CARNARVON, Wales, July 12.—The most interesting event ensuing on the coronation is to take place tomorrow—namely the investiture of Edward Albert, the young Prince of Wales, amid quaint Welsh surroundings and at the very birthplace of the first English Prince of Wales, Edward, son of King Edward I and Queen Eleanor.

Tradition connected with the ancient Welsh castle of Carnarvon, where the ceremony is to take place, says that after Edward I's conquest of Wales the Welshmen refused to obey any Prince appointed by the King as regent of the principality unless he was born on its soil. Queen Eleanor shortly afterwards gave birth to a son in the castle of Carnarvon, and thereupon the King, calling the chiefs of the Welsh nation together, asked them whether they would obey a Prince nominated by him, as he was compelled to leave the country. They replied in the affirmative on condition that the Prince was a Welshman. Edward then named his own son, born only a few days before, and the Welshmen were satisfied.

Prince Shown to Nation.

The Prince was afterward shown to the nation, or as many of them as could get near enough to see him, from what is known as Queen Eleanor's gateway. It is from this gateway of the castle, which had been prepared for the purpose, that the new Prince of Wales, after his investiture tomorrow, will show himself to his subjects, who are to gather to the number of 15,000 or 20,000 in the vicinity.

Entering the walled city by the north road tomorrow the King and Queen and the young Prince pass through the main street to the great castle square, where the royal and civic officials receive them and present loyal addresses.

The royal party then separates, the Prince of Wales preceding his parents to the castle by a few minutes after entering the ancient fortress by the water gate. As he passes into the castle his standard is hoisted on the Eagle Tower, where it is said the first Prince of Wales was born, although the story has only tradition to support it.

King and Queen Follow.

The King and Queen follow almost immediately, and on their appearance at the water gate the royal standard takes the place of that of the Prince of Wales.

Suites of apartments, supposed to have been occupied long centuries before by Edward I and his Queen, have been prepared for their reception. The young Prince, and to these they retire in order to robe themselves for the great state ceremony.

The public assemblage is seated on specially erected benches around the interior of the castle walls. A great body of troops is also to be drawn up surrounding a platform in the center of the immense courtyard. The King's Welsh choir, consisting of 400 voices, performs the musical part of the programme with a selection of Welsh airs.

The royal party, having robed, forms two processions in ladies' apartments, the King and Queen with their suites in the first, and the Prince of Wales with his supporters in the second.

Choir Sings Anthem.

The King and Queen thence proceed to the raised platform in the courtyard, as they appear in the open air the choir singing "God Save the King" in Welsh, and the King, in which the Prince was the central figure, and as he approaches his royal parents the choir sings "God Bless the Prince of Wales," and the public give a salvo of ringing cheers.

The formal ceremony of investiture is then carried out, the Prince bending down to his subjects in a formal salute of crimson velvet while the King places a crimson velvet cap ornamented with ermine on his head. His Majesty then crosses him a cord, and the Prince, in turn, places a golden ring on the King's finger, and the King, in turn, places a golden ring on the Prince's finger. At the same time letters patent are handed to the Prince authorizing him to hold the principality of Wales in trust for the King of England, out of whose possession Wales must never be allowed to go.

Then the bishops of St. Asaph and Bangor, assisted by Welsh non-conformist ministers, conduct the beautiful service of consecration, and the processions re-form and march to the Queen's gate of the castle, where the King, following the example of Edward I, presents the Prince of Wales to the people of the nation, or rather to the many thousands of their assembled outside. The Prince, in order to show the people that he intends to keep their interests at heart, addresses a few phrases in Cymric.

After this second presentation the procession unites and make together a complete circuit of the castle walls on the outside, returning by the main front entrance and passing to their apartments to disrobe and prepare for their journey later on to Holyhead.

ORDERS WERE DISOBEYED

ing to his testimony, without undressing, so as to be ready for a call.

Ship's Light Reported.

About 1:45 o'clock in the morning, he was notified by Thomas that a ship's light was ahead. He looked out the port-hole, saw the light and turned in. Again, at 2:45, he was aroused by Thomas, who said they were ahead a light which he thought was Point Arguello.

