HARLAN RENEWS ATTACK ON OPINION

He Accuses Supreme Court of Exceeding Power in Standard Oil Decision.

LITIGATION WILL RESULT

No Man Can Tell Whether Contract Is Reasonable or Not Until Decided by Court-Power of Congress Is Usurped.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Still as op-posed to the majority of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Stan-dard Oil case as he was on the day that opinion was announced, Associate Justice Harian today filed in court his formal dissenting opinion in the suit. His otal stack on the court for hold-ing that only unreasonable or undus restraints of interstate commerce are violations of the law furnished the out-line for today's broadside against the opinion.

He went further, however, and criti-He went further, however, and criticised the court for modifying the decree of the lower court so as to pormit the subsidiary companies to enter into agreements among themselves, and expressed a conviction that instead of the opinion giving quiet to the business of the country it would throw it into confusion and incite widely extended and harrassing litigation, the injurious effects of which will be felt for many years to come.

Ever since the case was decided on May 15, Justice Harlan has been prepar-May 12. Justice Harlan has been prepar-ing his dissenting opinion and it was not completed until noon today. One of the last changes made, it is said, was to insert a quotation from the decision of Judge (now Fresident) Taft, in the Addystant pipe case in which Judge Taft said that according to the deci-sion of the Supreme Court of the United States, all restraints, whether reason-able or unreasonable under the common law, were forbidden by the statute.

Trust May Combine Again.

In conhection with what he terms a "mischievous modification," Justice Har-lan quotes the Chief Justice as saying that "It does not necessarily follow that because of an illegal restraint of trade an attempt to monopolize or monopoliza-tion would necessarily arise from agree-ments between two or more of the sub-midiary corporations after the transfer of the stock by the New Jersey corpor-

Taking this language in connection "Taking this language in connection with other parts of the opinion," says Justice Harlan, "the subsidiary companies are thus, in effect, influenced unwisely, I think that although the New Jersey corporation, being an illegal combination, must go out of existence, they may join in an agreement to restrain commerce against the states, if such restraint he not under."

strain commerce against the states, it such restraint be not undue."

As in his oral remarks, Justice Harlan devotes himself largely to criticism of the court for holding that not every restraint of trade violates the law. He reliterates that the court reversed its former rulings in the Trans-Missouri, Freight and Joint Traffic Association's cases. Reference to Justice Taffa deci-Referring to Judge Taft's deci-

Taft's Decision Quoted.

"Judge Taft said, that according to the decision of this court in the freight association case, contracts in restraint of interstate transportation were within the statute, whether the restraint could be regarded as reasonable in common

'On reading the opinion just deliv-ered, Justice Harian adds, 'the first inquiry would be that as the court is unanimous in holding that the particuunanimous in holding that the particular things done by the Standard Oil Company and its subaldiary companies in this case were lifegal under the antituust act, whether those things were in reasonable or unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce, why was it necessary to make an elaborate argument, as is done in the opinion, to show that according to the rule of reason the act passed by Congress should be interpreted as if it contained the word unreasonable or the word 'unders'. The only answer which, in frankness, can be given to this question is that the court intends to decide that its deliberate judgment, it years ago, to the ef-court intends to decide that its delic-erate judgment, 15 years ago, to the ef-fect that the act permitted no restraint whatever of interstate commerce, wheth-er reasonable or unreasonable, was not in accordance with the 'rule of reason.' In accordance with the 'tule of reason.' In effect, the court says it will now, for the first time, bring the discussion under the 'light of reason,' and apply the 'rule of reason' to the question to be decided. I have the authority of this court for saying that such a course of proceeding on its part would be 'judicial legislation.'

What Court Should Have Said.

Justice Harles maintains that the court should have replied emphatically to the Standard Oil atterneys when they Insisted on a "reversal of the former rulings" of the court, as follows: "That question, according to our practice, is not open for further discus-practice. Is not open for further discussion here. This court long ago delification here. This court long ago delification has been dely bed (1) that the act, interpreting its words in their ordinary acceptantion, prohibits all restraints of interstate commerce by continuations in whatever form, and whether reasonable or threasonable, (2) the question relates to matters of public policy in ref. erence to commerce among the states and with foreign nations, and Congress alone can deal with the subject; (2) this court would encroach on the authority of Congress, if under the guise of construction it should assume to deof construction it should assume to de-termine a matter of public pulley; (4) the pariles mist go to Congress and obtain an amendment of the anti-trust obtain an amendment of the anti-trust act if they think that this court was around in its former decisions; and (5) this court cannot and will not justicially legislate, since its function is to deciste law, while it belongs to the legislative department to make the law."

