His address on that occasion was commendatory of ploneers and he also appealed strongly for support for the Navy, the Secretary of which, W. H. Moody, was a member of his official party. He did not discuss polities in any way except this in his public addresses. At 5 o'clock that evening Mr. Roosevelt was the guest of honor at a banquet at the Portland Hotel. Later he made a short informal address from a fire escape of the Rooseveit party over the North-ern Pacific lines after leaving Portland. Mr. Nutt will take personal charge of Colonel Rooseveit's tour through the Northwest and will accompany the party to Seattle tonight. Testerday motning Mr. Barbur re-ceived a telegram, saying Farson Son & Co. were greatly surprised at the action of the city in not returning the check and demanding that it be returned at once. A reply was sent them within a few minutes, as outlined, and suggesting legal proceedings. "If they ever open up this transaction in the local courts, we will probably get some interesting facts," said Mr. Bar-bur. "One thing is certain, we do not propose to turn back the check until we know some things about this deal, if we ever turn it back at all; the mare statement by the firm's attorneys that the bonds are illegal because sold for less than par will not go with us." R. L. Day & Co., of Boston, purchasers of Portland water bonds, telegraphed Mr. Barbur yesterday, inquiring the rea-son why Farson Son & Co. refused to take the Broadway bridge bonds. Mrs. M. L. Woodcock, Ill in Hos-pital, Sends Greetlags.

PROBABLY the most disappointed person in Portland because of inabillty to see Colonel Roosevelt while he is visiting this city is Mrs. M. L. Woodcock, of 408 East Pine street, at present a patient at the Good Samaritan Hospital.

Mrs. Woodcock is one of the strongest Roosevelt partisans among the members of the fair sex in the entire Northwest. On the occasion of the ex-President's previous visit to Portland, in May, 1903, she managed to evade several Secret Service men and find her way to his rooms in the Portland Hotel, which she decorated extravagantly with roses. with roses. She marched in the Roosevelt parade and when he was opposing Alton B. Parker, Democrat, for the Presidency, in 1904, she spent a good deal of time in active canvassing work in his behalf. She was equally active in canvassing for Freshient Taft, largely because she but not be Bonesvelt's normous believed him to be Roosevelt's personal choice as his successor. Fired with enthusiasm for her hero, Colonel Roosevelt, Mrs. Woodcock in 1904 wrote to the Republican National Committee and received a flag, which she immediately christened her "Teddy flag," and by which she sets great store.

This is Miss Ford's first the to the Pacific Coast and she is enthusiastic in her praise of the Northwest and its people. "Before I came out here." She said, "I had met a great many folk from out this way, and had heard tok for out this way and had heard ing "mentioned" as prospective candi-dates for Councilman-at-Large are Ralph C.
