POINDEXTER DECLARED IN

Ratification of His Election as United States Senator Takes but Eight Minutes—Victor Thanks Legislature for Vote.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Jan. 18.—(Special).—When members of the Washington legislature met in joint session at noon today to ratify the votes of the people at the last general election in the choice of Miles PoinDEXTER, it took but eight minutes to complete the formalities and the session dissolved almost before the gallery crowd knew what had taken place.

After the rollcall of both houses, President Pauhanus of the Senate directed the reading of the report of the separate ballot of the Senate yesterday and the same was done in determining the ballot of the House, showing large majority votes for PoinDEXTER. The formal announcement then followed declaring PoinDEXTER elected United States Senator from Washington for the term beginning March 4, next. The procedure was entirely perfunctory and there was no applause on the floor, while handclapping in the gallery was scattering.

LAWYER EXTORTS LICENSE

He Says "Yah" in Reply to Momentous Question, She Says "Yes," Chewing Gum—Vancouver Is Scene of Strange Union.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Jan. 18.—(Special).—In the presence of two young couples who have just been married, a white woman giving her age as 25 years was married to a Chinaman in the County Commissioners' room at the courthouse today at 2 o'clock by Lloyd Davis, Justice of the Peace.

This is one of the two couples who last Thursday attempted to get marriage licenses here, and who later went to Stevenson in vain. With the couple today was Henry Cross, an attorney, who was prepared to serve mandamus proceedings on the County Auditor, in case he refused to issue the licenses.

The ceremony was one of the shortest on record. When Justice Davis asked the necessary questions and read out the papers, he commanded: "Stand up."

Bride Chews Gum at Wedding. Miss Minnie Nelson, 24 years old, dressed in a black silk coat that reached to the bottom of her carmine-colored dress, and wearing a black hat from the top of which floated two scanty ostrich plumes, and her face partly hidden by a dark veil, arose and put out her hand, Gee Wah, the Chinaman, 42 years old, with his American clothes, soft shirt, his cue clipped off and the top of his head bald, slowly arose and grasping the hand of his bride-to-be with his right, nodded assent for the ceremony to proceed. His face was expressionless.

Said the Justice to the Celestial: "Do you take this woman to be your wife, and will you support her for life?" To which he mumbled: "Yah."

Looking toward Miss Nelson, who was chewing gum vigorously, he said, "Do you take this Chinaman for your lawful husband, and will you live with him for life?"

Stopping long enough to mash the gum between her teeth four times and with a laugh, she almost granted "Yes."

"Then, by the authority of the law invested in me, I pronounce you legally wedded as man and wife," said the Justice.

Kissing Is Dispensed With. There was no kissing, no effusion of affection, but the newly made bride stepped to the other side of the room to talk with some men who were known to her, while Gee Wah signed the necessary papers and paid the fee.

Geo. Wah consented to go to a gallery to have his picture taken with his white wife, but she objected strenuously, and said, "Me for Portland to spend my money."

In leaving the courthouse Gee Wah went on ahead of the bride, who lingered on the steps, and she said, "I am going to Portland to spend my money. I know the way."

And the wedding crowd disappeared down Eleventh street, towards the ferry.

In the marriage return Gee Wah said he was a cook and that he worked, was a native of China, but had been a long time in America. He recently purchased a restaurant from Martin Finerman, who was witness today. Miss Nelson was a waitress in the restaurant when Gee Wah first met her. She said she was a native of New Jersey and a daughter of John Nelson, but that she had a stepfather.
