He left town this afternoon and not even the mem-hers of the cabinet knew his destina-tion until the newspapers announced his arrival at Sandringham, where King George is in residence. The object of the visit is to acquaint

His Majesty with the failure of the constitutional conference and to ad-vise him of the course the government intends to pursue.

Cabinet Demands Guaranty.

It is believed the cabinet has dewith the Parliament without such guar-antees as would insure success to the government's policy. Ordinarily, the antees as would insure success to the government's policy. Ordinarily, the resolution on the veto power of the House of Lords, which passed the House of Commons at the last session, would be discussed in the upper chamber and the government would await rejection before taking action. The refusal of the constitutional conference to accept the sovernment's ference to accept the government's compromise, however, makes discus-sion of the veto resolution useless, in the view of the radicals.

The opinion prevails that the government either must resign or advise the dissolution of Parliament.

pass of remass, was decided a so with my very life, that there are just as respectable men in military life, as there are it circlism life and more so, in some respects. I will admit that there are some who when they enlist are not good to themselvés or anyone else, at the time of enlisting, but through the compalaory training a man has got to go through, the soldier is sent out into the world a better man, morally and physically, than a lifetime of training in some standards of civil life. I myself have put in 17 years of army life, and say that i am equal to any man in every way, whe has seen nothing but civilian life. I am is years of age, am eleady and industrious, and have yet to know the flavor of alcoholic heterages.

Since coming to Portland, I have applied at quite a number of places for employment, and was told not at one, but quite few places that there was no room for an ex-soldier. I asked the reason why, and they said that a man was "no good after being a soldier." I claim that in seven out of 10 cases a soldier will make a better workman in cases of ability, ponetuality, obedience and carrying out orders than a good many civilians, owing to the training of army life. I am gong to say in this town and show the people, particularly those who would not hire an ex-soldier, what an ex-soldier can 50, by getting a position.

Use your judgment in researd to the publication of this communication, as I am not actually looking for notoristy. But I could not at 15th by and see a soldier's life painted black without a word of defense from me.

Alleged Swindler Caught in New Orleans on Return From Cuban Trip.

MAN SECURED OVER $20,000

Woman Companion of Charles Converse, Employe of Porter Bros., Betrays Him When She Writes to The Dalles Friend.

The arrest of Charles P. Converse by Pinkerton detectives at New Orleans Thursday, on the charge of swindling banks in The Dalles, Spokane and Chicago, was indirectly effected through a letter to Inez Hall, a woman of the underworld who accompanied him on his flight, wrote to friends at The Dalles. Converse met the woman at The Dalles while he was employed by Porter Bros., contractors, last Summer. The letter was written by the Hall woman at Jacksonville, Fig., soon after their arrival from Cuba three weeks ago. It stated that she was having a woman at Jacksonville, Fig., soon after their arrival from Cuba three weeks ago. It stated that she was having a "grand time with Charley P." Pinkerton detectives in this section, under the guidance of Henry E. von Groenwald, superintendent of the local branch, investigated the clew and the capture of the elopers as they descended the gang plank of a steamer at New Orleans followed.

The operations of Converse netted him more than $20,000, it is alleged. While employed as a bookkeeper for Porter Bros. contractor, in their office at The Dalles fon several months during the past Summer he had access to the vaults and check books and invariably banked the money which passed through The Dalles office of the firm. With such opportunities given him, he experienced little difficulty in purchasing two drafts from the First National Bank at The Dalles for exceedingly large amounts on August 13. The drafts were made payable to Randali & Phillips, a fictitious concern. One was drawn on the Chemical National Bank of New York, for $7810, and another on the Commercial Bank of Chicago, for $240, ostensibly at the request of Porter Bros., Converse's employers. In addition to securing the The first and second prizes were $199 and $50 respectively. Ten other contestants won $5 such.

Before the presentation of prizes, Dr. James Withycombe, of Corvallis, delivered an address on "The Poultry Industry in Oregon." The speaker said that there were approximately $60,000 farms in Oregon and that if each farmer were to keep 100 good laying hens and give them proper care it would mean an anual revenue from eggs alone of $14. $880,000 to the farmers in this state. Dr. Withycombe urged that not only farmers but persons living in the suburban districts should give more attention to the poultry industry.

