DRAW WAR CLOSING

Attorney for Commissioners to Close Argument Today.

STATE'S RIGHTS INVOLVED

Fulton Bases Plea for Instructed Verdict of Acquittal Upon Numerous Decisions in Favor of Contention.

afternoon, after the United States had finished presenting its testimony, At-torney Charles W. Fulton argued before Judge Bean for an instructed ver-dict of acquittal in the case of County Commissioners Cleeton, Lightner and Hart, criminally indicted by the Fed-eral grand jury for keeping the draws of the bridges across the Willamette River at Portland closed during certain hours, contrary to the Federal rules and regulations.

Attorney Fulton is basing his plea for an instructed verdict on the contention that, inasmuch as it was shown that the regulations of the County e wholly within a state. State Jurisdiction Brought Out.

In the course of his argument Mr. Fulton incidentally declared that the United States Government had really no right to force inspection on vessels engaged entirely in intra-state traffic. He contended, also, that the state authorities could, if they wished, require that all vessels engaged in foreign or interstate commerce designate such fact by a flag or by some other method and that, as far as the author-ity of the Federal Government goes, it would be necessary to open the draws at any and all times only to ships as designated. The state could, he said, prevent steamers plying only within the state-running on the river during any periods that might be seen fit.

"Your Honor, it seems to me an out-rage that these representatives of the state should, for acting as such and using their best discretion in the interests of the public, have been criminally indicted. I'll admit that the United States has a remedy, but it lies in civil and not in criminal action," said Mr.

Mr. Fulton will, when court con-venes at 9:30 this morning, finish his argument for an instructed verdict. United States District Attorney Mc-Court will then answer, probably con-tending, according to remarks dropped by the prosecution last night, that the United States Government, by reason of its control over navigable sfreams, has the right to regulate the running of vessels upon such streams, this right being unhampered by any regulations of the state, an inferior sovereignty.

Few Witnesses Examined.

The only witnesses examined yester-day afternoon were William N. Mc-contention that the United States County Judge Cleston's clerk. They authorities have no power to regulate testified to the issuance for and the carrying into effect of the County Court's order instructing that the bridge draws remain closed during congested hours of the morning and evening, With the introduction of their evidence the prosecution rested. Should the attempt to secure an in-structed verdict of acquittal fa'l the defense will commence introducing evidence today.

CRANKY BRIDGE REPAIRED

Streetcar Rails and Steel Slip Joints Rendered Immune to Hot Sun.

After the close of streetcar traffic ast night, workmen were set to work last hight, workmen were set to work to remove a half inch from the ends of the streetear rails connecting with the rails on the west approach of the Hawthorne bridge so that no more difficulty may be experienced on warm days in operating the lift draw. This course was decided upon by C. K. Allen, of Waddell & Harrington, the contractors who built the bridge, after the experience of last Sunday when the arils expanded on account of the hot

Mr. Allen said that the slip joints were in Portland and that it was probable that they would be placed in position before the end of the week.

ASSOCIATIONS IN FOUR CITIES AID EACH OTHER.

Educational Departments Will Continue to Co-operate-Portland Leads in Northwest.

So successful has been the policy of conducting the educational depart-ments of the four leading Young Men's Christian Associations of the Pacific Northwest on a common basis that this method will be followed indefinitely. Portland's delegates to the ed ucational conference, held in Seattle last Friday and Saturday, have just returned and report that results sum marized at that gathering were most gratifying.
"We have now conducted the edu-of the lift for over an hour.

Soon as possible slip joint rails will be installed on the west approach so that they can be regulated during periods of hot weather and can be moved back from the approach at they expand. In this way the lift can be operated under any condition of excessive heat.

Mr. Allen said that the slip to t reached are far better and students going from one city to another have found the system exceedingly conven-land also did more to improve its ed-ucational equipment than did any of the other cities, spending more than $6000 for this purpose alone.

An interesting feature of the conference was the report on popular lecture courses, which have been conducted by all the associations without cost to the public. In Portland the sea-son's attendance at these lectures reached $254. The figures in the other cities are as follows: Seattle, 2638; Spokane, 1600, and Tacoma 609. Three popular courses have been conducted by the Portland Y. M. C. A., one for apple growers, a second on economic subjects, and the third on real estate law. A new course of poultry lectures is now in progress. The success of all these lectures means that the courses will be reorganized and probably extended next year.

Reading After Dinner.

"Mark . Venable's Son," written by Olivia Howard Dunbar, and the leader in the Smart Set for May, consists of 38 pages of entertaining reading, with the plot so cleverly hidden that the reader's attention is kept awake to the last. "All in the Family." by William Wallace Whitlock, is a humorous dialogue, written in a cynical vein that is full of chuckles, and "The Grand Slam," by M. McD. Bodkin is an engaging love story. These and other features in the number make up readable fiction of a kind calculated to make the evening hours pass pleasantly after dinner and to bury worry in oblivion. The same cover design has ushered in the Smart Set for the past ten years, without pictures of any sort. It is now announced that the June number will appear in a new cover. At last.

BEN T. DILLON, OF LYRIC, BID-DEN FOND FAREWELL.

Girls in Chorus Present Him With Traveling Grip Filled With Beautiful Roses.

With the cue for the second curtain being shouted from the wings of the Lyric Theater Sunday evening, stage manager and comedian Ben T. Dillon saw in surprise no attention paid to the order. Again he signaled. Still no response. Then he left his position in the wings and started to investigate the trouble, when an usher carrying a handsome leather traveling bag, open and filled with roses, came to the orchestra pit and a dozen pretty chorus maids rushed out on the stage. Ernest Van Pelt, a new member of the company, received the gift, and in a few well-chosen words presented it to the astonished Mr. Dillon as a parting re-membrance from the girls of the com-

Then the call "Speech! Speech!" rang out over the house and the comedian responded, dwelling on the loyalty of his co-workers and the Portland public, and speaking regregfully of his depar-ture from the company. After Mr. Dillon had finished the orchestra struck up "Auld Lang Syne," and the audience stood singing with the com-visit his daughter for several weeks. He will be joined later by Mr. King, who leaves this evening, stopping en route at San Francisco. Later the two will leave for the East, Mr. Dillon to spend the Summer in Ohio, on his farm at Chardon, and Mr. King to go to New York City to visit his mother, whom he has not seen for three years.

The comedians expect to return to Portland next Fall to resume theatrical

Will King, the other comedian of the company and associate player with Dillon, was brought on the stage by demand from the audience and the entire scene was like a small carnival.
