LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 3L-(Spe cial.)-It was a battle of southpaws to day and Archer, who made his bow for the Beavers, did not show quite as much class as Klein, Herry's southpaw, the Angele winning 5 to 1.

However, it was an off day with the visitors and Archer did not have as good support as Klein did. The Angels played an errorless game while the three errors of the Portland team were costly. Klein also had the crowd of fans with him, which helped some. Every time he appeared, he was given a round of applause.

The game was short on bensations and features. Sheehan made the first hit off Klein in the fourth inning, with a single to right. A moment later he stole second and scored on Rapps' double to right center. It was the only run the visitors managed to acquire during their nine Delmas turned his ankle in sliding into third and Delhi; the small but fleet youngster, was put in to run for him. Smith sent a long saurifice fly to Chadourne, Delhi scoring and Deal going to third after the catch. Klein singled to right ecoring Deal. The Beavers then pulled together and Alken Metzger retired. In the seventh, Archer gave way to Arlett.

Walter F. Backus explained his mode Walter F. Backus explained his mode of flycasting, giving a practical demonstration, so far as the limited quarters would permit. He told the fishermen what artificial trout lures to use for the various streams of the state and gave a great deal of good fishing advice. Mr. Backus, who is one of the officers of the Portland Flycasting Club, announced that beginning about April 15 a member of the club would be at the Stark-street wharf to instruct in the act of flycasting on Wednesday nights. A series of flycasting meets nights. A series of flycasting meets for this Summer is being arranged. Joseph Paquet, an old-time fisherman and sportsman of Western Oregon, told of the habits of salmon, explained where to catch them and what bait to use. Mr. Paquet was a Columbia River fisherman and caught a bass in a fish wheel at the Cascades long before they were supposed to have been planted in Oregon waters.

Dr. Ney Churchman had as his topic "The Bass Family." Dr. Churchman explained a great deal about this species of fish. General discussion of fishing topics was engaged in follow-ing the regular business transacted by the club. The trout fishing season begins April 1 at sunrise. It has been announced by the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company that a fishercar will be run to Clackamas points Saturday and Sunday mornings.

Ad. Wolgast Pounds San Francisco Man Until Seconds Throw Up Sponge.

FIGHT LASTS FIVE ROUNDS

'Butchertown Idol' Is Knocked Down Repeatedly and Spectators Importune Referee to Stop Punishment of Beaten Man.

AUDITORIUM PAVILION, San Franelsco, March 31.-Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion, gave short shrift to Antone La Grave, a rather obscure local fighter, whose seconds threw up the sponge in the fifth round. Wolgast battled his opponent about the ring, landing whenever and wherever he chose.

The fight was too one-sided to be interesting. Wolgast took command of affairs at the very outset and the "Buichertown idol" was never given an opportunity to rest or land a return

In the second round, the champion almost brought the bout to a quick end-ing by sending La Grave through the ropes with a terrific right to the jaw, and followed this by flooring his man for the count of nine,

"Stop," Cry Spectators.

In the fourth round, La Grave took the count four tifnes at this stage spectators loudly importuned Referee Jack Welsh to stop the fight.

The fifth round Wolgast pummeling the almost helpless fighter, and realizing that La Grave could go no further, his seconds mercifully intervened and threw a towel into the ring. Wolgast was unmarked, while La Grave was badly cut up.

La Grave appeared very nervous

La Grave appeared very nervous when he entered the ring and apparently saw defeat looming up before him when the contest was on but a few sec-Wolgast never overlooked opportunity to put in a finishing blow and fairly smothered the Frenchman with all the blows of his repertoire.

Wolgast Is Favorite.

The men fought at 133 pounds ringside. Wolgast was an overwhelming favorite at odds of 19 to 4 and there were few ready to risk their money on La Grave's chances. There was, however, some betting at even money that La Grave would last 15 rounds.

La Grave entered the ring first, at 2:45 o'clock. Wolgast followed half a minute later. Time was called at 9:47 P. M.

Round One.

Wolgast crouched low and tapped his man lightly several times. After somedineffective infighting, the champion drove a solid left to the Jaw, and they mixed at lose range. Wolgast landing a right and a left to the body and head. The champion covered up cleverly, and then landed almost at will on his opponent's body and jaw. Lagrave appeared very nervous and made no showing whatever in this round, which was all Wolgast's.

Round Two.

Round Two. Round Two.

Wolgast rushed the "Butchertown ido" from one end of the ring to the other, plant ling solid lefts and rights to the body i quick succession. Wolgast fairly scintillate with speed. In one of his rushes, he drov La Grave almost through the ropes with left hook to the jaw, and a mement late felled him with a similar punch to the same place. When La Grave gut to his feel Wolgast waded in, bombarding the practically defeated local man with every variet of blow. The going rang in the nick of tim and found La Grave staggering blindly. and found La Grave staggering blindly.

Bound Three. Round Three.

LaGrave came up trembling like a leaf. The champion wusted little time, going after his man and never giving him a show. La-Grave made a few feeble attempts to counter, but his efforts were made to look ridiculous by the clever champion. Wolgast drove his man against the ropes with a rain of blows and all but sent him to the floor. La-Grave then found shelter in a very welcome cluch. His respite was short-lived, however, for the champion kept up a ceaseless tattoo, and La Grave went to his corner wabbling.

Round Four.

Round Four. Woigast chased his opponent around the ring and sent him to the floor thirles with left and right hooks to the faw. La Grave took the count on each one. The spectators began to yell "Stop it, stop it;" LaGrave went down for the fourth time, but the round ended, saving him from certain defeat. Round Five.

Wolygast went right afer his man, and the latter closed in, hoping thereby to avoid the heavy punishment being administered. Wolgast drove in short, snappy right and left smashes to the head and face. He forced the fighting and had LaGrave backing and covering up. The champion then cut loose more than ever with a veiley of mixed wallops and with LaGrave in great distress and in imminent danger of collapsing. Spider Kelly, LaGrave's second, threeg a towel into the ring, acknowledging defeat. Referee Wals's then declared Wolgast the winner.

East Side Residents. Property owners on Larrabee street and the vicinity of the East Side approach to the new rallroad bridge took steps last night at a meeting held in the office of Francis Clarno, president of the Steel Bridge Push Club, to obtain an improved street to this approach. Two petitions were approved. One is for the extension of Larrabee street through private property along the brow of the hill to the railroad bridge approach, and the other is to have the extension paved as soon as opened. Thirty per cent of the property owners interested have signed both petitions and others are expected to sign within a few days. A large district is interested in securing an open street to the new bridge by an extension of Larrabee street from Holladay avenue. Extensive Improvements at the foot of Holladay avenue will be affected by a change of the location of the railroad bridge, but the owners and residents believe they will receive some relief by this extension
