

BUILDING OF ROAD
AFTER TWO MONTHS SALE

Transfer of Rights by Hill to Harriman Removes Other Obstacles.

EAST AND WEST WAY OPEN

Concessions Made in Malheur Canyon Will Permit Construction as Soon as Financial Arrangements Are Made.

Early construction by the Harriman system of an east and west line from Vale to Odell or some other point on the Natron-Klamath road now nearing completion, is made possible by the transfer of important right-of-way through Malheur Canyon by the Hill interests to the Oregon Eastern Railroad, a part of the new Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company, announced in The Oregonian yesterday.

Outcome Depends on Bonds.

While such announcement has not yet been made, it is understood that some of the bonds which will be placed upon the market as soon as the permanent organization is completed will be used in this development. The object of organizing the new company, if the bonds find a ready sale enough money will be available to carry on all the projects. The ability to meet the bonds, officials of the company declare, depends largely upon public sentiment. If the attitude of the people of the Northwest is such as to demand more legislation, thereby discouraging railroad enterprises, the value of the bonds may shrink and the company may decide not to offer the full issue for sale. Without these funds available, they point out, future development may be retarded.

Bar Seemingly Removed.

What probably delayed activity there as much as anything else, so far as the Harriman system is concerned, was the Hill interests had secured title to a strip about 70 miles long through a portion of the Malheur Canyon that in many places permitted the construction of a right-of-way for a railroad. This was the scheme of the Harriman system effectively "blocked." At the same time it was virtually impossible for the Hill interests to build a road that would be of commercial value, as the Harriman had obtained valuable rights-of-way at either end of their 70-mile strip. It was the Hill interests incorporated the Boise & Western Railroad Company with every ostensible intent and purpose of building and operating a line. The people formed on the railroad situation, this move was taken merely as a further step to "block" the plans of the Harrimans.

Rights Are Agreed Upon.

W. W. Cotton, local attorney for the Harriman road, in discussing the transaction yesterday said: "Prior to September, 1909, the Oregon Eastern Railroad Company made a survey through the Malheur Canyon, from Vale to the Harney Valley, and filed its maps in the United States Land Office, and these were duly approved by the Secretary of the Interior, so that the Oregon Eastern acquired a right-of-way across the public lands. After this survey was made and the right-of-way was acquired, the Boise & Western Railway Company was incorporated, and prior to the making of any survey by it, the Boise & Western took deeds across the land of some private owners in the Malheur Canyon for a right-of-way described with reference to the center line of the Oregon Eastern. Afterward, the Boise & Western made a survey through the Malheur Canyon, laying coincident with the line of the Oregon Eastern, and creating it several times afterwards, the Boise & Western took new deeds from private owners, with whom they previously dealt, in which the last deeds of right-of-way is described with reference to the center line of the Boise & Western.

300 FARMERS TO MEET

STUDENTS TO CO-OPERATE

Civic Problems to Be Discussed at Commonwealth Conference.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Or., Jan. 12.—(Special.)—Another feature has been added to the Commonwealth Conference programme for tomorrow afternoon in the form of an informal student-body meeting. Students will co-operate in the commonwealth movement by a limited discussion of civic problems now before the state.

lation, forestry laws and water power taxation are some of the themes under advisement.

It is expected that a minor objection will be raised against the good roads legislation advocated by Judge Webster. The interested students believe that one of the board should be a consulting engineer, preferably the head of the civil engineering department of the university. It is believed that the stand taken by Governor West in his message for a State Forest Reserve will be approved by the committee. The programme arranged for Saturday is as follows:

Forenoon session—"Development of a Public Health Conscience Among the People of Oregon," paper by Dr. William House, of Portland; discussion by leading physicians of Eugene; "The Lawyers' Problem," paper by A. E. Clark, of Portland; discussion led by Judge Will R. King and Judge W. T. Slater, retiring members of the State Supreme Court.

"Pajamas" Is Disease
Thinks Bellboy.

Victim of Ailment Is Travelling Salesman Robbed of All His Clothes by Two Joking Confidantes.

"SAY, there's a man up in 725 who's got the pajamas."

Earl, the black mascot of M. C. Dickerson, rolled the whites of his eyes around at M. K. MacRae, chief clerk at the Oregon Hotel.

"The pajamas!" the pajamas!" exclaimed the bellboy.

Tommy Keogh, a traveling man, had held 725 since he was the victim of a joke at the Oregon Hotel more than a year ago, when fellow knights of the grip advertised for 75 chorus girls with directions to call at his room. Chief of Police Cox was among the callers, and pulled the bewildered Tommy out of his room into the midst of a collection of female Thespian went over to the Oregon Hotel, where he lived a quiet life until yesterday, when Tim Flaherty and Herman Brandt told the mascot of Dickerson that Tommy had the pajamas.

"De-boss over dere says he is frothin' as much as to climb de wall, de climb de wall," gasped Earl. "De boss he done took dat hydrophobia from Wallowa County and it done grow to pajamas!"

By this time the telephone bell rang and the bellboy came in with an excited voice Tommy yelled to the operator.

"Send me up a suit of clothes. Somebody's been chockin' and unchookin' me. I have on the pajamas I have on. Tim and Herman's got 'em."

"Fair central did not know Tim and Herman" and excitedly appealed to MacRae.

"It tole yu' he had de pajamas!" shouted the mascot.

MacRae noticed Flaherty and Brandt across the lobby chattering and unchookin' a pair of overalls from the janitor, a flannel shirt from the porter and an apron from one of the waiters were sent to room 725.

Then there was more violent ringing at the telephone and Keogh shouted over the wire:

"Cut it out. This has gone far enough. If yo' don't send me my clothes, I come down stairs in my pajamas and lick the first man I meet in the lobby."

