

'TRAIT' CANDIDATES AT JACK ASSEMBLY

Crowd at Armory Hears Malarkey and McGinn and Applauds Their Words.

OTHERS ARE SIDETRACKED

Crowd Refuses to Remain After McGinn Finishes at 11 o'clock and Files Out, Despite Attempts to Hold People Longer.

Anti-assembly Republicans formally opened their primary campaign at the Armory Saturday night. The attendance sufficed to pack the spacious drill hall, there being approximately 250 people on hand.

The speakers of the evening were Dan J. Malarkey, candidate for joint State Senator, and Henry E. McGinn, candidate for Circuit Judge. Both took up campaign issues, outlining their views upon the present political situation and vigorously assailing the assembly. Their reception by the gathering was enthusiastic and applause interrupted them every few minutes.

Other speakers were on the program, but they were nearly all crowded when Mr. McGinn finished. Then, despite the calls for order, the gathering arose in a body and departed. Many assembly members were in attendance, but the majority were in accord with the speakers as indicated by the applause.

Malarkey First Speaker.

Mr. Malarkey was the first speaker and since he had not been heard before, he was allowed the greater portion of the time. He talked for an hour and a half on campaign issues, going over the National situation as well as the local field. He was introduced as a "real champion of the people whose excellent work in legislatures of the past had revealed the fact that he had the best interests of the people at heart."

"The greatest anti-assembly Republican of this country is not a resident of Oregon," Malarkey said in his opening. "Neither is he a resident of Oregon or of the West, but of the State of New York. He is the greatest private citizen of the present generation who has awakened the public conscience, the man who is opposed to special privileges—and his name is Theodore Roosevelt. In his private life he has made the country he has been making a most excellent set of anti-assembly people democracy."

"And we hear," the speaker added, "that the honestest of the people are threatening to read Mr. Roosevelt out of the Republican party and for the same reasons that Seneca Beach, Max Cohen, Charles Lockwood and the other self-appointed guardians of the Republican party in Multnomah County are threatening to rule us out of the party for our stand for the direct primary law."

Statement No. 1 Supported.

Taking up the subject of Statement No. 1 the speaker said: "It would be a step backward for the people to give up Statement No. 1 and endanger the integrity of the direct primary law as much so as to give up our system of registration and our balloting system, and go back to the methods of 25 years ago when voters were bought up at 12.50 apiece."

"I am a Republican," Mr. Malarkey announced. "But I am not one of those Republicans who would vote for a yellow dog because it happened to be on the ticket. I am a Republican but I am an American citizen before I am a Republican. I would rather be written down as a patriot than as a partisan."

People Not Represented.

"Before the direct primary law," he proceeded, "candidates were chosen at conventions. Experience has shown that these men do not represent the rank and file of their party but were dictated by bosses and represented those who had axes to grind at the expense of the common people. The direct primary law candidates go before a convention of all the people. The candidate is placed on his merits, he stands solely on his merits and wins or loses according to his merits."

"Under the old convention system no man, no matter how loyal to his party, could expect preferment from his party unless he was willing to go down to some office and bow his head and take the collar of the political machine."

Referring to what has already been accomplished through the direct primary law, he said: "Up to 1907 the people were unable to get a railroad commission provided for. The old regime wouldn't stand for it. I remember that in the Legislature of 1907 I tried to get a little bill through. It had been passed by me by a message of President Roosevelt to Congress. Railroad men were being worked as high as 20 hours a day until they would fall asleep in their cabs and could not distinguish a red light from a green. My bill was intended to prevent the railroad companies from working their trainmen more than 14 consecutive hours in a single day. But the corporations were at the Legislature. Do you think the bill was allowed to pass? It was not."

Railroad Bill Passes.

"Again in 1908 I tried to get the bill through. This time I mustered up a corporal's guard, but the outcome was the same as in 1907. The railroads did not want such a law. But in 1907 I tried again, and thank God we had a direct primary law. The bill was passed. And the one man who was corporation-saturated that he voted against it was Seneca C. Beach, the head and front of the assembly in Multnomah County."

"After a lengthy recital of political workings in the olden days, when seats in the Legislature were dealt in as commodities, he declared Mr. Malarkey said: "They're driven to the last ditch, these assembly fellows, and they're saying this is a Bourne movement. I have nothing personally against Bourne. He has the same right to run for the Senate two years from now that any of you here have. And no matter who is the choice of the people for Senator, I wish it understood that I will vote for him if I am in the Senate. Mr. Bourne had no more to do with my candidacy than a Hottentot chief in the wilds of Africa."

