ROOSEVELT WOULD EFFACE HIMSELF

Colonel Will Not Run at All in 1912; Would Prefer Not to Run in 1916.

OTHER LEADER PREFERRED

No Indication Seen Now That Voters Desire His Candidacy, and Personally He Opposes Movement for Nomination.

ROOSEVELT'S POSITION AS TO CANDIDACY OUTLINED.

First—He refuses to be a candidate in 1912.

Second—Should the Republican party meet disaster in 1912 and the Democratic President prove to be a reactionary, he will become a candidate in 1916.

Third—If there is some other progressive leader in country able to represent his views in 1916 he would prefer that this leader be a candidate.

Fourth—He must be convinced that the Republican voters of the country desire his candidacy.

Fifth—He can see no indications now which would lead him to think that he is desired as head of the party ticket.

Sixth—Personally he is opposed to a nomination and would view with regret a movement in that direction.

That he will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Presidency in 1912; that under certain conditions he might be in 1916 and that he is personally opposed to becoming a candidate are the unquestioned conclusions at which Theodore Roosevelt has arrived as the result of his tour of the South and of the Pacific Coast. Such are his private expressions and, although he is willing that "a local friend" be quoted as making the statement, he is averse to making the announcement as coming directly from himself.

For 35 days Mr. Roosevelt has been traveling through the country, possibly with a view of gauging the feeling of the people toward his own political personality and reputation. He spoke from five to ten times a day during the entire journey from Oyster Bay to St. Paul, Minn., where he is today. He received expressions of opinion from hundreds of men of prominence and in each state he had a faculty for picking out the "progressive" leader, whether Democrat or Republican. In California he consulted with Governor Johnson, a "progressive of progressives." In Oregon he sought the counsel of W. S. U'Ren. In Washington Senator Poindexter was his adviser, and in Idaho he talked with those who advocated the platform "for the common good." It was the same in New Mexico, Arizona, Texas and the Southern states. In Montana, North Dakota, Minnesota, it was the same, while in Wisconsin he associated with the La Follettes.

Taft in 1912 Is Forecast.

He believes now that under no circumstances would he be a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1912 and it is also his private belief that President Taft will be nominated by acclamation. However, should the Republican party meet disaster in 1912 and the Democrat elected prove to be of a reactionary type, it is barely possible that he would consent to become the candidate in 1916.

The second consideration involving this point is whether in 1916 there should be no candidate in the country thoroughly representative of "progressive" ideas in the Republican party who could in the judgment of the leaders carry the party to victory. If no one could be found he might become a candidate.

The third consideration would be that he must be convinced that the Republican voters of the country insisted that he be a candidate again. On this point he feels that the Republicans would need to express themselves in no uncertain tones.

So far as the present is concerned, Colonel Roosevelt feels that there is no indication that the people desire his candidacy and that he feels it unnecessary to make any move to secure from them an expression as to their wishes in the matter. Personally, he is of the opinion that he should not be a candidate and he desires to be considered as in not even a receptive mood to consider any movement which would lead even to a successful conclusion. He views with regret any act which would cause his nomination and prefers by far the quietude of private life. He realizes that to become a candidate before the people, even when there is a large element favorable to him would involve such a tax upon his strength and resources that he could scarcely wish to go through the task at this time of his life.

Party in Good Hands.

So far as the coming National Republican convention in June is concerned, he feels that he should at no time take part in it other than as a private citizen. He has no desire to participate in it and aid in bringing about any conclusion favorable to his friends. He believes that the party as a whole is well able to take care of itself and will do so. He is heartily in favor of the principles of new nationalism, of which he is an earnest advocate, and feels morally certain that some of these will find their way into the next platform, for the simple reason that the party as a whole feels it must do something to satisfy public clamor in this direction.

The conclusions outlined indicate clearly that in Colonel Roosevelt's opinion President Taft will be nominated by acclamation at the next Republican National convention and that the fight will be vigorous between the Republican and Democratic party leaders. It is by no means certain that the ex-President is of the opinion that the Republicans will win, for he predicates his possible candidacy in 1916 upon the defeat of the Republicans in 1912. It is said that the New York election last Fall made a profound impression upon Colonel Roosevelt, and whether he considers the verdict as a handwriting on the wall is not said, but it is evident that he fully believes that the election of 1912 leaves at least grave doubt as to the outcome.

HAHN IS GIVEN FREEDOM

WITH AFFINITY AUTOIST LEAVES GRANTS PASS JAIL.

Alleged Thief Gives Note as Security—Couple Admit They Are Not Married Yet.

GRANTS PASS, Or., April 14.—(Special.)—Fred Hahn, wanted in Portland, settled his affairs this morning upon arrival of Mr. McCarthy, of Portland. Hahn gave an additional note as security and McCarthy took a release from all damages that might arise and then Hahn was set free. With his affinity and $19 in cash he left tonight for Medford.

