Reports of the shooting of fish led Messrs. Rathburn and Rall to make an investigation. They spent three days on the Sandy River in an effort to locate the offenders. Postmasters' Association Has Advice From Inspector.

PUBLIC WEAL CONSIDERED

W. J. Vickery Says Letters to Children Should Be Scrutinized. Merrick Says Tact and Courtesy Are Important.

Before the fourth annual convention of the Presidential Postmasters' Association of Oregon closed its sessions yesterday afternoon. W. J. Vickery, postoffice in-spector with headquarters at Spokane. Wash, gave a heart-to-heart talk to the delegates assombled which was easily the feature of the day's meeting.

He said that postmasters are among the most valued public servants, and that with the position they occupy in the body pollific they have it in their power to wield great moral influence in a community.

"If a postmaster is careful in performing his duties, he can become the moral leader in the locality he serves," said Mr. Vickery. "My admonition is not to permit your office to become a sewer for carrying demoralizing mail. If you keep a close watch, you can succeed in eliminating such mail and literature that comes to your office.

"I think that if I were a postmaster I would devote much time to that feature of the work. Frequently you see young of the work. Frequently you see young boys and girls call at the general de-livery window for mail. I believe I would manage to make a mistake occasionally and have those letters get directly into the hands of the parents of those boys and girls." Public Can Expedite Work.

Mr. Vickery said that there are many ways to conduct a postoffice in order to build up its business. He suggested that it was most essential to provide every means for the convenience of the public and to assure the postoffice patrons that good and quick service would always be the first consideration. The public could also help expedite the postoffice work, he said, by mailing letters, especially business letters and circulars, early in the day. He believed that a postmaster should be continued in service as long as he does his work in an efficient and satisfactory manner.

At the morning session the principal ad-ress was made by Postmaster Mer-ick, of Portland, on "Two Best Assets of a Postoffice Clerk." The speaker said that in addition to practical experience the most valued assets of a postoffice were those of courtesy and tact.

"There are two virtues that should go with these other assets which I deem the patron, and these assets are not al-ways gained by experience or education.", said he. "One of these, and the chief ecause it partially embraces the other, because it partially embraces the other, is courtesy, and the other is tact. Reminding you that I have taken for granted that the clerk possesses clerical ablity sufficient for him to perform his routine work, and that he possesses some experience in postal affairs, it appears undeniable, in my opinion, that the ideal clerk must possess other attributes to enable him to reach the highest state of efficiency."

Postal Savings Bank Discussed.

Discussion of the postal savings bank system was participated in at length, and while there were some minor objections made to the system, it was pointed out that it would doubtless prove a valuable feature of the postoffice business and reature of the postonice outsiness and would be the means of placing in circu-lation large amounts of money which at present remain in seclusion. It was agreed that the system would serve to encourage thrift among the wage-earners of the country.

The officers chosen for the year are as follows: B. W. Johnson, president, of Corvallis: Ed Hostetler, vice-president, of The Dailes; J. S. Van Winkle, secretary-treasurer, of Albany. The selection of the meeting place for next year was left in the hands of the officers, and it is in the hands of the officers, and it is that Portland will be again.

Chase of Several Blocks Ends When Fugitive Runs Into Detective.

Frequenters of the North End lined the streets by the hundreds yesterday morning to witness a sensational footrace in which Theodore Gunderman, a fugitive from justice, held first place with a good lead, while Policemen Webster and Leisy were poor seconds. Scores of citisens joined in the chase, which wound through half a dozen streets and ended only when Gunderman ran plump into Detective Hyde and a big revolver.

Gunderman was drunk and disorder-ly in a Burnside-street saloon. He had approached several men and asked approached several men and asked them for money, knocking down each one who refused. It is said that he had stretched out three in one place. Policemen Browley and Webster were called in and placed him under ar-rest. When the patrol wagon, with Officer Leisy, arrived, and Gunderman was about to be placed in it, he broke away and ran north to Couch street, thence to Third to Ankery turning at away and ran north to Couch street, thence to Third, to Ankeny, turning at every corner he came to. At Third and Pine streets he collided with a pedestrian at full tilt and knocked him into the middle of the street. Hyde saw the chase from a distance and ran and real base seven to be head. up with his revolver in his hand. Gunderman put his hands above his head and surrendered.

GAS FRANCHISE IS SOUGHT City Attorney Has Ordinance Ready to Present to Council.

Whether Portland is to have a new gas plant may be decided at the next meeting of the City Council. City At-torney Grant says he will have the or-dinance providing for the grant of a franchise to J. W. Travers ready for introduction at that time. He has read over the document and says some changes were necessary to make it meet the city's requirements. He will submit it to the Council at the request of Mr. Travers and will allow it to come before that body on its merits. Travers seeks to operate on the East Side, principally in the Rose City Park district, and declares that he will spend $100,000 on his plant.

By the census of 1906 Portland was the forty-second city in the country, with a population of 90,426. At that time there were but 35 cities in the 100,000 class—Albany. N. Y.; Cambridge, Mass., and Lowell, Mass., being the cities, with Portland, of o ver 90,000 and less than 100,000. The three cities just below Portland were Atlanta. Ga., 89,872; Grand Rights, Mich., 87,565, and Richmond, Va., 85,059. From 1880 to 1890 Portland Jumped from 106th to 60th place, and from 1890 to 1900 from 60th to 42d place. The present census returns will soon be available, and it will be interesting to note how Portland stands in the rank of cities, and how far she has distanced her competitors. Very ilkely we will more than double the population of many of the cities near us in 1900, for there is no more prosperous city in the country than Portland; no city making a better growth; no city of the size with more improvements going on. Hence there is no better city in which to buy property, and we believe we can con vince any unblased man or woman that our Irvington Park lots at $475 are the best buy on this or any other market.
