ATHLETE GILBERT HERE

FAMOUS OREGON POLEVAULTER RENEWS ACQUAINTANCES.

One-time Member of Champion American Olympic Team Is Now Giving Joy to Children.

Alfred C. Gilbert, the famous Pacific University pole vaulter who recently completed his studies at Yale University, was in Portland for a few hours yesterday renewing old acquaintances and combining business with pleasure. He left last night for California.
Gilbert was a member of the champion American Olympic team which won so many honors at London in 1908, and was one of the trio of Oregon athletes who made a triumphant tour of the United States preparatory to being given a royal welcome in Portland in September, 1908. He is now engaged in the top manufacturing business at New Haven, Conn., and while in Portland closed a deal with a large department store for the exclusive handling of the output in this city. Gilbert has been most successful in business, and while he is a graduate physician and surgeon, he has not practiced because of

RAIN BREAKS DRY SPELL

JUPITER PLUVIUS STAYS AWAY FROM PORTLAND 52 DAYS.

When Within Five Days of Longest Period Without Precipitation, Fall of .05 Inch Is Recorded.

Belated suburbanites, who yesterday morning noted traces of what appeared to be a heavy dew, were somewhat surprised at nine o'clock to witness a downpour that terminated a dry spell of 52 days, which was within five days of the longest period of the kind in 35 years.
Annals of the local Weather Bureau fail to indicate a season when more than 57 days were passed without "J. Pluvius" having had an inning. In 1883 there was no rain from June 5 to July 31, but the interruption of yesterday was a local affair and extended principally along the Coast from British Columbia.
As harvesting is in full swing in the wheat belts there are no longer strong petitions from those districts for rain, but in the Willamette Valley and more local territories, produce growers wel-
