

PHASES OF INDUSTRIAL GROWTH IN PACIFIC NORTHWEST

WEST HAS FUTURE

People and Capital Both Looking Toward Oregon.

LAWSON IS OPTIMISTIC

Typical Welcome All That Is Necessary to Keep Progress Moving Toward Land of Unlimited Possibilities.

BY THOMAS W. LAWSON.

PRINEVILLE, Or., July 2.—What are my first impressions of Central Oregon? The same as my already published impressions of Portland and Hood River—except—well, take what I have said about Portland and Hood River, and then blow off the rinds and let the good things "vast themselves" and you will have an idea of the idea which has seeped into my very system during my 48 short, oh, so short, hours spent in this stupendous country among its wonderful people.

You know it is getting monotonous—it must be getting monotonous to you people, my repeated telling how marvelously good everything looks to me, but there is no getting monotonous to me. My experience since the day I first set foot in Oregon has been one continuous revelation of "good things." In Portland it was the quiet, conservative beauty of the homes, the exquisite refinement and the people who occupied the homes in combination with the wonderful things nature has done and is doing for the city and its environs.

Beauty is Impressive.

Here in Eastern Oregon it is the wonderful beauties—sky, mountain and flat land combination beauties, the superb climate and all in combination with a look-you-straight-in-the-eye, carry-your-heart-ramon-our-sleeve manliness and womanliness of the people—apparently all the people—and this in combination with the people-making possibilities almost beyond comprehension to us of the East, strikes me so forcibly that I am actually compelled to answer your question that I think of Eastern Oregon as repeating what I have already said before. Since I told The Oregonian three or four weeks ago that I would stake my existence on the soundness of my opinion that Oregon is to have a marvelous future, and that future within the next ten years, I have been watching out sharply for anything that would punch a hole in my first impression or at least shake out some of the enthusiasm, but I have been unable to find any.

Every place I have visited, and I have really covered quite a bit of ground, and all of the people I have touched with, have but tended to confirm, year after year, my first enthusiasm. Truly, your country is a marvelous one. There is but one thing that your good people of Oregon must patiently endure in the smelting of your great future, and that is a square deal to the herds of people and the vast capital which will surely pour upon you from now on. Short time has passed, you then had the marvelous advantages supplied by nature, you needed people and capital, and both, owing to a peculiar combination of conditions, were at that time hard to secure—people, because the East had not been overrun and because the Middle West was the first stopping place of the great West, and capital because, first, it was not in such quantities as now, and second, because it could find ample vent in the building of railroads and their related industries.

People Must Come West.

All this is now changed. There are millions of people in the East who are coming West or starve. There are billions of capital in the East which must come West or mildew and decay—come West, Northwest, but particularly Oregon. In my opinion it will from now on be impossible to keep back people and capital from building up Oregon until in a short time—comparetively short time, it will be figuratively speaking—the vast unbroken city and suburb—impossible, if you extend to the coming people and capital you must have a fascinating asset, the best kind in you—that is, that royal, square deal good fellowship which I have seen standing on the corner of every city street, popping out from every apple orchard, bounding over every salubrious bush and hurrying every acre of bunch grass since I have come into your state. Just give the coming people and capital your free-from-jealousy, right-from-the-heart welcome and—well, I would be afraid to tell what I think will happen here in the East, my reputation and be set down among the rainbow-chasers.

ELGIN MEN RAISE APPLES

Fruit Growing So Profitable Many Devote Entire Time to It.

ELGIN, Or., July 2.—(Special.)—Since the organization of the Elgin Fruit & Developing Company, composed of business men of Elgin, two years ago, the interest has increased in the growing of winter apples. Many growers are devoting their entire time to the production of fruit. Scott Harris is the largest convert. He has bought 30 acres of fruit land northwest from Elgin and now has a force of men clearing it. He will set 30 acres this Fall and the rest next Spring, or as soon as it is cleared.

