New Bills Open at the Vaudeville Houses

If it is another good week at the Orpheum Theater with nearly every act up to standard. Heading the list of attractions is Augusta Glose, known far and near in the annals of vaudeville as "The Original Pianola Girl."

STREET-DIGGING FOUGHT

MAYOR VETOES ORDINANCE AUTHORIZING SEWER.

Destruction of Paved Thoroughfares for Improvements to Please Few Is Barred. Tearing up hard-surface streets for the purpose of installing larger sewer pipes and making similar alterations on paved streets for the benefit of a few persons at the expense of many property holders does not mesh with the approval of Mayor Simon.

There never was a time in the history of this country when a man could get a home of his own as easily as at the present moment. It is true that everything we eat and wear is high, but the demand for labor in all walks of life at a high wage was never so great as now.

Reminiscent of Miss Glose is Leona Thurber of "Thurber and Madison" in their unconventional and out-of-the-ordinary skit "On a Shopping Tour." Mr. Thurber is so really like the folk he imitates that the audience individually pokes its neighbor's ribs and cackles appreciatively.

"Gosh, it's dince to be a girl!" is another spoken song that brought rounds of applause, and her "Fratelli" in costume was a gentle riot. In her repertoire Miss Glose wisely includes with her success of last season the songs and walks of various types of girl.

Nat Leffingwell and company present an unusually good sketch, "A Night at the Lodge," in which the reward of merit belongs not so much to anything in the play, but rather to Leffingwell for good work. The story is of a dream—rather a regular wraith rattle nightmare. Father, happily well-to-do, and this is his head up in a towel and finds his slippers for him, falls into a gentle doze and dreams he is initiated into a lodge.

Arthur Bowen is labeled as a singing cartoonist, and lives up to the allegation. His drawing is far superior to anything of similar ilk seen locally in many moons. "Daughter," with crayon pictures of the same part, went great yesterday, as did also his illustrated song "Home is Surely No Place for Me." Mr. Bowen is a human nickelodeon all by himself.

Spisael brothers, three in number, with John Russell as an aide, do not act as local color, present a rattling good pantomime comedy, "The Continental Waiter." Chuck full of surprises, eccentric acrobatics, in which even the chairs, tables and hatrack assume roles, this number proves diverting and is blessed with much that is original.

Grand. FUN at the Grand waxes high each week, when Harry von Fossen walks sedately upon the stage, clad in voluminous gray trousers and a liberal supply of lamplack. One of the top-notchers among negro minstrels is this man who produces a laugh from his customers before he so much as smiles. Without question he is the feature performer of the bill. However, he has quite a capable rival in Alexander Brisson, the "equilibrium" extraordinary, who has a powerful physique and displays wonderful skill in his "Awakening of Apollo."

Lyric. WITH Tommy Burns, the ex-champion heavyweight of the world, and the two well-known comedians, Ben T. Dillon and Will King, as the chief attractions, the Lyric has never had a better offering than this week. There is no plot to the play, merely some scrambled comedy, with witty remarks and a dialect which is a mixture of ingredients. Ben T. Dillon, as Ike Cohen, a Jew, and Will King, as Mike Cohen, an Irishman, are a clever pair of "Mustard Kings," who, while making a tour of the country, make their appearance at a hotel in France.

Because of their antagonistic propensities and their inability to talk kindly to each other's criticisms, which led to a "duel," they are placed in jail. The play ends with their killing the prison guard and jailing and escaping. The chorus does some good work, and especially when a street urchin, they were lined up to answer charges of misconduct and receive their sentences. George Rehn, this time as a Frenchman, handles the dialect well, and makes the necessary "talking" motions with his arms. He is the ardent wooer of Fid (Clara Howard), and is always on the verge of committing suicide or blowing up a rival with a bomb.

Fred Lancaster has a good voice and pleases with his specialties. After the conclusion of the play Tommy Burns gives a short, entertaining talk about his recent trip around the world. On account of the length of the show,

My objection to the enactment of this ordinance is based upon the fact that Alder Madison is so really like the folk he imitates that the audience individually pokes its neighbor's ribs and cackles appreciatively. This introduction, too, a novelty, "In Vaudeville" containing gentle references, with illustration, of some of the things found there; for instance "eccentric" dancing, the "mouave acrobats" and other old stand-bys.

The courts of justice and the school system in Paris are to be reformed by the new cabinet, with the aid of foreign advisers.

AN AWARD Was made last week by the Pacific Telephone Company to Bushong & Co., of this city, for printing the telephone directory. This means that several thousand dollars formerly spent in San Francisco will be left in this state. As soon as released from the San Francisco contract the officials of the telephone company cast their eyes around for a plant that could handle the work here. Bushong & Co. were found to be the only plant north of San Francisco equipped satisfactorily to produce the work required and were awarded the contract. Bushong & Co. also print the Pacific Monthly, Oregon's live and growing magazine. They occupy the entire four floors of the building at 87-91 Park St. In addition to the above class of work, they have a complete lithograph department, turning out high-grade commercial, bank and map work. Their store department handles the highest grade of desks, chairs, filing devices, etc., besides loose leaf and card indexing systems. In fact, they are a complete office, bank and county supply house. All interested are invited to inspect their plant.

There have been 53 sessions of Congress Since 1857—when we began making pure whiskey, yet not one law has been passed which necessitated any change in the formula or label of Good old GUCKENHEIMER Pure Rye BOTTLED IN BOND.
