PIONEER'S LIFE IS WORTHY.

Work of Mrs. Mary Holman in Many Lines of Usefulness.

Mrs. Mary E. Holman, who died at the home of her son, Herbert Holman, in this city, on Friday last, was a prominent figure in Oregon affairs.

She was born in Indiana, October 22, 1828, being the youngest child of Benjamin Huntington, who brought his family across the plains to Oregon in 1832.

At the age of 18 years she was married to Charles Holman, a pioneer settler in Oregon, who was one of the first transportation companies to place boats on the local rivers.

As a member of the Episcopal Church she was one of the ablest and most helpful supporters of the late Bishop Scott, the first missionary bishop of the church in Oregon, and through her influence connected with St. Stephen's Church parish.

She had a direct feeling of patriotism, and in due course offered her husband's name for the Revolutionary War, and a close relative of Samuel Huntington, who signed the Declaration of Independence.

She was a member of the Oregon Pioneer Association and was interested in the Oregon Historical Society.

Although a woman of strong and forceful character, she was much beloved for her tender and womanly qualities.

Her loving service was always freely given to neighbors or friends in times of illness or trouble. Her days were filled with unselfish acts of charity and kindness, and she was the center of a happy family life and altogether a type of ideal womanhood.

She was the mother of five sons and five daughters, of whom the following survive her: Mrs. H. W. Oakley, of Berkeley, Cal.; Mrs. J. A. Marjorie, and Miss Carrie Holman and Herbert, Charles, William C., Benjamin and Rufus C. Holman, all of this city.

New Bills Open at the Vaudeville Houses

Orpheum.

THE bill at the Orpheum this week is good with the exception of the opening number. A baggage smasher may have broken in the head of the drum played by one of the Mullini trio, and he might be held responsible on the grounds of contributory negligence.

The other young lady who plays a drum, cornet, saxophone and other instruments detracts from her talent with an affectedness that causes the female portion of the audience to turn up their noses. The gray-haired patriarch, who plays sweet melodies on a saxophone, redeems the act.

The Four Rianos wake up the audience and convince it that all the talent in vaudeville has not been exhausted. Besides good acrobatic stunts, the two human monkeys play their parts well and are realistic and funny in their imitations of Darwin's original man.

Johnny Small and His Small Sisters are very pleasing and clever. They know how to dance, introduce stunts that are original, work hard and their efforts are appreciated by the audience.

Covington and Wilbur, in their sketch, "The Parsonage," in which Covington plays a pious character and Miss Wilbur three, have an old-fashioned cottage setting that is in a class by itself. The rapid changes necessary to play the triple and quadruple roles are made without disconnecting the act. The entire act is well played and staged and carries a moral with it.

"High Life in Jail" depicts a scene that may have been the life dream of a crook. It is a good farce in which convicts enjoy the modern conveniences and social life of an "ideal prison."

The bellhop, who is the butt of the comedian's demands of the prisoners are typical of exactions by fastidious guests at any first-class hotel 365 days in the year.

Johnny and Barron break away from the hackneyed dialogue, getting back to more realism in their sketch, "After the Reception." The gangling and hunched face of one, and the pudgy maintenance of the other, with a more natural dialect, keeps the audience in laughter.

Tameness, who closes the bill, does some of the trickiest and disappearing and appearing acts. His illusions are clever and as mystifying as any that were ever produced on the stage.

The Grand.

THERE is a good all-round bill at the Grand this week, with Emmet De Voe and company in "The Saintry Mr. Billings," as the feature act.

The farce is from Mr. De Voe's own pen, and promotes laughter from beginning to end. Mr. De Voe, as Mr. Billings, depicts a young man who, leading a rather Bohemian life, is trying to impress his uncle, from whom he receives an allowance, as being a more "saintry" and devout young man.

Complications arise, from which Mr. Billings tactfully extricates himself, and everything ends well. Mr. De Voe is in "Dreamland" fame, and will be remembered by Portland theatergoers as the star of that play.

Manuel Roman, the well-known minstrel tenor, and Sadie Palmer and Roxie La Roco, present a sketch which is a musical oddity, "Before and After the Ball." Mr. Roman sings with ease and richness of voice, and Mr. La Roco brings rounds of applause with his melodious rendition of the harp.