In closing he said that the efforts of the bosses to regain control should be met as an invasion with a foreign foe, and urged all present to see that a full vote of expression of the voters is given at the polls on September 24. After a brief interval Mr. McGinn was presented, and he proceeded at once to attack the assembly. "The assembly was held solely in the interests of corporate greed," said he, "it is corporate greed and corporate rapacity which unfortunately have ruled our land too long."

Referring to some of the men who were in the assembly he said: "Now there is W. D. Fenton, an able lawyer, who in his youthful days in Yamhill was a Democrat. But when the corporations caused him to change, for he was now a corporation man and he must be in line with the party which the party that was running things."

"Do you want Mr. Fenton to name a ticket for you? Do you want to stand up for the Southern Pacific to make a ticket for you? Then they have done it. They did it at the assembly."

Wilbur Called Hard Names.

"Then there was Ralph W. Wilbur, who is Ralph W. Wilbur. He is a pest. One of the damnable concerns in the world, the indemnity insurance companies which seek maligned employees and their widows. He is a man who charges that Ralph W. Wilbur and the companies he represents have even polluted the jury box and this is the indignity which helps elect candidates for the Assembly. Do you want to vote that insurance company's ticket for the office man? Do you want to vote that insurance company's ticket—and it includes Wallace McCannant and George H. Burnett. The greatest calamity that could come to Oregon is the destruction of crops, would be the elevation to the Supreme Court of Wallace McCannant. I do not oppose him because he is a corporation man, but because in the past ten years he has opposed every popular and liberal measure having as its purpose the curtailing of the corporate man's power. He has never known him I have never known him to show any evidence of having a heart. He has brain power but he has no heart power and the two must be combined to make a man."

McCannant Gets No Favors.

"Mr. McCannant asked me last night if I would support him if he asked the nomination. I will give the answer now. If you had 2000 nominations, Mr. McCannant, I would not support you for the Supreme bench of this state. "And there's another man who had a hand, Mr. Charles H. Carey. He is a most polished gentleman. In his profession he has no superior anywhere. He believes the people were put here to mourn and the corporations to glorify. He represents the railroads and the telephone and telegraph companies. He is the enemy for every measure for the good of the people."

Then there's another, Mr. George W. Stapleton. He came here from Washington, where he was a most splendid Democrat. But when he got into this neck of the woods and became a lumbermen's lawyer he suddenly began to fear that if we do not do away with the direct primary law we'll get Democrats into office."

Huston Offended, He Declares.

"And there is a gentleman named Huston. He's quite offended at what I have said about him, and says I am getting personal. He wants to get personal. I want to proclaim that by their fruits ye shall know them. He, too, was long an ardent Democrat. Then he became a corporation man and suddenly develops a fear that Democrats will get into office. And I mustn't overlook Mr. Franklin Griffith, the man who does the handy work around the Legislatures for the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company."

September 24 is a red letter day," said Mr. McGinn in concluding. "Upon that day it is to be decided whether the assembly shall select your candidates for the office. If it is, then you have given your birthright and haven't even got the mess of pottage."

The programme was supplemented with several musical numbers. John Callahan, Mrs. Fred L. Olsen and Frank D. Hennessy appearing as soloists.

KNODELL TAKEN AS JESTER

Home Rule Association Ridicules His Statement About Liquor Bills.

Members of the Greater Oregon Home Rule Association consider as a joke the letter of Rev. J. H. Knodell, president of the Anti-Saloon League, backing up the assertion of Rev. Clarence True Wilson that the home rule bill and the old "Reddy bill" are one and the same.

"Any man who can read plain English can see the vast difference between the bills," said H. C. McCallister, manager of the association, last night. "It requires no discipline of Blackstone to interpret the two bills. Any ordinary person of common school education may read the two bills and he will declare that there is not the slightest similarity between them. But to make sure there could be no technicalities in the home rule bill that would destroy its integrity, it is submitted that several of the best lawyers in the City of Portland, and they stake their reputations in opinions that there is no possible way of connecting it to harmonize with the Reddy bill."