According to the record kept by young Hogan, his brood of $2 hens average $140 eggs aplece for the year and each hen produced a net profit of $2.88. Miss Hayes' hens gave a profit of $2.72 such for the year.

Judges of the contest were Professor Dryden and Professor Lunn, of the Oregon Agricultural College, who had charge of the inspection of the fowls, and Professor Ball, of Arleta, and G. C. Hatt, who conducted examination of the contestants in the reading course.

The full list of the prize-winners, with number of points scored and amount of prizes, is as follows:

Before taking his departure from The Dalles, Converse, by means of a score of alleged bogus checks, secured sums ranging from $100 to $300 from merchants of that place. On August 15 he appeared at the Old National Bank in Spokane and presented the letter of credit signed by The Dalles bankers. On the strength of the credential he was advanced $2100 in cash. Apparently after securing these funds he was joined by the Hall woman in Spokane, and they began their Eastward journey. The pair arrived at Chicago on August 19, and registered at a hotel as man and wife. On the same date Converse is alleged to have called at the Commercial Bank of that city and presented the fictitious draft. Owing to the large sum demanded the bank officials demurred in advancing him any money until they could first com-

Regardless of the suspicious aspects of the transaction Converse persuaded the Chicago bankers to advance him several hundred dollars on the draft, pending a response to their communication with the Oregon bankers. He agreed to return to the bank for the remainder of the mency the following day. He failed to, however, and fied with his companion to Southern cities and thence embarked for Cuba.

The transactions Converse had with the bank were soon proved fraudulent and detectives of the Pinkerton Bank and Bankers' Association were placed upon his trail. A countrywide search was made for the fugitive, but he successfully eluded the detectives until his Wife Would See Husband.

Mrs. Converse, the alleged swind-er's wife and their 15-year-old son reside at Green Lake, Wash., a suburb of Scattle. Several weeks ago she en-listed the aid of Pinkerton detectives in her search for Converse, from whom she had not heard since he disappeared in August. She believed Converse to be mentally unbalanced and feared that Members of the Alaska Club announce that every effort will be made to secure the principal part of future Alaskan trade. He has called a meeting to be held early next month to outline plans. The smoker will be held in the convention hall of the Portland Commercial Club.

Mr. Swanton announced last night that many of the leading business men of the city have become interested in the importance of the Alaskan trade and is is his belief that commercial relations between this city and the shipping points of Alaska will soon be in effect.

Lewis is said to be fatally injured.

Half an hour later, while the police were at the Lewis saloon seeking a trace of the robbers, the same men entered the saloon of John Dahlen, drew revolvers and robbed the bartender and a lone customer. Notable Gathering-Oregon City

Fun and goodfellowship reigned supreme at the list birthday celebration of Portland Lodge of Elks, No. 142, last night, and, while the gathering was ostenably for the purpose of marking the passing of this important milestone in the organization's history, it really developed into a booster meeting for the grand lodge session and reunion in this city in 1932.

W. R. Apperson, exalted ruler, struck this keynote in his opening address. It was taken up with fervor by each of the succeeding speakers and met with the spontaneous approval of several hundred antiered visitors from Vancouver, Oregon City, Astoria and other towns in Oregon as well as the big percentage of local members who filled the spacious meeting hall. ers and robbed the bartender and a lone customer.

The other member of the robber trio who was shot, is at the point of death in a hospital here.

Three robbers made the attempt at robbing the Cicero saloon, and when the saloon-keeper fired upon them, a revolver battle began. Before the robbers got out of the building, Cobb had been shot down, the waitress was wounded and Belmont was hit twice. Policeman Kane took up the fight outside, being only a short distance from the fleeing trio. They concentrated their fire upon him and when two of them got sway in the darkness, Kane lay mortally wounded, a few feet from where Belmont had fallen and one of the burglars was lying shot through the head.
