BULLION TRIALS WAIT

ALASKA WITNESSES TO HAVE LONG DOG-TEAM TRIP.

District Attorney Believes More Than $40,000 of Stolen Gold Is Concealed Near Portland.

It may be several months before James Whealen and Charles Barrett are tried in the Multnomah County Circuit Court for their alleged participation in the Alaska gold bullion robbery. Deputy United States District Attorney Evans visited State District Attorney Cameron yesterday to have an understanding regarding several Alaska witnesses who are to testify. These three witnesses will be obliged to make the journey from Iditarod to Fairbanks, Alaska, by dog team, will go from there to Seattle by boat, and thence will come by train to Portland. On account of the long dog-team journey, Mr. Evans thought it would be unwise to have the case set for trial as early as the accused men are seeking to have it, and thought best therefore, to talk the subject over with Mr. Cameron.

More than $40,000 of the stolen bullion is secreted in or near Portland, says District Attorney Cameron. He bases the declaration upon information gathered at the time of the indictment of the accused men and on statements made yesterday by officials of the insurance company which carried the loss. Nate Solomon, a jeweler, whose name is mentioned in the indictment against Whealen and Barrett, was the buyer of $400 worth of the bullion. He was apprehended later with another offer, but he became suspicious and refused to deal further.

Proof is in the hands of the District Attorney that at one time the whole or a great part of the bullion was deposited in the safe of a Portland merchant, but it is not there now. A small quantity was sold in Salem. An effort will be made to have Orville Cavanaugh brought to Portland from San Francisco, to further the effort being made by Detectives Heller and Moloney and Secret Service Operator Connell to find the lost bullion.

TRACK REMOVAL ARGUED

ELEVENTH-STREET CASE TO BE DECIDED NEXT WEEK.

Decision Affects Financially Large Number of Property Owners Paying for Paving.

Closing arguments made by four attorneys yesterday afternoon regarding the right of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company to remove one of its street railway tracks from Eleventh street, involved a number of technical features that will require reference to laws and decisions on the part of Judge Gantenbein, before whom the case was argued, and it is expected that a decision will not be reached before Tuesday or perhaps not until Thursday of next week.

The decision of the case will not only affect in a financial way a large number of property-owners, who must pay for the hard surface improvement of Eleventh street, but will be used as a precedent in deciding a number of cases expected to follow, involving the right of the streetcar company to remove tracks at will in order to escape the payment of an important part of the street improvement.

The ordinance granting the franchise for the Eleventh-street road was analyzed and interpreted differently by the opposing counsel in the case yesterday afternoon.

On behalf of the city and the property-owners, Deputy City Attorney Latourette and Ralph Dunway made arguments, while Attorneys F. W. Holman and Franklin Griffith spoke in favor of the company's interests.

In one place the franchise says that the company will have the right to change from a single to a double track, or from a double to a single track, while in another section it is provided that any change in the construction of the line can only be made by consent of the Council.

BIBLE ADVERTISER HIT

COUNCIL MAY BE ASKED TO REVOKE LIQUOR LICENSE.

"Advertising Sale of Liquor by Use of Scripture Most Repulsive," Declares Councilman Cellars.

"Give this card to the proprietor and tell him I suggested that he take that Bible out of his window," said Councilman Cellars yesterday morning to the man in charge of a family liquor store at 253 Washington street. Mr. Cellars did not exactly like the idea of the use of the copy of the Scriptures for advertising purposes. However, the sacred volume was still in the window yesterday afternoon.

The Bible is opened at the passage in Timothy where it reads: "Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities."

"I think that the use of the Bible for advertising purposes of any kind had enough, but to use it in the interests of the sale of liquor is, to my mind, most repulsive," said Mr. Cellars. "I feel like asking the Council to revoke that man's license. If the Council were in session today, I would do so; I may do it when the Council does meet unless he takes that Bible out of his window. I have no patience at all with that scheme to attract attention and I believe it would be a first-class means of poisoning a little sense into liquor dealers' heads just to revoke this license."

The unusual means of advertising is attracting large crowds of Washington-street pedestrians and is causing no end of comment.