"I am astonished that some of these nitred Oregoners' advocates should so far forget the honor of their party as to attempt to place their positions as to venture into this sort of comedy. One thing, at least, can be said of the imported advisers—they have enticed their campaign with a bit of humor which even the most charitable never thought them capable."

ADMIRAL REES TO RETIRE

Officer Served in Army in Youth and in Navy During Manhood.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Rear-Admiral Corwin H. Rees, a conspicuous figure in the Navy, will be placed on the retired list tomorrow on account of disability.

His career is unique in military annals in that he fought in the Volunteer Army during the Civil War, participated in the Spanish-American War, and subsequently took an active part in the Spanish-American War as an officer of the Navy.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Sept. 4.—(Special.)—E. Merle Fuller, 19 years old, who shot and killed J. H. Stewart at Ridgefield on the morning of June 22, pleaded not guilty before Judge McCaster in the Superior Court today. He will be tried at the October term of court.

SULLOWAY HAS CONTEST

First Direct Primary Marked by Lively Contests Among Republicans—Bass Fights Ellis for Governorship.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 4.—The issue between regular and "progressive" has been ably joined in the Republican ranks in the campaign for the primaries which will be held in New Hampshire on Tuesday, September 6. The campaign practically closed tonight.

Widepread interest has been displayed in this, the first statewide direct primary in the history of New England. The Democrats, with no rivalry for the principal nominations on their ticket, have shown little activity. The Republicans have had lively contests. The chief interest has centered in the contest between the "progressive" candidate for Governor, R. P. Bass, of Peterborough, and Colonel Bertram Ellis, of Keene, Mr. Bass has accused Mr. Ellis of being controlled by the corporations, which Mr. Ellis has denied.

MAN CREEPS 3 MILES

R. B. HAYSHURST ARRIVES IN CITY AFTER TRYING TIME.

He Goes Fishing, Loses Balance on Log, Falls, Fractures Bone and Crawls to Carline.

Crawling three miles with a broken leg dragging his body, R. B. Hayshurst, 48, of 487 Bidwell avenue, succeeded in reaching the vicinity of Riverside about 6 o'clock Saturday night and making his feeble pleas for assistance heard. Residents of that place found the young man lying exhausted in the road, his clothing grimy and ragged from contact with the stones and briars along his route, and the skin peeled from his face and hands because of his efforts to reach human habitations. He was brought to Portland on a late Oregon Water Power line car and his wounds attended to.

OLD-TIME HOTEL MAN DEAD

William Charles Harmar Passes During Stay at Seaside.

SEASIDE, Or., Sept. 4.—(Special.)—William Charles Harmar, an old hotel proprietor of Portland, died here suddenly this morning at 63. He left Portland with his daughter, Mrs. Q. B. Coldwell, two weeks ago and has resided at "The Pines" during his stay here. He ate a hearty dinner last night and retired in the best of health but called his daughter this morning about 6 and complained of pains in the muscles of his chest. A doctor was summoned immediately, but was unable to give aid.

1847, in Hertfordshire, England, and came to this country during his boyhood days. He had lived in Portland with his family for over 20 years, and was one of the pioneers in the hotel business there. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. O. B. Coldwell, with whom he resided, at 506 Spring street, Portland, and a son, Francis E. Harmar, who is in the electrical supply business in Portland. The body will be shipped to Portland tonight for burial.

IRISH RAILWAYS REFORM PLANNED

Chief Secretary for Emerald Isle to Formulate Bill To Purchase.

DOUBLIN, Sept. 4.—(Special.)—At last something is to be done to remedy the faults of the Irish railway system. He had become almost resigned to his fate when the report of the Vice-regal Commission came out recommending that an Irish authority should be instituted to acquire all the lines and work them as a single system, that there should be a railway board of four nominated and six elected directors, and that the purchase be effected by the issue of state guaranteed stock.

POPULAR CONTROL SOUGHT

Concentrated Management, Lower Charges, Among Main Proposals.

Now, we are further cheered by hearing that Chief Secretary Augustine Birrell will take early steps to give effect to the proposals, or at any rate part of them if they are too sweeping for immediate adoption. Any deficit in the net annual revenue of the lines should be met, the report suggests, by a grant from the English exchequer, and it is recommended that this sum should not be less than $1,200,000, for such an amount would develop the resources of the country and help to mitigate the pressure of poverty.
