FUGITIVE IS CAUGHT

Milo Stoikovich Is Accused of Trying to Kill Friend.

VICTIM'S HEAD IS SPLIT

Wadiek Rogalski Is Found in Bed With Skull Cut Open From Blow With Ax—Roommate Is Arrested in Washington.

After remaining at large for nearly six months, Milo Stoikovich, an Albanian, accused of attempting to murder Wadiek Rogalski at 129 Knott street, April 5, was captured by officers at Cosmopolis, Wash., Saturday upon a description in circulars sent out by Captain of Detectives Moore. Detective Snow will leave this morning for Cosmopolis to bring the man back. Rogalski, who was a room-mate of Stoikovich, was found in his room with his head split open by an ax. He was unconscious, and it was thought that he could not live. He was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital and eventually recovered and returned to his work, though with a depression in his skull in which two fingers could be buried. Stoikovich disappeared at the time of the assault, and suspicion fastened upon him. He had a bad reputation among his countrymen, who charged that he had killed his wife in Albania and fled to this country. It is thought that the object of the assault was to secure $10 which Rogalski had deposited with the landlord. The assailant secured 12 cents from his unconscious victim. Rogalski was asleep when assaulted, and the evidence against Stoikovich is wholly circumstantial, but it is thought that a case can be made out against him.

TRAFFIC ADVICE GIVEN

Visitor Says Washington Street Is Too Congested in Rush Hours.

"If Portland should have a bad fire in the down-town district about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when the streets are particularly crowded, fire engines could not get over Washington street anywhere between Third and Sixth streets without running down people and colliding with vehicles," said R. H. McCarthy, of Detroit, Mich., yesterday.

Costumes for "Social Swims" to Be Determined

JUST what will and will not be worn at the "social swims" this winter is to be determined immediately behind closed doors at the Afternoon Style Association. The question is a very delicate one, but of great importance. In view of the public nature of the affair, that Councilman Frank E. Watkins and Swimming Instructor Arthur Cavill are urging that a special meeting be called in order not to delay the opening event at the Multnomah tank next Tuesday. They desire the views of the social arbiters of the Willamette Valley. Really, in connection with a bathing dress, the view is the main thing. The action of the association may be forced to the extent of announcing that it will be good form to wear kimonos or "Mother Hubbards" either at the tanks or in diving from the river bridges. For those bathers who do not intend to get into the water, fashion allows the wearing of hats. It is probable many who really intend to swim will also take along the latest creations known as inverted dishpans, with 12-inch flanged rims, sloping like a tin roof. The advantage of having that hat along is, when the swimmer gets tired the wearer can lay the hat on the water and climb aboard.

making them physically strong, first, then intellectually keen, then morally right. The whole process goes on all the time. Yet it is a growing process. The young man who has not been trained by patient discipline cannot begin to have the character of the older man who has had such discipline.

Raw Material Is Conscious.

"There is also a distinction between the great commercial enterprise and this one in that the former uses raw material that is neither conscious of what is being done to it, nor is able to cooperate in the process. In this factory for the making of men, the raw material is a living man who can both cooperate completely in and enjoy heartily the process of his development. All honor to the young men who are making sacrifice of time and energy and money to become more truly finished products.

Ideal Is Maintained.

"The association has also always been true to its Christian name and ideal, and has exalted the life of Jesus Christ as the largest pattern for every man. The need of the world today is not more ministers, though the church may need them for her better leadership. The world requires Christian men in every walk of life, men who have learned to bear the image of Jesus Christ. This is the kind of Christian culture and this is the final purpose of the Y. M. C. A.

Advantages Frankly Given.

"Everything worth anything costs something, and this enterprise cost the generous citizens of this city no small sum. Its privileges ought to be asumed, not with loss of self-respect, because one cannot pay for all he gets, nor with a selfish selling of every opportunity as though it were for a man's own comfort, but a frank and free use of the advantages of this building with a real respect for the motives of those who offer it. The method of this enterprise is a process. Character is not made in an hour. It takes a long process to make so simple a thing as a pin; much more to develop a human character. There is this difference between the worldly enterprise and this one; in the former the process goes on one thing at a time; in the latter the whole process goes on at once. It is impossible to make men by
