GIRL IS BRAINS OF GANG

Seattle Police Remember Her as "The Wildcat," Beautiful and Vixenish, Terror to Rounders of Days of Eld.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 25.—(Special.)—The romantic career of Mrs. E. T. Little, a strikingly handsome French girl, who not many years ago was a street waif in Seattle known to policemen and other night owls only as "The Wildcat," came to a climax today when she was arraigned before a magistrate at Port Orchard as the "queen" of a band of roving pirates, of whom five members are now in the Kitsap County Jail with other arrests pending.

Mrs. Little, whose bold, black eyes, tangled raven hair, slender, graceful figure and spiteful disposition made her at once the admiration and terror of rounders in the old wide-open days, is the daughter of a French woman who once had an international reputation as a circus rider. The woman came to Seattle when she was "down and out" and lived here in extreme poverty until her death. She and "The Wildcat" lived in dire poverty and the child habitually begged food at hotel back doors to support her mother.

The woman, whose name no one here ever knew, later rewarded this devotion by selling the girl, then 13 years old, to Leonard, a notorious Eagle Harbor pirate, who compelled her to marry him.

The courts of Kitsap County annulled the marriage within a few months. Then the girl married Little, a former Seattle fireman, who quit the department in disgrace five years ago and joined Ashby's gang. Mrs. Little now has a babe in arms.

The Kitsap County authorities believe that Mrs. Little was the brains of the gang and planned the many robberies committed on board ships and steamers and in summer homes along the Sound. Loot valued at nearly $2000 was found in the gang's shack near Eagle Harbor.
