

CHINESE PRISONER CANNOT GET BAIL

Gifts of Flowers and Fruit Refused Alien in County Jail.

CASE TO COME UP MONDAY

Suit Is Hoped to Break Up System Whereby Tong and Families Instruct Newcomers How to Convince Authorities.

Although declaring that they were not in any way connected with the underground railway system by which Chinese laborers are securing admittance to the United States, Attorneys Sinnott and Banks consumed a large part of yesterday afternoon in attempting to induce United States Commissioner Cannon to allow bail in the case of Chin Wah, arrested by immigration officers on charges of being unlawfully in the United States.

Challenged by Assistant United States Attorney Evans at the last moment to bring to trial on the issues of the deportation case, the representatives of the wealthy Chinese merchants declined to submit evidence. Chin Wah is an inmate of the County Jail and has been incommunicado since his arrest. He is not allowed to receive visitors, or presents of any kind.

Prisoner Denied Gifts. Baskets of flowers, parcels of fruit, Chinese delicacies and other innocent appearing presentations have been sent to the jail, but under the instructions of the United States Marshal, not an item of any of the articles which may contain a message of instruction will be allowed to reach the imprisoned Chin Wah. The case will be heard on its merits next Monday.

In the meantime, Commissioner Cannon has withheld a decision of the bail question presented at the hearing. Attorneys for the incarcerated Chinese cited two cases from United States Courts wherein Chinese were declared to be entitled to bail under charges affecting their participation in criminal matters, but it was contended by Assistant United States Attorney Evans that Chin Wah is charged with being a Chinese laborer unlawfully within the United States, and therefore the action is of a civil nature, which precludes the idea of his securing liberty on bonds. The Government contends for the right to detain any Chinese for investigation as to his right to be in the United States.

Suit Is Interesting. The suit is one of the most interesting ever presented to the Federal courts. In that it involves the idea of breaking up the system of aiding Chinese in securing admittance to this country in violation of the immigration laws. It has been charged that the system of "tongs" or families by which the Chinese people cling together requires that whenever a member of a family is arrested the tong shall furnish all the aid within its power. In carrying out this plan it is alleged that Portland Chinese of standing have been compelled to not only furnish bonds for the appearance of Chinese under arrest for violation of the immigration laws, but have been compelled to establish a school for their instruction.

No Understanding Shown. Yesterday Chin Wah sat in the courtroom without displaying a particle of understanding of the procedure. His glittering eyes watched the officers of the court during every moment of the hearing, but otherwise he apparently knew nothing of what was going on. Attorneys Banks and Sinnott have not begun habeas corpus proceedings to secure the liberty of their client, preferring to try out the issues before the court which will of necessity have the larger part to do with deportations at future times.

Immigration officers of the Department of Commerce and Labor have contended for many months that Chinese immigrants are not entitled to bail and have been sustained by Judge Hanford in the Seattle district.

RAILWAY WOULD PAVE STREET

City of Portland's Case Now Up to Judge Bean.

Offering to accept a decree by which it would agree to pay for the paving of that portion of Belmont street lying between its tracks and adjoining land covered by its right-of-way, the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company yesterday submitted its case against the City of Portland to the consideration of the United States Court.

The case was up on a motion from Assistant City Attorney Benbow, asking that the temporary injunction preventing the city from interfering with the tracks of the company, which it had condemned preparatory to opening the street through Mount Labor district be dissolved. The right-of-way was not originally acquired from the city, but was purchased from the original owners of the land. Under the terms of the city charter, it was deemed necessary to acquire the easement of the street railway company, and to later grant the company a charter to occupy the street for railway purposes. Attorney Benbow disclaimed any intention on the part of the city to stop the use of the street for future use.

2 MEET AFTER 44 YEARS

MINNEAPOLIS AND PORTLAND MEN RECALL YOUTH.

H. A. Tuttle, President of Eastern City's Commercial Club, Has Praise for Local Organization.

"Why, hello Harry," and "How are you Joe," were the greetings which were exchanged, between H. A. Tuttle, of Minneapolis, manager of the North American Telegraph Company, now merged with the Postal, and J. H. Thatcher, of Portland, general agent for the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company, yesterday when Mr. Tuttle walked into Mr. Thatcher's office and the men met for the first time after nearly 44 years' separation. The Minneapolis man entered entirely unannounced and the greeting was instantaneous on the part of both.

In 1866 Mr. Tuttle, then 20 years of age, and Mr. Thatcher, then 18 years old, worked together at Oswego, N. Y., as Western Union commercial telegraph operators. The same year Mr. Thatcher left and went to Buffalo and thereafter, till yesterday, the paths of the two men were widely divergent. Mr. Thatcher was not aware that the friend of his youth was in this part of the United States.