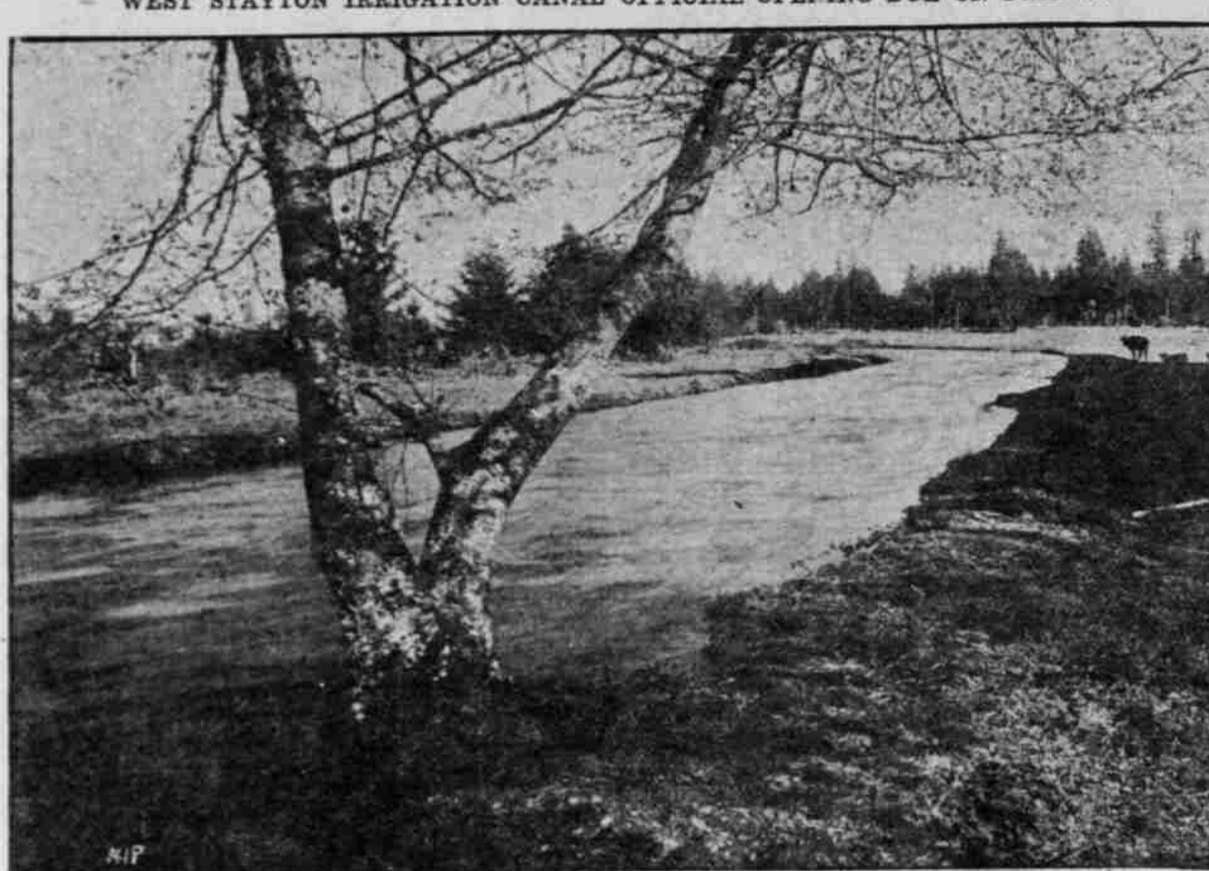

Lentils Heads Weigh Heavily.

VANCOUVER, Wash., July 2.—(Special.)—Two heads of lentils weighing three pounds were raised this year by D. F. Reed, who lives east of the Garrison. The seed from every plant of lentils grew from the State Agricultural College at Pullman, but these came up voluntarily this year, coming from plants permitted to go to seed in the garden last Fall. The ground was not fertilized for two years, and no special care was given to it.

Lentils Gets New School.

Steele & Bertelson were awarded the contract last week for the construction of a school building at Lentils last week, the bid price being $36,212. Work will be started at once, it being desired to have the building ready by the time the Fall term opens in September. It will be a fireproof, modern structure.

WEST STAYTON IRRIGATION CANAL OFFICIAL OPENING DUE ON FRIDAY.

WORK FINISHED ON BIG WATERWAY. WEST STAYTON, Or., June 25.—(Special.)—The official opening of the West Stayton irrigation canal will take place Friday. The work is virtually completed, with a few finishing touches to be put on some of the laterals. The system has been tried out and everything works to a charm. Several neighboring farmers, interested in the outcome of the undertaking, were present to see the Santiam water coming down to West Stayton. It was quite a novelty to see the little streams flowing along the parched land. There had not been a drop of rain for four weeks and the farms were thirsting for rain. Friday evening there will be a dance in the new Commercial Club building.

FIRES KEPT DOWN

Coos County Patrol Association Plans Campaign.

GREATER AREA COVERED

Parts of Coos and Curry Counties Now Included—Telephone Lines Established and Trails Are Cut Through Forest.

MARSHFIELD, Or., July 2.—(Special.)—The Coos County Fire Patrol Association is making preparations for the protection of the timber of this county from fire during the danger season, which begins July 15. The association suffered only a small loss from fires last year compared with other localities. The heavy rains in the winter and the fog from the ocean seem to give natural protection to the Coos County timber. The membership is larger than last year and the territory has been enlarged so as to take in parts of Douglas and Curry counties west of the Coast Range. In Coos County alone there are about 750,000 acres of timber lands, the assessed valuation of which is nearly $2,000,000. Nearly all the large timber holders are members of the association.

