THE MORNING OREGONIAN, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1910.

"Does Chief of Police Cox for a mo-ment suppose that there are 418 drug-stores, clubs and grocerles in this city which have the legal right to sell liquor by virtue of possessing United States permits only? The Chief is talking in an extremely juvenile way when he chal-lenges me to prove my assertions in re-gard to 'blind pigs.' Within the limits of the City of Portland 418 more Gov-enment licenses have been issued than municipal licenses." said Miss Marie C. Brehm, temperance worker, at the Sew-lication of my statements, but neverthe-less I am morally certain that still many d pigs' are being operated within the city limits.

Men Fear Federal Laws.

"You know, of course, that men who wish to sell intoxicants illegally have a wholesome fear of the Federal authori-ties and a corresponding contempt for municipal authorities. The histories of 'blind pigs' in Kansas, Maine and North Dakota, prohibition states, show this to be true. My object in obtaining this list was to prove that 'blind pigs' flourish in 'wet' as well as 'dry' territory and I think I have done it.

think I have done it. "Dan J. McGill, United States col-lector of internal revenue, came to see me yesterday. He admitted to me that many of the Federal licenses have been the monor of immoral character. many of the Federal incenses interacter, issued to houses of immoral character, Isn't that terrible? Just imagine the United States Government issuing licenses to places of that kind!"

"Yesterday I received two phone calls. The people on the other end of the wire refused to give their names, but they told me of two places, one at the corner of Eighth and Stark and the other at the corner of Tenth and which the stark and the other at the corner of the stark and the other at the corner of the stark and Washington, which they said should be investigated. I told Mr. McGill about

Courage Lacking, She Says.

The trouble with a great many men "The trouble with a great many men is that they haven't the courage to assist in the suppression of 'blind pigs.' One came in yesterday and asked to look over my list, saying that he knew of one in his neighborhood and desired of one in his neighborholl. He said it was to see if I had it listed. He said it was there but refused to point it out to me. I asked him if he was going to wote for prohibition and he said that he guessed maybe he was. I am still at a loss to decide whether that man a showed an interest in, or just a plain citizen who lacked moral courage." "I have given my men strict instructions to arrest any person found selltions to arrest any person tound seri-ing liquor without the required lic-nenses," said Chief Cox. "We are hampered, however, by a decision of Judge Morrow to the effect that an officer's statement must not be admitted as evidence, and we haven't a dollar to spend in paying stool pigeons."

MR. MOORES STANDS PAT

Republicans in the State Are Indifferent to Statement 1, He Says.

PORTLAND, Sept. 28 .- (To the Editor.)-Two recent communications in The Oregonian indicate that our friends Hodson and Geer have entirely lost their nerve. Will you allow an ex-pression on the other side from one who was in the recent wreck, one who who was in the recent wreck, one who was named for an office he did seek, and who never in his life solicited sup-port from any delegate in any con-vention, or from any voter in a gen-eral election. The recent primary elec-tion settled absolutely nothing as to the assembly or Statement No. 1. One swallow never made a Summer, and one single political skirmish never set-ted any important political question. A discussion of these questions should not be forced at this time. It is time now for Republicans to close the ranks, touch as few raw spots as possible. now for Republicans to cose in the same touch as few raw spots as possible, and postpone acrimonious discussion of questions upon which we honestly dif-fer, until we are through with the task of electing the tickets nominated on Saturday last. In the campaign just closed in this county it is well known that the as-sembly candidates had no systematic sembly candidates had no systematic organization. Their opponents were thoroughly organized, and banners and brass bands and eloquent spellbinders and rented theaters indicated that they had no lack of cam-paign funds. From one printing estab-lishment alone on Front street, we are told. 90,000 highly Illustrated cam-paign pamphiets were sent out, on which the postage alone was $1800. which the postage alone was $1890. This postage alone probably amounted to twice the whole amount of money spent by the state and county com-mittees in behalf of the assembly canmittees in behalf of the assembly can didates. There was a fierce personal attack made upon the assembly nom-inees, in which the question of the assembly and Statement No. I was in nowise involved, and the passions of the voters were inflamed by persistent charges that the corporations were in control of the assembly. There was no same discussion of principles. Any abstract discussion of fundamental questions was ignored. The result was almost wholly person-the entire Republican state ticket. "I consider the so-called assembly and anti-assembly fight a minor issue in this election and the Republican party must get together to a man and and there is every reason in the world why he should be elected. I believe, with party harmony, which is decidedly essential just now, that the entire tick-et can be carried through the November election successfully and with a great

"I am a Republican first, last and all the time and I intend giving my heartiest support to the men that the people have seen fit to choose at the primaries. Of course, the ticket is split up in many ways, but I cannot imagine the Republicans of Oregon al-lowing any factional feeling, which may have arisen before the primaries, to influence their votes at the coming election.'

The Governor was resting on The Governor was resting on a lounge when interviewed. The fatigue of his long trip was apparent, but oth-erwise he considers himself greatly strengthened. "I will see you at the office in a day or two." he said in clos-ing the interview and it is prohable he will resume his duties, for a portion of the day at least either the last of of the day at least either the last of this week or the first of next week. The Governor is as vigorous and ani-mated in his conversation as ever and his eyes, which were reported to have been in danger, are as sparkling and shine as brightly as before he went South, it being evident that the report in that connection was exaggerated.
