

WORLD PEACE IS SEEN BY FRANCE

Flags of Two Nations Mingle in Paris Celebration of British Coronation.

CONFIDENCE NOT SHAKEN

King's Intention of Increasing Friendliness With Germany Is Received With No Diminution of Cordiality.

PARIS, June 22.—(Special.)—A deepening of the world's peace, a strengthening of friendly ties throughout Europe, an earnest effort to forget the old grudges between nations—this is what the majority of the French statesmen, philosophers and writers expect during the reign of King George V. Emperor of a quarter of the globe, who today at Westminster received the crown.

Striking changes are noted in world politics since Edward's accession nine years ago. Then the Boer War was just finished and the nations were watching one another, snarling with uncertainty. France, torn internally by the strife of church and state, cast indifferent eyes across the channel, knowing Edward as a frequent visitor to Paris, but expecting little of him as King. Moreover, Edward had been suffering for months from illness which, six weeks previous to his coronation, was expected to prove fatal.

The simplified ceremony was not attended by foreign delegations. Hardly had it been ended, however, when England, which had held aloof from European alliances, began to be over-run by rumors that England, France and Russia needed to band together against Germany. Despite the apparent indifference of France, this programme actually was carried out in Edward's reign.

That the entente cordiale is not weakened by time is shown by the unusual sight today of the entire French capital affluster with the crossed French and British flags, as if the coronation of Britain's King made a national holiday in France.

George's known intention to increase the friendliness between England and Germany has not shaken France's confidence.

GERMANY DEEPLY IMPRESSED
Belief in George's Peaceful Program Felt in Berlin.

BERLIN, June 22.—(Special.)—In Germany, as elsewhere in Europe, the sumptuous pageantry of the coronation in London is monopolizing public attention today almost to the exclusion of all other topics. The brilliancy of the display and the stupendous massing of crowds in the British capital have profoundly impressed the popular imagination.

While the belief that King George is a monarch disposed to peace lends a friendly, if not a cordial, tone to the expressions of the press in general, public men in Germany are of the opinion that the attitude of the newly-crowned sovereign, regarding his foreign policy, is destined to be radically different from that of the late King Edward. George is regarded as a man who, while not so capable as his father, is less inclined to embark upon dangerously brilliant diplomatic enterprises and indisposed to pursue the "encircling" policy which, under Edward, caused the isolation of Germany. Therefore it is reasoned that the coronation marks the opening of a reign of secure peace in Europe and of better Anglo-German relations.

The semi-official Koelnische Zeitung, summarizing German opinion of the coronation, says: "Imperial Britain stands today greater and more magnificent than ever before. Its relations with other powers are cloudless. We are glad to affirm that the era of friendly visits between England and Germany, which was begun lately, has brought a period of untroubled calm into the relations of two powers." The presence of the German Crown Prince and minor German sovereigns in London gives sincere satisfaction to the lovers of peace.

GAME REFUGES DEFINED

Governor West Proclaims Protection on State Lands.

SALEM, Or., June 22.—(Special.)—Governor West today issued a proclamation making all of the lands around state institutions state game refuges. The proclamation follows:

Whereas, the Legislative Assembly of 1911 authorized the Governor, by special proclamation, to set aside as game refuges any lands owned by the state and surrounding its institutions.

Now, therefore, I, Oswald West, Governor of the State of Oregon, by virtue of the authority in me vested by chapter 204, of the General Laws of Oregon for 1911, do hereby proclaim that all lands owned by the state and surrounding its institutions, and hereby set apart as wild game refuges. And I further direct that the State Game Warden pursue to, and in assistance of, the authority of section 4 of said chapter, immediately determine the boundaries of the said refuges, heretofore of the institution within the limits of the said chapter, and that any violation of the provisions of the said chapter 204, of the General Laws of Oregon for 1911, be not condoned.

CLYMER RULE QUESTIONED

Money Accepted for Care of Absent Wards, Is Charge.

