Manager Said to Have Disposed of Tanana Filings, Which Can Be Recognized by Light Color. Whelan Without Bail.

Government sleuths deny having taken into their possession $5000 of the $18,000 in gold bars stolen from the steamer Humboldt, about $10,000 of which was recovered in San Francisco when George Woodson, John F. Voodson, Margaret Smith and Elmer L Smith were arrested. But if they have not already taken possession of the gold, it is believed they know whereit is, and will make a raid within ew days and take it.

It is known that the searching of the Fargo Saloon, at Sixth and Stark streets, by Deputy United States Mar-shall Hamilin Tuesday night resulted in securing a quantity of gold. This may be either sold filling or gold hars be either gold filings or gold bars. James E. The Tanana gold is of a lighter color than other gold, being on that account readily distinguishable. Government officials say that they are satisfied that in Whelan they have a man who was either disposing of the gold as a mem-ber of the gang which made the theft, or that he was disposing of it for Port-land men who are members of the

Other arrests are expected within few days, as the Government officials are determined to place the entire gang in tail. It is believed that confessions have been secured from some of those who know of the workings of the gang, and that the Government is in possession of enough evidence to send all the thieves to McNeil's Island. LIGHTHOUSES ARE NEEDED

Alaskan Coast Navigators Should Be Protected, Says Governor.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash ington, Jan. 4.— The establishment of lighthouses and other aids to navigation along the Alaskan coast is of the highest importance," says Governor W. E. Clark in his annual report to the Interior Department. He continues:

"Several considerations besides the primary one of protecting the lives of those who travel on ocean-going vessels, emphasize the precessity of more liberal emphasize the precessity of more liberal emphasize the necessity of more liberal provision for these safeguards. The maritime commerce of Alaska amounts to approximately $50,000,000 per annum. and freight rates on shipments of mer-chandles are much higher than would be the case if the coast line were ade-quately lighter. "Several lights have been installed along these tortuous channels this year, but others are needed in adjacent waters and, in fact, throughout the coast line. The hazard to shipping is regarded by the underwriters as so great that marine insurance rates are frequently as high as 151 per cent, and after the wreck of the steamship Yucatan last Winter it was reported that rates on the larger vessels would be increased to 20 per cent in case they should continue to follow the inside route to Prince William Sound. High insurance rates make high freight rates. The installation of proper aids to navigation, such as are found on the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards, and en in Canadian waters immediately fjacent to our own, would be followed inevitably by a reduction of in-surance rates and, under a proper con-dition of competition in the carrying trade, a reduction of freight rates. Such a reduction would be of ines-timable economic value to the terri-tory, reducing the cost of living and making it nearly to approach to such making it possible to engage in such mining and other industries as are feasible only when cheap supplies are obtainable and generally lower expenses of operation are to be encoun-

WASHINGTON ROADS COST CITY RESIDENTS MOST.

Samuel Hill Says Use of Convicts on Highways of State Has Proved Profitable.

In the operation of the road laws in Washington, it has been found that the residents of cities and incorporated towns actually pay more than the farmers of the state for the construction and maintenance of the public highways, according to Samuel Hill, of Seattle, who has been prominently identified with the good roads movement in Washington several years. Mr. Hill was in the city yes terday on his way to California to spend the Winter months. "Under our road laws, a property owner who is assessed $10,000 must pay $10 into the state road funds," said Mr. Hill, "and if he is assessed $100,000 he is required to pay a road tax of $100. In other words, a levy of 1 mill is made upon all the assessable property in the state, and in that way permanent and constantly increasing road funds are provided.

BAILEY CHARGES GO TO GRAND JUR'

District Attorney Will Present Case and Call Deputies as Witnesses.

RETORT MADE BY MARIS

Former Attache of Food Commis sioner's Office Says Bailey's Own Words Are Sufficient to Accusation.

District Attorney Cameron yesterday said that he would recommend to the County January grand Multnomah jury, which will begin work within a week, that it undertake the investi week, that it undertake the investi-gation of the charges made against J. W. Bailey, State Dairy and Food Commissioner, that Mr. Bailey has bought furniture for his private use at state expense, has charged to the state many items of expenditure which he should have paid from his private funds and has failed to perform the duties of his office conscientiously.

funds and has falled to perform the duties of his office conscientiously.

