"This action is taken to cover secret negotiations by any club, a member of organized baseball, with a player under contract and playing with a club member of organized baseball, without the consent of the latter club, and does not apply to this case.

Hetling Portland's Property.

"We find that Hetling signed a con tract with Portland on April 22, and the same was duly promulgated by this office; that Hetling played with the Portland club up to September 5; that Portland never released Hetling from this contract; that the loan of this player to Spokane for a period of approximately three weeks was fairly understood by both clubs as being simply a loan of a player's services (which loan, however, is contrary to law); fur, ther, that title to Hetling is vested in the Portland club; that Hetling is reserved by the Portland club, and is not reserved or claimed by Spokane, and that the Portland club never lost title to this player, and for this reason the decision of the president of the Pacific Coast League, in so far as it credits Oaklaand with winning three games and charges Portland with losing three games, must be vacated.

"Spokane offers no defense to the charge of using a farmed player, contenting itself with paying the fine imposed; the fine of $100 each against Portland and Spokane is therefore affirmed."

At the end of that ex-tended time limit Mr. Grilley again called upon the teams for the floor. He tried to attract the attention of the referse, but could not, and there-upon requested Coach Fenstermacher, of Washington High School, to blow the whistle, calling the game. It is customary when the gams is called, except when one team leaves the field to allow the game to go to the lead-ing team, say the Washington players. Since it was the fault of the Y. M. C.
