WOMAN PIONEER IS DEAD Mrs. M. Viola Crawford Crossed Plains in 1853. Mrs. M. Viola Crawford, an Oregon pioneer of 1853, died at the home of her son, E. W. Crawford, 741 East Pine street, yesterday, aged 55 years. Mrs. Crawford was a daughter of the late N. K. Briggs, of Corvallis. She was a native of Iowa and was six months old when her parents crossed the plains to Oregon. Mrs. Crawford was married to the late Rev. W. C. Crawford, of Corvallis, and lived for many years in that city. She had been a resident of Portland several years. She is survived by three sons, E. W. Crawford, E. E. Crawford, of Portland, and W. C. Crawford, of San Francisco. Mrs. Crawford was a member of the Portland lodge of Daughters of Rebekah and the Ladies of the Maccabees. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

That Oregon's publicity methods are being recognized in the East as being progressive and effective in results is indicated by a letter received yesterday by the Portland Chamber of Commerce. Columbus wants to be admitted into the Portland School of Publicity. The Columbus Chamber of Commerce has heard of the work being done by the Portland Chamber and the Commercial Club and is desirous of learning of some of the people-pulling arguments in the publicity campaign now being waged by these organizations. The letter from the Ohio organization contains numerous pointed questions. All of these will be answered by Secretary Giltner.
