Heavy Rains in California Check the Output - Only Three Cars Known to Be in Transit to This Market.

Local orange prices were lifted 25 cents Local orange prices were lifted 25 cents a box yesterday because of the strong position of the California market. It has been raining more or less for three weeks in that state and yesterday there was a pourdown, according to wires received. Local quotations were put out at $2.25, $2.50 and $1.75 per box. So far as can be learned, only about three cars of oranges are in transit to this market. Stocks here are much reduced because of the autive buying of the last few days.

It is unfortunate for the Los Angeles suction schouls that such weather conditions should prevail at the beginning of the entershould prevail at the beginning of the enter-prise. The interest displayed at the latest sales, however, indicates that when the growers can put out a heavier supply the anction market will become an active one. The stockholders and officers of the action company are well satisfied with the results far obtained and say that if the auction so far obtained and say that if the auction company in Los Angeles can sell from S to 10 cars a day at their tri-weekly sales which hereafter will be on Mondays. Wed-nesdays and Fridays, they will establish a market on scanges which will affect every market in the United States.

Although wheat values were higher early, following an unexpected advance at Liverpool, this advantage was lost and the market began to weaken further when the fact became apparent that there was no sign of either domestic or foreign demand worth a mention. Instead, there was moderate selling here, both for Europe and the Argentine. It was pointed out that the world's available supply had reached a total of 182,045,000 bushels against 145,673,600 bushels a year ago. A number of amail longs, moreover, manifested a disposition to unload, pending the issuance of United States Government report on farm reserves.
