SUBSIDY IS BLAMED

Wrong Merchant Marine Plan, Says Norwegian.

BIG COMPANIES BENEFIT

Captain O. Lange Tells of System in Norway. Where Shipping Laws Are Good--Says Doors Should Be Thrown Open to All.

"Ship subsidy is nonsense. There is no excuse for it. If the Government should appropriate a great sum only a few of the big companies would get any of it. It would not help the little fellows and middle men, who need help."
The foregoing is the opinion of Captain O. Lange, of New York, who represents 15 or 16 different insurance clubs in the United States, having charge of the business on both the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts. He represents 15 or 16 different insurance clubs and is now making a tour of the Pacific Coast in their interests. Mrs. Lange is accompanying her husband on the trip and they are now staying at the Portland Hotel.
"Norway holds fourth place in the world's merchant marine and not one ship has been subsidized," said Captain Lange. "If it costs too much to build a ship in the United States throw the bars down and allow the builders to buy in the cheapest market. A ship subsidy is nonsense. I believe in removing all barriers and let each fellow take care of himself. Norway is a small nation, but it has given good account of itself particularly in the shipping business, and it has not given protection or subsidy to any one."
"If it costs 50 to 75 per cent more to build a ship in the United States than elsewhere, a subsidy to make up the difference is not the remedy. It would only help a few big companies. The middle men would gain nothing. On the contrary they would be injured, for they would be placed in competition with Government subsidized ships and eventually be shut out. An American ship may be manned with foreign crews, if they are cheaper, so the ship subsidy would do no good on that account. Foreign laws are more favorable to shipping than those of the United States, and for that reason many United States ships are going

Brown's Band Gives Its Last Public Concert

Unusually Large Audience Appreciates Fine Music in City Park.

THE last of the series of public band concerts by Brown's Band was given yesterday afternoon at the City Park. An unusually large audience had gathered early in the afternoon to listen to the delightful musical treat, and the benches were crowded to capacity long before the final number. The opening selection was the "March" from Wagner's "Tannhauser," a stirring martial air that makes its appeal to all whether musically inclined or otherwise. This was followed by "Tales From Vienna Woods," a subtle melody with delicate shadings from the master of waltz music, Strauss. Again a Wagner number was presented, this time the "Overture" from "Tannhauser." Then came the always popular and beautiful sextet number from Donizetti's opera "Lucia." So insistently was this selection applauded that the band, always generous with its encores, gave Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," which is probably one of the best beloved of the march king's compositions.
Next followed excerpts from De Koven's charming "Robin Hood." A number of special beauty and most pretentious as played by the members of Brown's Band was the suite of three selections, the German, Spanish and Russian numbers from Moszkowski's "From Foreign Lands." This number as well as the one immediately following, Wagner's "Scenes From Lohengrin" were particularly beautiful as rendered by these musicians, and the applause was most spontaneous and appreciative. Two numbers from Tchaikovsky followed. The first of these "Hungarian Fantasia" was a rippling, light melody that brought smiles and tapping of feet in its train. The other was a potpourri of National airs, that embraced in an especially harmonious and pleasing effect all of the patriotic and consequently beloved anthems of America. This collection brought into evidence much individual talent by members of the musical organization and the ensemble effects were as if the tones rolled from one big organ. "The Star Spangled Banner" closed the programme.

DISEASE FOILS ALL

Infantile Paralysis Puzzles Oregon Physicians.

ONE CASE REPORTED HERE

City Health Officer Orders Child Isolated and Advises Portland Parents to Watch Their Children and Notify Family Doctors.
Infantile paralysis, one of the most perplexing afflictions that medical science has been called upon to combat, has not taken hold in Oregon. It has in other states. But one case is reported in Portland. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, the deadly disease has been sporadic. It has almost assumed epidemic form in certain localities while near by communities have escaped without a single case. No connecting link of the widely scattered disease has been found. It springs up in isolated localities the same as in congested communities. Science knows no way of preventing it, knows no cure, has not discovered even a logical theory of what the disease is. About all science knows is that infantile paralysis attacks children and that the mortality rate is about 50 per cent.
Oregon Has Been Fortunate.
The records show that Oregon has been fortunate, or there is some peculiarity of climate, water, vegetation, mineral properties in the earth that repels the disease. On either side of Oregon, infantile paralysis has been more epidemic and more fatal than in this state. While the disease appears to be more prevalent in most states this year than heretofore, there have been fewer cases and fewer deaths in Oregon than last year.
Dr. Calvin S. White, secretary of the state board of health, has been keeping a close watch on the disease in this state. He has been collecting all the data available on each case, along with the views of the attending physicians, in an attempt to aid medical science in finding the cause of the disease and a cure for it. Yesterday he received a letter from the surgeon-general of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, of Washington, D. C., requesting information about the disease in this state and a report on all cases. Dr. W. K. Lovett,