"We are not married, but have lived together as man and wife about five months," said Hahn. "We both agreed to this at Spokane. I went under the name of Murry there. That is the name of the woman with me. I got a loan in Portland on a revolver under the name of Richards. I was divorced last September at Spokane, and came to Portland four months ago. I mortgaged 188 acres of land in Douglas County, Washington, for $1200, then $800 and finally $3750. This woman and I want to be married, and I consider that we are, as much as we will ever be."

Marion Murry said: "I am 23 years old, was married to George Murry five years ago, lived with him a year then separated, but concluded to try married life again, but finally left for good. I came directly from Des Moines to Spokane. I have a sister in Portland named Grace James. My mother lives at Valley, Wash. I last heard of my husband at Denver. He is a decorator. I understand he was killed in a wreck there lately. I am waiting to hear from there now. If he is dead I can marry Hahn."

CONVICTS TO MAKE BRICKS

Washington Authorities Decide to Move Plant to New Asylum.

OLYMPIA, Wash., April 14.—(Special.)—It was announced by the State Board of Control today that although there are two cement plants located near the new Northern Hospital for the insane at Sedro-Woolley, the Board will probably move the brick plant from the Penitentiary at Walla Walla to Sedro-Woolley, install a convict camp and make the brick necessary for the new buildings.

This move is contemplated on account of the high price of cement. When the state purchased the site at Sedro-Woolley it acquired a fine bank of clay. In addition there is plenty of wood, so that first-class bricks can be produced at a reasonable cost.

The first building to be erected will be the central hospital, which will have accommodations for 160 patients. The architects have already completed plans for the new water system which includes a big reservoir and the building of a dam to furnish power for the driving of the dynamos which will furnish light and power for the place. The water system will cost about $30,000.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The center of the Western high-pressure area has moved east to Idaho and the Eastern storm has nearly disappeared in Canada north of New York. Heavy frosts occurred this morning generally throughout the North Pacific States, but during the afternoon the temperatures rose from four to ten degrees. Light rain has fallen in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, the Ohio Valley, lower Lake region and the Middle Atlantic States. No precipitation has fallen in the Rocky Mountain or Pacific States. It is much cooler in New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Northern Texas.

The conditions are favorable for fair and warmer weather in this district Saturday, preceded tonight by heavy frost.

FORECASTS.

Portland and vicinity—Fair and warmer; northerly winds.

Oregon and Washington—Fair, warmer, except near the coast; north to east winds.

Idaho—Fair and warmer.

ROOSEVELT LIKED FOR HIS MORALITY

Correspondent With Colonel on Long Trip Says People Are Agreed.

BABY IDEA IS POPULAR

Ex-President Wins Admiration by Intimate Contact — His Preference Is for Private Life, Says K. L. Simpson.

"Thirty-five Days With Roosevelt" might be chosen as the title of a book, should Kirk L. Simpson, the Associated Press representative, who arrived in Portland yesterday on his way from Helena, Mont., to his home office in San Francisco, decide to write a narrative of his most recent experiences. Mr. Simpson is a nephew of William M. Killingsworth, of Portland, president of the Realty Board, and during the day was Mr. Killingsworth's guest.

In the 35 days since March 8 Mr. Simpson has constantly been at the side of Mr. Roosevelt in making the trip from Oyster Bay through the South, across the plains, the full length of the Pacific Coast and then on to Helena, where "good-byes" were given. Mr. Simpson had ample opportunity to secure an intimate impression of the ex-President's characteristics and view the sidelights of the personality of one of the country's most noted men.

"An intimate view of Roosevelt from the viewpoint of a newspaper man," said Mr. Simpson yesterday, "leads directly to the conclusion that he is a man of great attainments. He is a good man, a moral man, companionable, and at all times a gentleman. There is no more democratic citizen in the country than the Colonel. He would carry his own satchels readily enough, and even prefers to do it.

Secretary Thinks Him Hero.

"The best evidence of his nobility of character lies in the fact that his private secretary believes him a hero. So, when those closest to him think he is a good man and of a high type of the ideal American gentleman, there must be something to it.

"The public has gained some odd notions regarding the Colonel," continued Mr. Simpson. "One of them is that he used the word d-e-c-l-i-g-h-t-e-d constantly. I remember his asking Mrs. Roosevelt on this trip the question: 'Do I ever use the word "delighted" or "bully?" She replied, 'I do not believe you use the word "delighted," but you sometimes say "bully."' And that was true. I do not remember hearing him use the word 'delighted' on the trip.

"While the Colonel is affable and democratic, you cannot encroach upon his rights as a gentleman. No one would expect any other answer than a merited rebuke if he took undue liberties with the Colonel. Vulgarity is absolutely abhorrent to his nature, and at the same time no one more loves a joke or a bit of humor—couched in the right form—than the ex-President. I have never enjoyed a more pleasant association with a man than I have in the trip that I have just finished with the Colonel.