"I'd have known Harry anywhere by that cast of jaw," declared the Portland man. "Very few men have it and it is a thing that does not seem to change." The Minneapolis visitor came back with:

"Well, Joe doesn't look a bit older; I guess neither of us do, except that we have both become gray. I've got Joe beat, though. He's partly bald and I've managed to save my hair." The two friends spent the day in visiting points of interest around the city, including the rooms of the Commercial Club. Mr. Tuttle is president of the Minneapolis Commercial Club. "I had always heard that the rooms of the Portland Commercial Club were the best-appointed in the United States, and now that I have seen them I am satisfied of it," said Mr. Tuttle. "I don't wish to appear disloyal to Minneapolis, but I must say that they beat our quarters all hollow. Incidentally, Portland comes nearer my ideal of the model city than any city I have ever been in, except, of course, Minneapolis. At that I believe your city will be in the same class as Minneapolis when you get 300,000 population, which I do not think will be long."

PROPOSED SITE OPPOSED

RETAILERS AGAINST NEW POST-OFFICE ON BLOCK "S."

Representative Calls on Special Agent Hill to State Objection; Visit Fruitless.

The selection of a postoffice site near the proposed new Grand Central Station will not be made without opposition from the retail district without made evident yesterday, when George W. Joseph, attorney for some of the large business interests, called upon Dr. J. W. Hill, special agent of the Treasury Department.

Following his visit, Mr. Joseph made this inquiry of waiting spectators: "Is the Postoffice to be a malling shed or a building of such respectability that it would amount to something to the commercial importance of the business center of town?" Attorney Joseph said that his mission to Dr. Hill bore no fruit, and that the selection of a site was as much a mystery to the interests of the city as it has been since the appropriation was secured.

Senator Bourne yesterday announced that he had not received any information concerning the subject, and that he would soon leave the city for the East. He has indicated the purchase of block "S," located at the foot of the park blocks, in the city called the "North End." His endorsement followed that of Postmaster Merrick and Architect Bennett, the latter having in charge the "city beautiful" work.

STOLEN WIRE IDENTIFIED

Meyer Shenker Must Answer Charges Which May Implicate Others.

Nearly 600 pounds of valuable copper used in photo-engraving, and stolen from a prominent illustrating firm, and which was found in the junk shop of Meyer Shenker, 288 Front street, was identified by the owner yesterday morning.

Shenker is under charges of knowingly receiving stolen goods, following the discovery of several tons of railroad brasses and wire in his possession. It is believed the trial will uncover an organized system of theft from the companies, in which numerous persons are implicated.

PROTEST IS HEARD

Dairymen Feel Effect of Public Protest at Prices.

DEALERS ASK FOR HEARING

Many Persons Cancel Orders for Milk and Cream—City Attorney Said to Have Evidence of Collusion by Dealers.

Feeling that they have been unjustly treated by the public in the agitation which has arisen as the result of the recent advance in the price of milk, the dairymen of the city, according to a statement made last night by Robert Ireland, manager of the Hazelwood Cream Company, have started a movement towards seeking an audience with the members of the Commercial Club and the Consumers' League, believing that they can persuade these people that there is no profit in the milk business at prevailing prices.

"We have had dozens of telephone calls from people to cancel their orders for milk and cream since this agitation commenced," said Mr. Ireland, "and I am informed that other firms in the city have had the same experience. We are not manufacturers and we are not making money on the distribution of milk at the rates now in vogue. If it were possible to effect a consolidation of delivery systems, it might be possible to maintain the present prices and operate at a reasonable profit. If this is not done, a great many of the smaller dealers will be forced out of business by gradual loss of capital."

David Brown, of Spokane, president of the Hazelwood Cream Company, arrived in the city yesterday, and conferred with Manager Ireland as to ways and means of subduing the popular agitation. They have decided to visit C. C. Chapman, manager of the promotion department of the Commercial Club, and obtain his views as to the expediency of taking the subject up with that body. Later they will seek an audience with the officers of the Consumers' League, with a view to obtaining permission to explain the milk situation in detail to the members of that organization at a public meeting. Asked if he would take it up at the next meeting of the Dairymen's Protective Association, Mr. Ireland said:

"The Hazelwood Cream Company would not dare to take the initiative in a matter of that kind. The smaller dealers would at once suspect that our company, being strong financially, was scheming to monopolize the milk business and there would be charges of

'combine to control prices' on the part of the public. We feel that the Commercial Club or some organization more or less public in character should make the first move. The public should first be educated to the necessity for it."

Reports were current around police headquarters yesterday that the detective in the employ of the City Attorney's office had obtained positive proof of collusion on the part of the milk dealers of the city, but whatever information has been secured will be kept under cover until the commencement of prosecutions.

Inquiry among the dairymen of the city yesterday developed a determination on their part to adhere to the new scale of prices despite the protests of the public. Commenting on the actions of several persons who are said to have declared that they will refuse to pay in excess of the old rates, one of the milk dealers said: "All persons who receive milk from us must pay according to the schedule, which went into effect October 1. I haven't heard of any dairymen who have even thought of going back to the old prices."

Manager Ireland, of the Hazelwood Cream Company, says that four farmers visited him yesterday and announced their intention of discontinuing the keeping of milk cows if the city ordinance relating to sanitary conditions must be complied with, on the ground that they will be put to great expense.