Then referring to the phrase which thief Justice White used in his opinion, Judge Harian adds:

"Such a course, I am sure, would not have offended the Tule of reason."

Uncertainty Is Apprayated.

At the conclusion of his opinion, Jus-tice Harlan acknowledged that his brethren had deemed it heat to pursue a different course from that which he advocated.

fusion and invite widely extended and narassing litigation, the injurious effects of which will be felt for many years to come. When Congress probibited every contract, combination or monopoly in restraint of commerce, it prescribed a simple definite rule that all could understand and which could be easily applied by every one wishing to obey the law and not to conduct their business in violation of the law. But now, it is to be feared, we are to have, in cases without number, the constantly recurring inquiry—difficult to solve by proof—whether the particular contract, combination or trust involved in each case, is or is not an 'unreasonable' or 'undue' restraint of trade."

Congress Alone Can Make Laws.

Congress Alone Can Make Laws.

Congress Alone Can Make Laws.

The justice incorporated in his prepared opinion in effect what he said orally in dissenting in regard to the dangers of judicial legislation.

The supreme law of the land, he added, "which is finding alike on allon Presidents, Congresses, the courts and the people—gives to Congress and to Congress alone, authority to regulate interatate commerce and, when Congress forbids any restraint of such commerce in any form, all must obey its mandate. To everreach the action of Congress merely by judicial construction, that is, by indirection, a blow at the integrity of our governmental system and in the end will prove most dangerous to all."

No one here has any expectation that the cases against the Blethens will ever be tried and the suits against Post-Intelligencer men are regarded in the same light. It was against his wishes that the Blethen indictments were returned. Being obliged to sign them, he was not reluctant to sign informations sought by the Blethens today to even things.

It would not be reasonable to say that Seattle is deeply stirred by the new indictments. The developments of the present week have been discussed with keen enjoyment by men about town. The pleasing feature of the whole crusade that began last October has been its freedom from personal violence. Extreme language is used in newspapers and on the stump, but participants in the strife never lose entire control of their tempers. General feeling, however, prevails that division of Seattle into two hostile camps is injuring business and is one cause for Seattle failing behind Portland in a business way.

Although the Blethen and Post-Inland in a business way.

Although the Blethen and Post-Intelligencer fight is looked upon as a waste of time and energy, the outlook for a vigorous prosecution of Wappenstein seems excellent. Julge Main is a man of grim determination and will not shrink from the ordeal of presiding at the trial. Wappenstein, according to well-informed sources, is the person at whom the Burns campaign was aimed.

Colonel Blethen and Mayor Gill, who had always been on the best of terms had always been on the best of terr with Dr. Matthews, were to have be with Dr. Matthewa, were to have been spared, according to the opinion of insiders, but Blethen refused to abandon his friend, Wappenstein, to his fate and opened his batteries upon Detective Burns. Burns then began to work up a case against Blethen. The detective said he had failed to get the evidence he hoped for, and until last week it was supposed the idea of indicting Blethen had been given up. Strong local influences were brought to bear after Burns had left the field, however, and the belated indictments were returned. Gill used discretion and escaped.

banded. It is held in reserve to return more indictments if they are needed in an effort to convict Wappenstein. All interest now centers in trial of the ex-police chief.

Superior Judge Main today overruled three motions of counsel for Wappenstein, who is endeavoring to escape trial on an indictment charging him with bribery in accepting $1000 for permitting a disorderly house in the eld King-street vice district to operate.

His affidavits set forth that, owing to attacks on Wappenstein by two daily papers and widespread discussion of the case in Seattle, it would be impossible for Wappenstein to get a fair trial. The Prosecuting Attorney replied that Wappenstein's friends had been equally realous in defending him and asked that the motion be overruled. Morris then asked for a continuance, which was refused.

Morris next presented reasons for transfer of the trial to another judge, alleging that Judge Main was prefu-diced, being a member of church of Dr. Mark A. Matthews, who announced re-cently that he was directing graft in-vestigations. Judge Main denied this motion, saying that his religion did not influence him on the bench and that he had never discussed graft develop-ments with Dr. Matthews, nor had be
