He endured with embarrassment the ordesi of hearing many of his letters read in court and he strongly objected to some of the translations made from the French. In one letter he compared Miss Grunapan to Milton's poetic con-trasts, "L'Allegro" and "Il Pensoroso." be guae she was "glad and sad" by turns. The resolution was introduced by Representative Norris, of Nebraska, and is directed toward obtaining information regarding an alleged arrangement between the Brazilian government and the subordinate State of Sao Palo and syndicate of foreigners, including Americans, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., for a monopoly in the coffee traf-fic out of Brazil.

The resolution as adopted asks for a variety of information as to what steps the Government has taken to determine whether the anti-trust and conspiracy laws have been violated and the results of such steps. It also seeks to learn what prosecutions, if any, have been instituted.

The introduction of the resolution caused a flurry in the New York coffee market some days ago.

Mr. Norris said he had evidence that Brazii was organizing a rubber trust to centrol the supply and price of raw rubber. He said he intended early in the extra session to introduce a resolution for an inquiry into the whole situation unless the Department of Justice took vigorous steps.

Lawyer for Mother of Girl Seeking Part of Baldwin Fortune Says Notorious Life Is Part of History of State.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 2 .- Retallating for the attack made upon the character and morality of their chief witness, Mrs. Lillian Ashley Turnbull. the attorneys seeking to break "Lucky" Baldwin's will on behalf of Miss Anita Turnbull, spent most of today covering with obloquy the memory of the famous

During the course of his argument against the motion for a directed ver-dict in favor of the estate, Attorney Dockweller declared that the "nauseous escapades and the reputation of E. J. Baldwin were so notorious that they were interwoven in the warp and woof of the history of the state."

On the other hand, not a man living, he declared, could accuse Mrs. Turnbull of a single transgression of the moral law since the day she parted from Baldwin on learning that he had de ceived her into a shameful travesty arriage. The 18th anniversary of this leged deception will fall tomorrow, Dockweller also accused the lawyers of the opposing side of having attempted to induce Judge Rives by their motion to rule upon the facts of the case, thereby invading the functions of the jury, and he appealed to the Judge to protect the rights of Miss Turnbull as a ward of the court, in her endeavor to establish her right to a name. This, he declared, she valued more than a $2,500,000 share of the Baidwin estate.

The arguments on the motion will not be concluded until Tuesday, to which day Judge Rives adjourned the case.

That the will of the late "Lucky" Baidwin was bungled and was a legal scarecrow which could not cut off anyone with a legitimate claim, were among the assertions made today by Attorney A. W. Hutton in his argument. Dockweiler also accused the lawyers of

"THE TWINKLE IN YOUR EYE"

People's eyes are pretty much allke, so far as inherent beauty is concerned. The eyes of the ravish-ingly beautiful young woman are made up of the same material, put together in the same way, as put together in the same way, as ours.

What we commonly speak of as the expression of a person's eyes doesn't come from the eye at all. It is produced by that part of the face surrounding the eye, which itself always retains the same expression. When we think that we see a twinkle in a person's eye, we see merely an effect produced by the action of the little muscles surrounding the eye. The eye it self doesn't twinkle.

Machanically the eye is the most delicate and complicated organism in existence. If man could fashion anything nearly so perfect, anything that would work so automatically as the eye, it would be a splendid triumph. For the organ is absolutely automatic, when the brain wishes to see anything the many muscles of the eye carry out that wish at once.