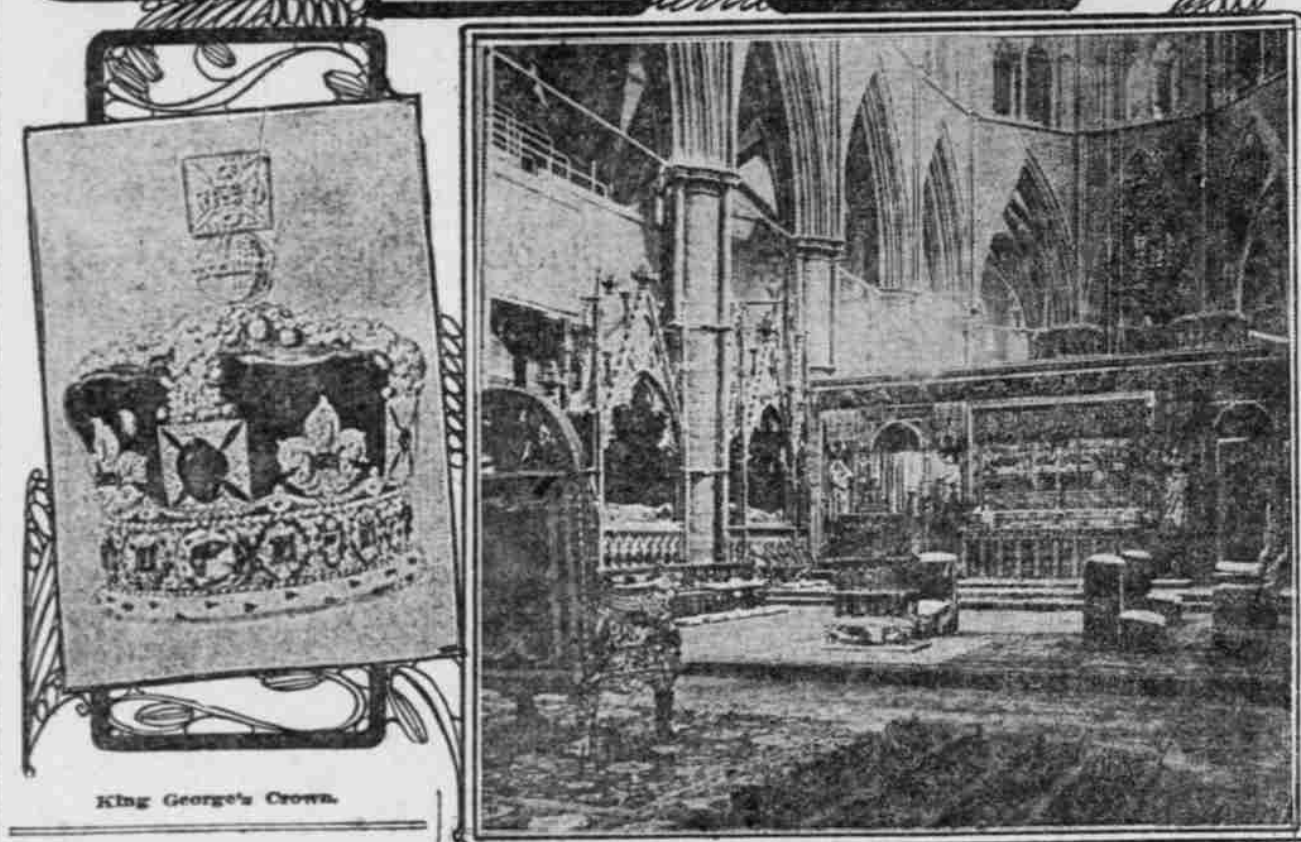

SALEM, Or., June 22.—(Special.)—According to a statement made today by H. L. Howard, a former inmate of the Marion County poorhouse, there were six inmates of the institution who worked in the hopfields last fall and it is alleged that Superintendent Clymer of the farm received payment from the county for the keep of these inmates. Howard had the names of the men and the records at the courthouse show that payment for their keep was made for the month of September at which time Howard alleges, they were away from the farm. He also said that other men received wages for working on adjoining farms when they were being boarded at the expense of the county.

It is probable that an investigation will follow the charges that have been made against Clymer.

less favorable than had been hoped for, but even that had its compensating advantages, so that there was practically no need of the services of ambulances, for cases of fainting or exhaustion, which are commonly attendant upon such occasions in hot sunbathing. On the other hand, rain was not sufficient to detract seriously from the splendor of the pageantry.

Public Not Resentful.