W. J. Conrad is the secretary and has headquarters at Marshfield and during the fire season offices probably will be opened at Myrtle Point, as that place is the center of the timber, where there is most danger of fire. Fifteen fire wardens have been appointed by the association and will be stationed at different points and in constant communication with headquarters, so that they can call for assistance when needed. The association has built many miles of telephone lines connecting with isolated districts and is cutting trails, so that firefighters can get through the timber. The association is sending out to ranchers letters of warning and instruction in fire-fighting and is urging the ranchers to keep in touch with the wardens in their district. Attention is also being called to the state laws governing the burning of slash and brush. J. A. Smith is the official fire warden for Coos county and he will work in conjunction with the wardens appointed by the association. The loss from fire in Coos County last year amounted to about $1,000,000 of timber and with the added precautions that are being taken this year the hazard will be greatly reduced. An assessment of 1 1/2 cents an acre is estimated to be sufficient to pay the expenses this year. With the telephones put in by the C. A. Smith Company to reach its logging camps and the new lines built by the fire association, there will be 40 miles more of telephone lines than were available last year. The ranchers have free use of these telephones and in exchange for the service are asked to report promptly any dangerous fires.

This is only the second year of the fire association in this county, but the members believe that they will have the situation so well in hand that the loss from forest fires will be virtually nothing. A. E. Adelsberger, who looks after the timber lands for the C. A. Smith Company, is president of the association; W. J. Conrad is secretary, and the directors are Edgar Simpson, George Beale, J. O. Stemmler, Z. T. Sighin, E. C. Roberts and J. F. Standish.

FARMERS TO GRADE COWS

Organization Formed to Weed Out Poor Dairy Stock.

CHEHALIS, Wash., June 26.—(Special.)—The Chehalis Farmers' Dairy Association at Pullman, Dairy Inspector of the Washington Dairy and Food Department, who has been working in this field recently, has arranged for a grading and cow-testing association. Sufficient cows have been signed warranting the project, and it is expected that after a meeting that will be held at Adna, July 7, more will be listed. A man will be employed who will once a month measure and weigh the milk from each cow, keeping a record of butter fat, food consumed, and other data. The purpose is to weed out the dairy herds. The district embraced extends from Chehalis to Bunker Creek, on the west, and centers about Adna. Later a district will be formed south and east of this city. Stereopticon pictures will be shown at the lectures. The fee for membership in the cow-testing association will be $1 a year for each cow, with a 25-cent membership fee. The plan is expected to result in much good in bettering the standard of the dairy herds of this section, which is already rated as one of the best dairy communities of the Northwest.

Black Tartarions Grown Near Oregon City.

OREGON CITY, Or., July 2.—(Special.)—The limb of a Black Tartarion cherry tree exhibited in the office of J. J. Corbett, of this city, has attracted no little attention during the past few days. These cherries were raised on the Corbett place, and the tree is heavily laden with luscious fruit. The limb containing the fruit is eight inches long with 150 cherries, and these cherries after being removed from the limb weighed one and three-fourths pounds. Mr. Corbett has already harvested 100 pounds from the tree, and the tree is still heavily laden.

Offer of $30,000 Is Refused for Option on Property—Late Rains Material Benefit to Operation Near Grants Pass.

CULVER, Or., July 2.—(Special.)—Regular mail and passenger stage service began today between Culver and Prineville. All mail for Central Oregon south of this place now comes to Culver over the Oregon Trunk and is then carried by stage to Prineville and other southern points. The service is seven times a week, the stages leaving here immediately after the train arrives and the mail is distributed, reaching Prineville the same evening. From Prineville the stage leaves at 1 o'clock P. M. and arrives in Culver at 6 o'clock P. M. This change of service will be a relief to the people of Central Oregon, enabling them to get mail from one to three days earlier than when it came in by way of Shaniko.

Eugene Plans "White Way."

EUGENE, Or., July 2.—(Special.)—Within a short time ornamental lamp posts, similar to those in use in Portland, will be substituted for the overland streamers now used as special ornamental lighting for Wilamette street, the principal business street of the city. The posts will bear five large lights and will be placed at the edge of the sidewalk. They will be wired from underground conduits. The objection urged against the streamer system of lighting is that the motion of the streamers in the wind burns out the globes too rapidly, entailing a large cost for maintenance. The ornamental posts first will be erected between Eighth and Ninth on Wilamette and the expense will be borne by the abutting business houses.

