TARIFF VIEWS UNCHANGED

Speaker Regards This as Last Political Stand-Country, He Says, Must Continue to Care for Kansas, as in Past.

CISSNA PARK, III., Aug. 17 .-- (Spe eial.)-"Uncie Joe" Cannon today began what he expects will be his last campaign for election to Congress from the district which he has reprefrom the district which he has the as a sented for so many years, and as a representative from which he has risen from the position of an obscure coun-try lawyer to be one of the command-ing figures in American—even in world's politics.

Spenker Cannon began his campaign Speaker Cannon began his campaign for renomination here today with a speech to the old settlers of Iroquois County, assembled for their annual re-union. His address was a description of the contrast between the old times and the new and his references to the and the new and has references to the day great political questions of the day were indirect. Through it all ran a note of defiance to the forces that have already stripped him of much of his power and that are laying plans to re-lieve him of the last vestige when Congress reconvenss.

Address Breathes Defiance.

Declaring that he did not "long for the good old days" he indicated that he would die as he has lived-a "stand-patter" from the ground up. The per-oration, the last two paragraphs of his offense were worken as his most strutt. address, was perhaps his most signif cant utterance of the day, n closing

"My children and grandchildren and your children and grandchildren have a common lot in the general prosperity or the lack of it. In the goodly State of Indiana, in the goodly State of Illinois. In the goodly State of Ohio and in a? this great Central West, with a popula-tion of which this audience to which I am speaking is a fair example, we not only have to take care of ourselves, but we have to take care of the demagogue e have to take care of the demagogue

And while Kansas will take care of itself for two years to come, at least, we have got to take care of it as we have taken care of it heretofore for the last 10 years of its history."
