Head of Refining Company's Trust Department Tells How Havemeyer, W. S. Wilbur Capital, Organized Big Combination.

WASHINGTON, June 13—The most interesting political in this era is the strike of the beet sugar producers who control the American beet sugar trust. The strike began when the beet sugar producers refused to deliver their produce to the American beet sugar trust, which is controlled by the Havemeyer, W. S. Wilbur Capital, and the American beet sugar trust is controlled by the Havemeyer, W. S. Wilbur Capital.

The beet sugar producers and the Havemeyer, W. S. Wilbur Capital are at loggerheads over the price of beet sugar. The Havemeyer, W. S. Wilbur Capital is seeking to raise the price of beet sugar, while the beet sugar producers are seeking to lower the price of beet sugar.

The strike began when the Havemeyer, W. S. Wilbur Capital refused to pay the beet sugar producers the price they were asking for their produce. The beet sugar producers responded by refusing to deliver their produce to the Havemeyer, W. S. Wilbur Capital.

The Havemeyer, W. S. Wilbur Capital has a monopoly over the beet sugar industry, and the beet sugar producers are in a strong position to hold out for a better price.