The attendance of the general public in the streets, while large, did not approach that at King Edward's coronation. This probably was due to fears engendered by the unusually severe police regulations and the barricades erected to protect the line of the procession route, which under the circumstances proved needless.

Gloomy prognostications of trouble arising through public resentment of these precautions as an infringement of British liberty proved groundless. Everything was carried out with smoothness and in perfect order, which excited universal admiration.

People Early in Streets.

After the early morning rush of enthusiasts, mainly of the humbler classes, and great numbers of ticket holders, eager to secure places of vantage from which to witness the royal procession before the expected crowds arrived on the scene there was some falling off observed and late as 5 o'clock, when the front gates at Buckingham Palace were closed, there was little difficulty in moving freely at any point between the palace and the Abbey.

Thenceforward the crowds rapidly increased and by the time the troops began to take up their positions along the line of the procession, the sidewalks at 7:15 o'clock there were dense masses of spectators at every point.

The pressure became so intense at Charing Cross and at Whitehall that the police cordon was broken by the surging people. With the aid of the troops, however, the authorities soon regained control.

There were three processions, one for the royal guests, another for the Prince of Wales and members of the royal family other than the King and Queen, and the imperial procession.

The first was made up of 14 dress carriages, occupied by the royal guests and the distinguished court officials and officers attached to their staffs. The carriages were drawn by pairs of the famous bay and black horses from the royal stables, driven by royal coachmen and attended by footmen in scarlet livery.

American Envoy Cheered.

Trumpeters and an escort of the Royal Horse Guards preceded the royal guests, few of whom were recognized by the crowds. The spectators, however, were quick to pick out John Hays Hammond, special ambassador from the United States, the envoys from France and Germany, and the Crown Prince. Each of these was given a round of cheers, and there was a spontaneous clapping of hands.

Immediately following was the second procession, with members of the British royal family, including the Prince of Wales and the Princess Mary and their younger brothers. Their appearance was the signal for the heartiest demonstration up to that time. The cheering began as the royal children emerged from Buckingham Palace and, carried along the row on row of seats, was echoed by the crowd behind.

Exactly at 10:30 o'clock, booming guns announced that the King and Queen were leaving the palace and, by a happy coincidence, which, however, has become almost traditional in British royal functions, the sun and dawn broke through the clouds and the rain ceased. The staff officer appeared under the archway, the guard of honor, big six-footers from the guard regiments, blue-jackets and troops came to attention with a clang of swords and musketry, while the bands struck up the national anthem.

Touches of Quaintness Given.

Following the staff officer was the advance guard, a sovereign's escort of the First Life Guards in their familiar bore-breastplates and helmets, plumes and white breeches, and on their black chargers.

The King's bargemaster and 12 watermen, in quaint costumes, reminded the sightseers that there was a time when the King traveled by water when he "went to Westminster to be crowned."

Aides-de-camp to the King, naval and military officers of the highest rank, in khaki and the Indians in bright colors, passed in rapid succession.

As the first division of the Sovereign's escort of the Royal Horse Guards moved slowly through the gates, the booming of cannon announced that the royal coach with the King and Queen approached.

People See Their Rulers.

The long-awaited moment when their Majesties were to look into the faces of their subjects and their subjects upon their King and Queen had arrived. There was a momentary hush, broken first by the trumpeters and the crash of brass, and then, as with one voice, the multitude acclaimed the sovereigns with cheers that preceded and followed them from the gates of the palace to the very doors of Westminster Abbey.

Smiling and bowing, their Majesties acknowledged the greetings. The King wore a long purple robe and velvet cap, trimmed with ermine.

The Queen made a beautiful picture in her robe of cloth-of-gold. Through the Mall to the Admiralty arch, Charing Cross, Whitehall, Parliament Street and broad sanctuary, the procession moved. The arrival of the Sovereigns at the Abbey was proclaimed by the ringing of the bells of the Abbey, and St. Margaret's Church, the firing of a gun and another outburst of cheering from the throng on the official stands in Parliament Square.

At the entrance to the cathedral their Majesties were received by the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk and the pages-in-waiting.

Rain Helps Mosier Crops.

MOSIER, Or., June 22.—(Special.)—A fine soaking rain fell here yesterday and fruitgrowers are happy at the improved prospects of a fine crop. While the yield may not be quite as large as last year, the quality and size of the fruit will make up the difference.

