

OUTRAGE GUARD AGAINST PLAGUE Incoming Ships to Undergo Rigid Inspection at Hands of Officers.

DANGER SAID TO BE GRAVE

Rats on Vessels to Be Killed and Burned Before Boats Coming From Orient Are Allowed to Leave Quarantine.

Acting upon instructions received by City Health Officer Wheeler from Washington, D. C., to cause every Oriental ship entering this port to be inspected thoroughly, the first definite step toward guarding the city against the possibility of pneumatic plague, bubonic plague or other malignant infectious diseases was taken yesterday when members of the Board of Health, the County Commissioners and the County Commissioners and agreed upon a tentative plan to meet the situation.

While there has been no evidence of the infection here of diseases through the visit of Oriental ships, both the Federal and city health officials are necessary to inaugurate precautionary measures and subject every vessel touching Oriental ports to the strictest inspection.

According to plans that were discussed yesterday, special officers are to be detailed to work in conjunction with Harbormaster Speler in inspecting the vessels.

Strict Watch Ordered. In future, a ship that comes into this port having rats on board will be under strict surveillance.

Deputies to Be Named. Harbormaster Speler offered to give his services free and believed he would be able to devote a part of each day to the work.

Big Cargo Goes.

Probably because the British steamer Queen Alexandra met trouble in leaving the Columbia River owing to an assumption on the part of her master that he was more familiar with conditions than the pilot, the San Francisco Board of Marine Underwriters has been on the anxious seat regarding reports that the British steamer Northumbria, which got away last week for China, with a lumber cargo, was listed badly.