Mr. Cameron said that he had found by examining the statutes that it was the duty of the grand jury to inquire into the conduct of a state office when malfasance, incompetency or lack of interest is charged. The state constitution provides that state officers may not be impeached, but it stipulates that others then the forwards memory. that others than the Governor, mem-bers of the Supreme Court and members of the Legislature may be prosecuted and punished by removal from office or imprisonment for incompetency, mal-feasance or corruption. It is under this law that District Attorney Cameron says he will make his recommendation to the wrand turn to the grand jury.

Deputies to Be Called.

When first questioned yesterday as to his intentions, Mr. Cameron said that it was within the rights of the grand jury to investigate the official conduct of Commissioner Balley, but intimated that he might not take action unless some one preferred a definite charge through his office. Later, however, Mr. Cameron, after having reflected, said that there were several deputies in Mr. Balley's office who could be called before the grand jury to testify and that he would himself assume the responsibility of making a recommendation sibility of making a recommendation to the grand Jury.

Paul V. Maris, replying yesterday to Mr. Balley's criticisms of his work as a deputy and to Mr. Balley's statement that he secured for Mr. Maris a position with the Federal Government,

"It is not now and has not been my disposition to make a public charge against Mr. Bailey. However, inas-much as he has seen fit to discredit the character of my services and to make statements which, if true, prove me to have been dishonorable in my action, I claim the right to answer certain statements concerning myself. To do so I will merely rearrange his remarks and permit them to answer themselves.

Bailey's Own Words Quoted.

"For example, he says: My daughter did more work for $25 a month than Maris has done for $100," and 'I recommended Maris very highly to Chief Rawl and secured his Government job for him. Now, while these statements appear rather conflicting, they are, in mendable, for do they not indicate that Mr. Balley's loyalty to our state ex-ceeds his loyalty to the Nation? Do they not reveal a master stroke of diplomacy? Surely this recommendation of me, coming from Mr. Bailey at a time when my delinquency to duty was most annoying to him, is excusable that it meant my transfer from the state to the Government. All criticism should be withheld because it did not happen to occur to Mr. Bailey that he could serve the Nation as well as the state by simply discharging me.

"The complexity of the whole situa-tion is intensified by the fact that I had not even had an offer of a Government position when I resigned, and did not receive one until some days after. In 'secured the Government position for Maris because it would afford the young man a better opportunity to rise eventually to a good position in the world' seems very strange. In view of the additional fact that he didn't even know that I had received an offer, or written an acceptance, his part appears to be openly questionable. In fact, it seems quite certain that he is taking undue credit unto himself."

The clause covering the disposition of funds collected as fines undef the pure food law states that the money shall be paid directly to the State Treasurer and shall be drawn directly from him on order of the Dairy and Food Commissioner. These accounts in no way 10 ss through the hands of the Secretary of States, who, by conthe Secretary of States, who, by con-stitution, is auditor of all executive branches of state government. DOT BERNARD IS IN FILM Former Portland Girl Can Be Seen at Star Theater.

"The Two Paths," featured at the Star Theater, is a remarkable film, both from a dramatic as well as photographic point of view. It has an added local interest as many persons recognized Miss Dot Bernard, formerly of Portland, as one of the characters in eternal struggle between the good and evil elements of life. Two sisters dwell in some humble home, the scene being possibly laid in some East Side tenement in New York. One of them is at the sewing machine. the other dreaming. A woman of fashion, accompanied by a rich, insinu-ating person, representing money, powating person, representing money, pow-er and temptation enters. The man tries to draw each sister to him in turn. The industrious girl protests, pointing to an aged mother asleep in a rocking chair. Then this tempter, conscious of the weaker will of the other, pleads and finally succeeds in inducing the other to follow him.

The picture next presents the hum-ble but honest courtship, marriage and life of the girl who preferred virtuous toll. The tempter lavishes everything on the weaker girl, but soon tires of her and orders her thrust out. Here the artistic dramatic power of Miss Bernard is well shown. The girl tot-ters out and finds her way to quarters not yet quite fully degraded but suf-ficiently different to show the contrast. Her descent then is depicted until the tragic end, which is an illustration of high powers reached by Miss Ber-

Madam Tetrazinni visited the Star Theater and was deeply interested in what she saw, paying a very high com-pliment to the appropriate music of Harry Thorn.

The management offered to give to Tetraxinni a private exhibition of Il Trovatore, a picture soon to be released, which opera she has sung suc-cessfully so many times. She was de-lighted at the suggestion and on her return to the city will avail herself of the privilege. Were it not for her pending contracts the management would make her an offer to sing "La Miserere" in the production of "I Trovatore.'