British Subjects on Broadway Rejoice Greatly.

SPECIAL SERVICE IS HELD

Counterpart of Programme in Westminster Abbey Is Given in Old Trinity—Many Dinners Given in Celebration.

NEW YORK, June 22.—British subjects in New York City began early their observance of Coronation day. All the British shipping in the harbor was in gala dress of bunting and flags, while on land many hotels and residences unfurled the Union Jack with the Stars and Stripes.

The more formal exercises of the day here were programmed to synchronize as far as possible with the actual coronation ceremonies beyond the seas. Three o'clock in the afternoon was the hour set for the special services in old Trinity, where the programme was the counterpart of that in Westminster Abbey, even the prayers and hymns being the same.

The invited guests included all the British officials in the city, the foreign Consuls, diplomats, officers of the Army and Navy of the United States, city officials and a thousand or more British residents.

Dinners in honor of the coronation were programmed on board the British steamships, and the Pilgrims, an organization composed of English and Americans devoted to promoting unity between the two nations, were hosts at a formal luncheon at the Lawyers' Club. This evening the English colony attended a coronation banquet at the Hotel Plaza and drank the health of the new ruler in a special wine bottled in England in 1833, the year of the crowning of Queen Victoria.

On board every vessel flying the British flag, the crews were awarded special rations and a special supply of cheering drinks with which to pledge health to the King and Queen.

The celebration took the form of a ball given under the auspices of the Sons and Daughters of St. George, and the proceeds are to be used in the erection of an English Old People's Home, to cost $50,000.

Nearly 2000 special invitations were sent out, and the majority of them accepted.

MILE OF WATER IN RUSH

Flowing Lake Dam Breaks, Bridge and Trestles Swept—No Lives Lost.

erty of the Three Lakes Logging Company, went out today sending a flood down the gulch that engulfed the plant of the company at Panther Lake. The flood tore away the underpinning of the wagon bridge on the Dubuque road, wrecked the company's flume between Flowing Lake and Panther Lake and damaged seven logging-road trestles spanning the valley.

The dam was 20 feet high and 300 feet long. The impounded waters of Flowing Lake backed up a mile above this dam and the volume of water released when the dam gave way was enormous.

No ranch houses were in the valley or death would have accompanied the destruction. The dam was built about eight years ago and was formed by an earth embankment. The break came without warning.

The flume from the dam to the plant of the company three-fourths of a mile long, was built anew last year. The away was built on the trestles of the company's road and to the Dubuque road bridge will amount to several thousand dollars.

"FATHER" WHITE RETIRES

At Age of 86, Methodist Minister Goes to Old People's Home.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 22.—(Special.)—Rev. William J. (Father) White, 86 years old, known to every Methodist minister in the Northwest as the "Elijah of the Coeur d'Alene," today went to the Deaconess Old People's Home, East 1915 South avenue, to spend his last days.

Every Methodist minister in Spokane claims personal friendship with "Father" White. He was a member of the Columbia River conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He lived for many years in Walla Walla, Wash. "Father" White was born in Pennsylvania and went to California during the gold rush in 1849. In 1862 he entered the Methodist ministry and did missionary work in California, Nevada, Washington and Oregon.

About 1892 "Father" White went into the Coeur d'Alene mining district. He established a little church at Ward, where the first Methodist church in that area to fire the signal to the Coeur d'Alene, whereupon the ring of bonfires around London burst into flames. 1340 WOMEN WILL VOTE

Walla Walla's Registration for Election Reaches 3638.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., June 22.—(Special.)—All records for registration in the City of Walla Walla have been broken with the qualifying of 3638 voters for the general city election today. The mark, made nearly two years ago in the "wet and dry" fight, went by the board before the influx of women voters, of whom 1340 registered.

Interest in the city election is keen, not only because the municipal officers for the year are to be elected, but also because the question of municipal government is to be decided upon at that time. Unless the Supreme Court reverses the lower court, this question will be voted upon and determined.

Democrats and Republicans have nearly full tickets in the field.

TACOMA, Wash., June 22.—(Special.)—Samuel Fox, one of the census enumerators indicted by the Tacoma Federal grand jury and subsequently released on bonds of $1500, will be arrested as soon as the United States Marshal's office can locate him.