Tenino Makes Rapid Strides.

CENTRALIA, Wash., June 25.—(Special.)—Tenino is making rapid strides toward the Blue Bird nest on the Coast using the recent contract for stone for the construction of the Government jetty. The streets are to be belted, new buildings are going up, and stone from the Hercules quarries is being shipped out at the rate of 12 to 18 carloads a day. Others interested in the mine are Dan Hearn, G. S. Ross, James Barton and Fred Alsbinger. Within a few days a flume will be built from a near creek and with the aid of machinery and a force of men much work will be advanced before the water runs short. Mining men are enjoying a long season this year on account of late rains, and nearly every district where placers are being operated the crews are working overtime to gather in the gold.

Chehalis Improving Streets.

CHEHALIS, Wash., June 25.—(Special.)—The City Council has let contracts for planing a number of streets in the eastern part of the city. Plank is to be laid 15 feet wide in the center of Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Ninth streets. The total amount of the contracts, which were awarded to Albers & Son, aggregates $6950. Other contracts are to be let later, as the city council has let contracts for planing a number of streets in the eastern part of the city. SUCCESS IN $1000

Cut-off Lands Bring Profits to Industrious Farmer.

STORY TOLD BY SETTLER

Henry Dupertius, on Homestead Near Chehalis, in 11 Years Has Orchards, Herds, Fine Buildings Where Stumps Stand.

CENTRALIA, Wash., July 2.—(Special.)—The question, "What Can a Homesteader Accomplish in Western Washington With a Cash Capital of $1000?" has been answered by Henry Dupertius, a well-known farmer living near Adna, about six and one-half miles west of Chehalis, in a manner replete with interest for the ambitious and industrious man who seeks a home in the Pacific Northwest. Mr. Dupertius told his story to Secretary Merrill, of the Citizens' Club of Chehalis, who has been collecting interesting facts about the public work from successful homesteaders, who have made profitable farms from cut-over timber lands in Lewis County, Washington.

$300 Pays for Land.

With his family, Mr. Dupertius came to Chehalis from Oklahoma in December, 20, 1900. He had $500 capital after paying the expenses of his trip. With $300 he bought 100 acres of cut-over timber, the only improvement on which was an old bunk shack that had been left by the logging crew.

Renting a small residence nearby, he began clearing the land, which was covered with underbrush and stumps, some of which were six feet in diameter. The $200 remaining from the purchase of the land and provided tentaciously for living expenses, while Mr. Dupertius and the older sons worked in nearby lumber mills for ready money to pay for team and tools to clear the land and for seeds, berry canes and plants. They put under cultivation each square rod as soon as it was cleared.

Goats Help Clear Land.

In a few years they had under cultivation enough garden truck, raspberries, blackberries, loganberries and strawberries to maintain the family and to build a comfortable residence, large barn and other buildings, and plant an orchard of apple and plum trees that are bearing fine fruit. They have cleared and have under cultivation 17 acres. On the remainder they clear the land and grass sods and raised good pasture between the stumps and logs.

The underbrush was burned over, and at present feeds 11 dairy cows. Mr. Dupertius says any healthy, industrious man can accomplish as much on cut-over Lewis County lands. Cut-over lands of this kind provide timber, farm and accessible to established highways and good schools can now be bought for from $15 to $25 per acre without any improvement. Market prices for all produce are better now than when Mr. Dupertius began his farm in 1900. He and his wife have raised an over dozen children, some of whom are engaged in teaching and professional occupations.

This is what one homesteader has done in Lewis County with less than $1000, and there are 10,000 acres of cut-over lands in this immense county, 100 miles long by 25 miles wide, available to homesteaders.

35 CASES OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE

We have a letter from H. W. Smith, a wholesale optician, Mason City, Iowa, in which he says that he recovered from Bright's Disease after specialists had given him up. There were casts, tube over half an inch, patient was confined to bed and case looked hopeless. He is well known and says that his recovery caused him to receive many letters of inquiry and telegrams even from abroad, all of which he answered and that he knows of thirty-five recoveries and one failure. We never saw Mr. Smith and he has no interest in this preparation. While reading his letter, a San Francisco physician of high standing called to say that he had just pulled a business man out in a case of Bright's Disease in which the patient would have died if the old treatment had been continued.

If this is true then in the name of humanity why are people being held exclusively to treatment under which the books declare the disease incurable when many are recovering by the simple addition of Fulton's Renal Compound (to relax the kidney) to the heart and tonic treatment, etc., already being given. There is no conflict of interest for Fulton's Renal Compound is a pleasant and refreshing drink, leaves no bad after effects, is mildly laxative, and contains no habit-forming drugs.