Some new and daring bicycle feats are performed by Grey and Peters. The merry madcap, Bookman and Gros, please the audience with their character songs and dances, even though some of their songs are a little out-of-date.

Williams and Westing, "The German Aristocrats," cause considerable mirth with their jokes and songs. Zerell Brothers hold the attention of the audience in their brilliant, festive, exhibiting wonderful strength.

The grandioso brings the show to a close with a series of scenes which are good.

Lyric.

THE big feature at the Lyric this week is Ed Armstrong, manager of the Armstrong Musical Comedy Company, appearing on the stage. It has been a long time since Armstrong was on the boards, but he indicated yesterday he has forgotten how to behave himself in front of an audience.

"A Scotch Highball" demanded two tramps who look alike. There is no resemblance between Will Armstrong and Gus Leonard, or at least the likeness is not so close that an expert could not tell one from the other, so Ed Armstrong was obliged to rescue the show with his personal appearance.

The farce is a laughable one, in which Leonard, as Mr. Jerico, demands that his daughter, Polly, Miss Ethel Davis, marry Sir Clancy McPherson, who is Ed Mitchell off the stage. Polly objects to the arrangement, and her sister, Bella, Miss Clara Howard, comes to the rescue by persuading two tramps, Ed and Will Armstrong, who are caught ransacking the house, to play the part of Scottish noblemen in such ridiculous manner that old man Jerico rescinds his order and allows Polly to marry Jack. Of course, Will Howard takes the part of this Lothario.

The chorus comes on with new songs, "Portland for Mine," written by Manager Armstrong, specially making a hit with the audience.

JILTED SUITOR ARRESTED.

He Tries to Recover Solitaire and Girl Charges Him With Larceny.

When Ed Fisher's term of service as the probationary beau of Elise Sauer was out, and he was informed that he wouldn't do, he demanded back the diamond ring, by which he had sought to link the future of Elise with his own. Thence arose charges of assault and battery and of larceny, to which Fisher must answer before Justice Bell.

Fisher had made many visits to the Sauer residence at 746 Hood street, and in due course offered her hand to the young woman. The hand was accepted conditionally, but there appears to have been no saving clause attached to the acceptance of the ring. Fisher underwent family scrutiny, and so did the ring. The ultimate conclusion reached was that Fisher was impossible, but that the ring was not to be returned.

Fisher insisted that hand and ring were inseparable parts of one transaction, and in the altercation that ensued, laid hands upon his former betrothed, kintly, he says. It is also charged that in an effort to recover his diamond, Fisher seized the family jewel casket and lugged away two rings. He denied taking the jewelry.

OPTIMISTIC

What a great thing a little rain is! How it brightens things up, cheers and encourages everybody. The smoke has gone, the forest fires will die out, all will be well again. And soon the busiest part of a busy year will be upon us, or we will be in "the midst" of it. Portland never looked better than today, her people were never more optimistic, buying and selling, bargaining and exchanging—never better bargainers, keeps the half of our city from changing hands. And we feel mighty optimistic about our Banner Acres property. We know we have the best acreage on this market, we know it is priced too low, but we wish to sell a few more superb homesites to a few critical buyers—real homemakers. Our price now is $100 per acre, the very low is $150 per acre. Let us show it to you.

Remember we have moved! Note the new location.

A New Gold Field in British Columbia

A rich gold quartz vein has been discovered on Grouse Creek, Cariboo District, B. C., where $90,000,000 (Ninety Million Dollars) has already been taken out of gravel. The lode is six feet wide, and pans gold so freely that wages can be made by sluicing decomposed quartz. This is a tunnel proposition, no sinking or hoisting, and a motor car can be run from Ashcroft Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, to within a mile of the property. We have acquired the two original locations of one hundred acres on both sides of Grouse Creek, and have formed a syndicate to take over the property. No money is to be paid for property until it is developed and ore is sight.

Get in on the ground floor and make an investment which promises to return you $30.00 for every dollar invested. Apply for information and shares to CHARLES F. LAW, Broker P. O. Box 116, Room 7, Bank of British North America Building, Vancouver, B. C.
