General Wood Aims to Develop It Into Active Reserve of Regular Army.

WILL SPEAK AT ST. LOUIS

Ideas of Chief of Staff to be Set Forth at Convention of National Guard Association-More Officers First Essential.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington. Oct. 4.-The development and rfection of the state militia is b perfection of the state minimal secondary of the state of command.

As a matter of fact, General Wood, who is now recognized as one of the most practical of all military men in the United States entertains the opinion that the state militia would be our main dependence in time of war; would soon eclipse the Regular Army and outnumber it, and, holding these views, the general is strongly of the opinion that the militia must be brought to the highest possible stars of development.

militia must be brought to the mights possible stage of development.
On October s the National Guard Association will hold its 12th annual convention at St. Leuia It is planned to make this the largest and most important gathering of militia officers ever held in the United States, and on that occasion Gen-eral Wood, with 10 or more of his aides, will address the convention and partici-pate in the work of the assemblage.

Wood Wants More Officers.

At that meeting General Wood will lay bare to the militia officers many of his ideas concerning the proper development of the state troops, and will undertake to enlist the support of the state officers for his scheme of bettering their troops. Particularly will he seek the aid of the size troops, and will undertake to enlist the support of the state officers for his scheme of bettering their troops. Particularly will he seek the aid of these officers in his effort to secure the passage next seedon of a bill increasing the number of Army officers, so that officers of experience, yet men on the active list, may be detailed as instructors to all state militia organizations. This till is now being framed by the War. Department, and will be in shape for presentation to the state officers is St. Louis General Wood is not committed absolutely to the form of bill being drafted by the Department, and he is to take it with him in order to get the views of militia officers, and make such practical changes as they may suggest.

Militis to Be Real Defense.

Speaking of the supproaching St. Louis needing, General Wood said:

"I anticipate that this meeting will be me of great importance in the development of an army that will be a real defense to the country in the event of war, in order to have an army of the size the country meds, it is absolutely necessary to increase the efficiency of the organized militis. #### Officers Should Have More Pay.

"Not only should the militia be fur-nished with high-class officers from the Regular Army as instructors but it ap-pears to me that some plan should be de-vised by which the National Guard should receive more pay. Most of the officers and men give up their vacations to work in encampments, and it is my opinion that they should be well paid for this secrifice.

"By developing the organized militia we shall be able to strengthen the Army and increase its efficiency," said General Wood, in conclusion. "The General Wood, in conclusion, he seemer the Army and the organized militia come to realize that their interests are mutual, the better it will be for both of them and for the country. I do not believe that we shall ever be able to enlist the Army up to the arength which the safety of the country demands, even if Congress should be willing to appropriate money to maintain such an army, and on that account the state militia should be de-veloped into a real reserve for the

SINGING IS APPRECIATED

Old Songs Make Best Impression. Baritone's Rich Voice and Lyric Soprano's Liquid Tones Thrill Large Number of Hearers.

Brilliant in every respect was the opening concert of the Steers-Co-man series for 1910-11, given last night before a pleased audience that crowded the new Baker Theater, the visiting artistes being Signor Antonio Scotti, baritone, and Madame Bernice de Pasbaritates being Sanda baritate, and Madame Bernice de Pasquali, lyric soprano.

The scene inside the handsome-looking thealer was an animated one, the society and musical circles of this city being well represented. There were many box parties given, and the handsome gowns of the women and the jewels that were worn, gave the event quits a metropolitan appearance. An air of anticipation pervaded the audience. Both artistes are from the Metropolitan Opera-House. New York City, and the general excellence of the programme soon changed anticipation to genuine appreciation. At the same time, the programme was a little backneyed. Precious little of the new school of music was given, but many of the numbers are household favorites and were, therefore, tenderly recognized.

Scottl opened the concert with the prolegue from Leoncavalle's "T Pagliacel," He has a mellifluous baritone voice, with a liquid finish, and just enough of the is a typical voice trained in the traditics of the Italian school. Scottl has the cause he did not manage his breats surficiently to finish the last note as a long-drawn-out one.

He was quite successful with his interpretation of the familiar "Dio Possente" from "Paust," and won a hearty recall, his response being "Ultimo Canzone" (Tosti). Scott's other numbers were from Mozart, and in reply to two encores he repeated the "Fin Ch'han Del Vino." It is a pity that Scotti did not sing one number in English, as he would have aroused greater enthusiasm. Scotti's voice wears well. He was born in Naples, Italy, in the year 1862, so he is just 44 years old.

Pasquall, who sang in this city about 14 or 15 years ago and at that time won honors with the "Mignon" polonaise, made a more insting appeal to her hearers, and sang into their beart of hearts. Pasquall was a Boston kein, her family name being James, and in addition to being partly of Irish decent, she te a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and is emphatically one of us.

Her voice is one of sparkling beauty dear and liquid in all its registers, and her enunciation is superb. In the "Mignon" number she sang, with abso-"Mignon" number she sang, with absolute clarky to D-sharp in altiestmo. Her enboyes were "If I Were a Bird" (Lilli Lehmann), "A May Morning" (Denza), "Come Back to Erin" and "Spring" (George Henschel). She and Scottl sang two ducts, with finished
