POOR CHANCE FOR RECIPROCIITY NOW

Senate Unlikely to Adopt Canadian Tariff Agreement This Session.

INSURGENTS IN QUANDRY

Senators Confronted on One Hand by Declarations of Policy and on Other by Insistent Demands of Constituents.

Division Not Clear

Continued discussion of the agreement has failed to bring about a clear division of the Senate, for a number of Senators who are generally regarded as supporters of the agreement are undecided whether such reciprocity is desirable or otherwise.

Insurgents Are Embarrassed

Naturally these Senators are opposed to the ratification of the agreement, notwithstanding it lowers a number of the rates fixed by the Payne-Aldrich law.

Outlook Not Bright

As stated above, the outlook for the ratification of the Canadian agreement is not bright.

Pressure May Be Brought

There is always a possibility that pressure from the White House will swing a number of Senators into line.