"He is a great admirer of Portland, and in his conversation said that he believed that Portland had a better outlook than any other city on the Coast. He based his reasoning upon the fact that Oregon was the least developed now of any section of the Coast in proportion to its resources, and would receive a quicker and more rapid growth than any portion of the country in consequence. He certainly enjoyed his visit here, and the banquet where he was entertained so lavishly by your people created a lasting impression upon his mind.

Private Life His Preference.

"Personally, I believe that Mr. Roosevelt would prefer being a private citizen. The trip just taken is the last one of its character that will be taken by Mr. Roosevelt. He expects to retire and become in every sense of the word a private citizen. There will be no more back-porch speeches for him, and so far as giving his sermons from a rear platform, I do not think that the country will have a chance to hear Roosevelt in that capacity again. As soon as he can, without disturbance to his natural order of life, he will make a journey to the Pacific Coast to take a rest or hunt, as the case may be.

"One of the unique features of the trip was the character of the people who surrounded the train as it traveled from town to town. Of course, the whole country knows Mr. Roosevelt's position upon the baby question, and it seems to have made the strongest impression in the smaller places. When the train arrived there would be staid business men with babies in their arms, as living evidence of the faith they have in what Mr. Roosevelt preached. It indicated that not only did they believe in what the Colonel advocated, but they had put the doctrine into practice and were at the train to show the ex-President the result.

"To me it was one of the remarkable results of what a leader in thought can accomplish by advocating a certain doctrine. Here were men and women who felt it their duty to come to the train—invariably with their offspring in their arms or baby carriage to show that they were doing their duty. To me it is evident that Colonel Roosevelt has a strong hold with the masses and they believe that he is a moral man of the highest type of citizenship, without regard to what they may think of his political faith.

"As to National politics, the Colonel refused at all times to be interviewed upon the subject and refrained from making any comment which would have a direct bearing upon the choice of candidates. I am inclined to think that in all our journeying—and we were received cordially everywhere—that the stay in Portland was one of the most enjoyable that we had. The day was lovely, the banquet was a delight and the crowd was all that could be expected."

STUDENTS USE PRIMARY

Washington University Scholars to Follow State's Lead.

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON, Seattle, April 14.—(Special.)—Student politics will be run on a far different basis than it has been previously conducted. The direct primary will take the place of the much-heated nominating convention. No phase of college activities is more bitter and more dreaded than the week of campaigning, in which many rash measures are resorted to.

Next week Washington will elect her new officers on the same basis as the state elections are carried on. At another election the candidates nominated will be voted upon.

Big Farm Brings $10,000.

OREGON CITY, Or., April 14.—(Special.)—M. E. Swope, who arrived in this city last week in company with his wife and six children, has purchased the Chris Hornshuh farm at Beaver Creek. Mr. Swope is from Merrill, Wis., and is delighted with the climate. He traveled in many sections of the state and returned to Oregon City. The farm consists of 86 acres, 66 of which are under cultivation. The price was $10,000.

Valuable Property and Good Abstracts

—Go hand in hand.

The more rapidly property increases in value, the greater the need of good abstract work.

Men who buy valuable business property always insist on an abstract prepared by one of the thoroughly reliable concerns.

Then they have it examined by a reputable attorney. But remember that the attorney can only give his opinion on what the abstract shows.

An abstract compiled by any member of this association will show all there is of record that affects the title to the property under search.

If they do leave anything out—and you were to lose money or lose a sale through their omission—you can recover from them.

It's easier to secure a good piece of abstract work in the first place than to have to get it later, as you surely will if you present to a wise buyer an abstract compiled by an irresponsible concern.

You should be informed on good abstracting. Write for a list of the reliable firms of this state—and for the folder,

SKIRTS BRING BLUSHES

Oregon Co-Eds of Sorority Balk at Abbreviated Opera Costumes.

EUGENE, Or., April 14.—(Special.)—The comic opera, "Princess Chrysanthemum," given by the co-eds of the University of Oregon at the Eugene Theater last night, nearly suffered disaster at the last moment yesterday afternoon, when the members of one of the leading sororities declared that the costumes worn by the six fairy dancers who formed a part of the chorus were farr too abbreviated for modesty, and refused to permit any of their girls to appear dressed as the director demanded.

The matter was finally settled by President Campbell, and Miss Bertha Stuart, dean of women, who after inspecting the advance rehearsal, declared that no objection could be seen. The sorority that made the complaint withdrew one of its members from the chorus, declaring that it could not permit any of its girls to take part in such a proceeding. The operetta was greeted by a crowded house last night, and scored a striking success.

Glue Factory Viewed Doubtfully.

CENTRALIA, Wash., April 14.—(Special.)—Although Centralia is always glad to welcome new additions to its commercial activities, the city is looking askance at the prospect of a glue factory here. Ralph A. Siddon, of Portland, and William C. Fox, of Seattle, are looking for a site and seem willing to establish their plant in a central location. The residents realize that the outlay of building the plant, with the revenue of its payroll, would be a good thing, but have some doubt regarding the desirability of a glue factory for a neighbor.