WOMAN PREACHER WEDS

BROTHER OF GROOM, ALSO MINISTER, TALKS ON LOVE.

Church of God Workers Hold Services at Which Instruction Is Given on "Life Honeycomb."

B. H. Neald and Hazel G. Greenstreet, both preachers in the Church of God, were married at the chapel of that denomination, 261 Failing street, yesterday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George Neald, a brother of the bridegroom. The latter recently came to Portland from the East. Both Mr. Neald and his wife intend to continue in the ministry. She has been in the missionary home of the Church of God for the last three years, and is a contributor to the "Gospel Trumpet," a denominational paper. The bride is 21 years old, the same age as her husband.
Before the ceremony was performed, Rev. George Neald preached a sermon on "Love," in which he said "kissing doesn't bring love, but that love brings kissing." He was heartily in favor of both. He said a married man should not ask his wife if she loves him. "It is all right for your wife to tell you she does," he said, "but it is not right to demand it. The best way is to win it."
"Some men speak of their wives after marriage as the 'old woman,' the 'old hen,' or the 'old duck,'" he continued. "Shame on the man who will thus disrespect the wife of his bosom! If he had treated her that way while he was courting he would have felt the sole of her father's boot. That's just what some people need."
The courtship should not cease after persons are married. The honeymoon of the first month ought to continue through life. The same thing it took to make the first month happy and sweet will make the second, and the third and the fourth, and so on through life. If you treat your wife as you should she will love you, and if she treats you kindly you cannot help loving her. Our common people need this.

Infantile Paralysis Puzzles Oregon Physicians.

ONE CASE REPORTED HERE

A noted physician of Boston and a member of the board of state health commissioners of Massachusetts, has also written to Dr. White for local information concerning the disease.
"We don't know what the disease is, what causes it or how to cure it," said Dr. White. "We know that it is not caused by the same thing or the same conditions, and that is about all. We know of no way of preventing it or recovering from it. We will be on guard against it. It has baffled science."
"The first symptoms closely resemble typhoid fever. Primarily the spinal cord is affected. Then the front muscles of the legs. From the legs it goes up the body and when it affects the respiratory muscles it is fatal. It is known that the disease is communicative and I would suggest that all children showing symptoms, and especially pronounced cases, be isolated the same as they should be on account of measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, or any other contagious disease."
Disease Tried on Monkeys.
"Dr. Flexner, of New York, produced the disease in a monkey by injecting fluid from the spinal cord of a child that was afflicted in the spinal cord of the monkey. Then he took the fluid from the monkey's spinal cord and injected it into the spinal cord of another monkey. The monkey died. The experiment until four monkeys were thus inoculated and had the disease. But he found no germ or cure."
"I know of no reason why Oregon has fewer cases than other states. Last year there were nine deaths out of 13 or 20 cases. This year there have only been 16 cases and the death rate is lower. There are now four cases of infantile paralysis at Hermiston, six at Heppner and four or five in the vicinity of Coos Bay. It usually attacks children between the ages of 5 and 15 years."
A case of infantile paralysis at the home of Peter Wygant, 722 East Seventh street north, was reported yesterday to the city health department. Dr. C. H. Wheeler, city health officer, ordered the child isolated. The child has been ill several days, but yesterday showed marked improvement and it probably will recover.
Dr. Wheeler advises parents to watch their children closely and, if signs of illness appear, to immediately notify the family physician. Beyond this first step and isolation he can offer nothing.
Vancouver Lad Bitten by Dog.
VANCOUVER, Wash., Aug. 21--(Special.)--Mrs. A. M. Downing and her little son were walking along a street here yesterday when a brindle bull pup, which was lying on the sidewalk, jumped up and severely bit the little fellow. Officer Gasway and Constable George Thompson happened to see the attack and killed the dog.