Brandt and Flaherty then sent up a note, and in the meantime of 10 minutes dispatched an umbrella, hat, shirt, collar, shoes, coat and trousers.

GIRL'S APPEAL MYSTIFIES

Police Search Lodging-Houses for Supposed Prisoner.

Answering the appeal contained in a letter from a woman, which said that the writer was being held prisoner in a First-street lodging-house, Sergeant Goetz and Patrolmen Martine and Shafer, visited every room in every lodging-house on that street yesterday night, without finding the prisoner. They are inclined to set down the letter as a hoax or as the production of a lunatic, though not entirely satisfied that it was not written in good faith. The letter follows:

"Dear police—I am down here in a room on First street, in a big, dark room, where I have been for a long time. I lived in the mountains with my father and he fell sick and I came to Portland to get work. I got a room on First street and the women put me in a dark room and would not let me out. I had a baby boy and they smothered it to death. I am 18 years old."

The writer went on to say that a man, who had been sent in to visit her, had promised to mail the letter. The writer gave her name as Lillie Cooper and said that her father was John Cooper, but did not tell where he could be found. The letter is confined in an envelope in evidence and agitation, whether from insanity or other cause, is not known.

Neighbor Who Rolled Young Man in Mud Is Acquitted—Veteran of Civil War, 80 Years Old, Is Complainant.

Appealing to the courts for justice upon an unfilial son, Eli Creekpaum, 80 years old and a veteran of the Civil War, in Municipal Court yesterday morning, told of being assaulted and ejected from the house which is his property, into the cold night, without sufficient clothing to cover his body. The episode is the latest in a turmoil of many months, in which the old veteran has twice been committed to the insane asylum, though within the present week he has been held mentally sound in the county court.

A. D. Creekpaum, the son, living at 1433 East Stark street, was on trial, charged with assaulting his father, and Montavilla in the courtroom to bear witness. Creekpaum, the elder, following an attack of pneumonia, and on account of his great age, recently showed signs of falling mentally and was committed to the asylum. Later he was paroled, was sent back, and was finally discharged as cured. During his incarceration, his son acted as his guardian and drew his pension of $15 a month.

Policeman Barred Out.

The present trouble arose when the father put a stick of wood in the stove and was told by the son that he must buy his own wood. Then he said, he was thrown forcibly out of the house, without his overcoat or the medicine which he was required to use. Patrolman Stillwell was appealed to, and told of going back to the house with the old man and admittance being refused him. At this point in the trial Deputy District Attorney Hennesey cried out, "Shame, shame; this man is in the hands of his friends, now."

Son Whipped by Neighbor.

Jointly with this case was tried one against W. B. Nutting, in which Creekpaum, the younger, was the complaining witness. When the veteran was ejected from his home, Mrs. Nutting called the son, as she testified yesterday, "a lantern-jawed, hatchet-faced, long-legged cur, and Creekpaum attempted to hold Nutting to account for the offense. Nutting, though much older, was the better man and rolled Creekpaum in the mud and blackened his eye.

FRANZO'S FINE RETURNED

Municipal Court Procedure Is Held Faulty by Circuit Court.

Faulty procedure in the Municipal Court received a blow yesterday in Circuit Court, when Judge McGinnis, upon a writ of review in the case of Gus Franzo, found that the lower court had exceeded its jurisdiction in proceeding without a written complaint and ordered the return of $96 which Franzo had paid as a fine. The District Attorney, accepting the views that the former action was faulty, arraigned Franzo for the second time in the lower court and will endeavor to have him held to the grand jury for giving liquor to a minor.

Franzo was arrested by Patrolman Bunn for giving liquor to a minor boy and girl. He was convicted and fined $100. Then Attorney M. O. Wilkins applied for a writ of review, and a new warrant was issued for Franzo, and the theory that if the writ were sustained he had not been in jeopardy. In court Franzo denied that he had authorized the attorney to act for him or that he wished any review of his case. Wilkins alleges that he has a written authorization from Franzo.

Franzo's case, upon his second arrest, will come up as a preliminary hearing this morning. His attorney says that he will try to have his client proceed against Chief of Police Cox for false arrest.

Company Will Consent.

Officials of the Mount Hood Railway & Power Company said yesterday that they would agree to the demands of the residents to supply regular street car service and would not object to the proposed amendment.

"We have a splendid chance to get a streetcar line in a district which is growing rapidly and is now in need of such an improvement," said Charles L. Boss. "It is up to the people themselves to say whether they want this service and now is the time to act."

The present seems to be objection to the proposed franchise by some residents who fear that the proposed road will operate freight cars on the line within the city limits. Such an attitude is based solely upon misrepresentation, as the franchise will absolutely prohibit the operation of any cars except passenger and express cars. It is known that arrangements have been made by the company to deliver all freight in the city down Sullivan's Gulch over the O.-W. R. & N. tracks.

Several Districts Served.

"The present operating company has promised several times to give us car service, but we have never received it. If the proposed franchise is passed with the provision included for regular streetcar service, we will be satisfied."

Among the districts that will be served by the proposed line are Holladay Park, Carter's Addition, East Holladay Addition, Wild Rose Addition, Broadway Addition, Irvington, John Irving's Addition and Holladay Addition.

The proposed line will enter the city from the Barr road into Holladay street at East Twenty-fourth street and will continue north to Weldier, then west on Weldier to Wheeler, then north to Broadway, then to the proposed Broadway bridge.

A meeting will be held tonight by those of the East Side residents who are opposed to the franchise. The place of meeting will be at Twenty-fourth and Broadway streets.
