,000,000 would not purchase these holdings," he said. Operating their own lines of steamers and their own mills, as well as their own logging companies. The C. A. Smith Timber Company, as the parent company, is probably at the head of the largest timber concern in Oregon. The holdings amount to about 200,000 acres, 100,000 alone being in Line County.

The report made by the Tennessee attorners was, however, thoroughly satisfactory, according to Mr. Alley.

F. A. Kribs, of Fortland, representing the Smith interests, left Saturday r Victoria, where he purposes going to the purchase of some coal and nber lands. Mr. Neuhausen returned Portland last night and confirmed a report of the bond issue on the mith property.

The Smith mill at Marshfield is said to be the largest in the world. With a line of steamers the Smith concern as a large slice of the export business in the said that the bond issue ness and it is said that the bond issue

THE DALLES, Or., Aug. 14-(Special.) Roy Taylor, a prosperous young farmer lying south of town in the Dry Hollow thatrict, was thrown from his wagon reserring and injured so hadly that he ever regained consciousness and died at

With Chris McClay, a well-driller, he had loaded a derrick and other well-drilling appartus on a wagon and started to move it. As they were driving down a grade on the Three-mile road, the brake broke and threw the weight on the horses. McClay jumped and shouted to Taylor to jump, but Taylor hung to the lines and turned the horses toward the bank, but the load tipped over. Taylor was taken to The Dalles Hospital for care but did not recover consciousness.

He leaves a wife and one child, besides many other relatives in this city.

Rie Clamshell Digger Is Set Up of Improvised Barge-Sandy Formation Makes Use Possible.

Active work upon the west side abutment of the O. R. & N. bridge will begin this morning and will be carried formarked the building of the east abutment. A novelty in bridge construction will be the digging, on dry land, of the excavation for the big abutment by a clamshell dredger.

One of these powerful machines has been set up on an improvised barge which rests on the stringers of the old Alaska dook. The sandy formation of the river bank and the large amount of seepage from the river makes pos-sible the use of the digger, which will greatly facilitate the digging of the excavation.

excavation.

The work will be hampered for a time by the presence of the old dock piles, among which the clamshell must find narrow passages, but as the earth is drawn away from the piles they will be drawn out, after which the work can proceed much faster. The first excavation will be made on the wing of the abutment, which will lead down from the railroad dock. The abutment when completed will be somewhat fanshaped, giving approach to railroad is for the purpose of putting the con-cern on a footing that will enable it to defy competition. Captain John Jensen Takes Out Pilot Schooner for Service on Bar.

With the appointment of Captain John Jensen to command the Port of Portland's bar pilot schooner, that vessel will again resume her position off the mouth of the river, tomorrow, after being laid up some time for lack of a commander. While the necessity for the schooner's being on her station has not been pressing, owing to the fact that few vessels requiring pilotage have been due to arrive here, the port officials will be glad to have the Pulitzer again at work, as there will be plenty of business for her soon and the coming of bad weather

FEAR OF HUSBAND GIVEN AS CAUSE OF SHOOTING.

Mrs. A. W. Benjamin Says Blows Were Her Portion--Man Shows No Sign of Improvement.

Shattered nerves and continual fear of bodily harm are believed by the police to be among the causes that prompted the shooting of A. M. Ben-jamin by his wife in the family apart-ments, 693 Johnson street, Saturday night. Mrs. Benjamin declares that her hus night.

Mrs. Benjamin declares that her husband came home in an intoxicated condition and began to swear and strike at her as soon as he entered the room. He struck at her several times, she says, and threatened to injure her bodily. She became so nervous and frightened that she says she did not know what she was doing when she secured the revolver and shot her husband. As she saw him fall she says she came to a realization of the deed, and, in order to calm herself, she decided to take a drink of whisky. She at once telephoned to the Sheriff's office that she had shot her husband. Mrs. Benjamin also called up The Oregonian by telephone to tell of the shooting.

Mrs. Benjamin said yesterday that her husband was not talking at the telephone when the shooting occurred, but that he had called her up over the telephone just prior to his coming home.

These were the circumstances which telephone just prior to his coming home.

These were the circumstances which Mrs. Benjamin related to Chief of Detectives Moore late yesterday after she had spent a day of ravings and severe illness. She had regained normal composure when speaking of the shooting. When further questioned she said that her husband had frequently given her beatings and had otherwise maltrented her. She declared that Benjamin was intimate with other women and had often neglected her for them.

During her residence in Portland she said that she had worked out as a seamstress a large part of the time, and had helped to make the living. She denied that she was addicted to the use of intoxicants of any kind, adding that she could not have done much sewing had she been given to the deficers that habit.

It is the opinion of the officers that Mrs. Benjamin did not exaggerate the facts in connection with the case, and, from the investigation made yesterday, her version of the shooting seems to have considerable weight.

Chief of Detectives Moore endeavored to get a statement from Benjamin last evening, but the husband, although conscious, was too weak to talk. At times during the day vesterday Benjamin's condition was considered critical, and the patient showed signs of improvement last night.