Faria said he asked Thomas the distance between Sur and Arguello, and was told it was 104 miles, when in fact it was 117 miles. No sooner did they reach the bridge, the witness continued, than he saw breakers ahead. Thereupon he threw over the wheel and signalled below to reverse the engines. This was done, but the vessel grounded, running on the sand, as it seemed to him. He made several attempts to work off and failed. Faria pronounced the weather hazy at that time.

Reason Is Sought.

"What reason did you have for not trying to land the passengers while the sea was smooth?" asked Inspector Boles.

"The reason," said Faria, "was that I thought it much better to wait until the President came along. She is a large vessel and I thought it dangerous to try to get the people on board the schooners from the small boats. I did not land them through the surf for fear of capsizing."

The question whether the witness would have made the transfer if no instructions had been received by wireless from the company was then put by Bulger.

"The message did not exactly stop me," replied Faria, who then reverted to his explanation just given. He said he had thought the chances of pulling the vessels off the sand looked excellent.

"If there had been no money consideration no bargaining," repeated Bulger, "would you have put the passengers on the Centralia, speaking of the morning, while the sea was smooth?"

Point-Blank Question Put.

Faria still held to the same answer regarding fear of the lifeboats capsizing. This caused Bulger to ask point blank whether he had relied solely on his own judgment, unaided by the company's message, in keeping the passengers on the Santa Rosa.

"Yes," replied Faria.

The captain could not account for the accident, but said he would have, without doubt, foreseen the danger had he been called on deck early, as he ordered. He declined to place the blame on the Thomas.

Thomas testified Faria's statement that the compasses were true and the ship was steering well. But he denied that Hewson told him to arouse the captain at 1 o'clock or at passing the President. He said he did not see the President's lights at all, but reported the vessel at 11:45 P. M., following a standing order of Captain Alexander.

The light reported preceding the accident burned bright and clear, just like that of Point Arguello, he said, and he reported it as such. The only possible explanation he could offer for the ship getting off the course was the theory of a strong in-shore current.

Inspector Baker asked the company's officials to produce the wireless messages sent to the ship.

Clayton Harrington, of the Department of Justice, and Assistant United States Attorney Earl Pier are watching the proceedings, which will continue tomorrow.

BOURNE FEARED MACHINE

Salem Ticket Agent Sends Hurry
Call to Police; Tacks Found.

SALEM, Or., July 12.—(Special.)—Sending in a hurry call to Chief of Police Hamilton, declaring that there was an infernal machine at the South Pacific depot which threatened the lives of the employees there, Jonathan Bourne, local ticket agent, caused the chief of police to rush at a mile a minute on his motorcycle to the scene of the trouble.

When Hamilton arrived, Bourne was holding the alleged infernal machine at arm's length and turned it over to the chief of police with instructions to take it far from the depot if the officer wished to tamper with it. Taking the article outside, the chief opened it only to discover that it was loaded with tacks fresh from the factory.

lines leading to Portland. Mr. McMurray is a member of Portland lodge and acted on the publicity committee that conducted the campaign before Tuesday's decisive ballot.

A movement has been started to have another celebration similar to the one of last night to greet the victorious Elk officials when they return from the convention late this month.

Mining Expert to Speak.

GRANTS PASS, Or., July 12.—(Special.)—J. S. Diller, engaged by the Government to survey the Galice quadrangle, has been requested to speak before the mining congress at this place on July 18. Professor Diller has been quite active in mining districts and has served as a special agent of the Government a number of times to gather full and complete information as to the geological and mineralogical formation of the country. His number on the programme will be an attractive feature.

Marshfield Plans Summer School.

MARSHFIELD, Or., July 12.—(Special.)—A summer training school for teachers will be held in Marshfield for two weeks beginning August 7. Professor Boll and Miss Smith, of Portland, will be the principal instructors. Governor West, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Alderman and President Ackerman of the State Normal School at Monmouth, will be speakers. President Campbell of the State University at Eugene, and President Kerr of the Agricultural College, are both expected to be here during the session.

SURPRISE IS DUE

Insurgents Confident in Education Convention.

BYLAW CHANGES OPPOSED

Questions of School Policy and Association Machinery Will Be Treated Today in Separate Report.

SALE, Or., July 12.—(Special.)—The National Educational Association prepared tonight for its annual meeting tomorrow, at which officers for the coming year are to be elected, the report of the resolutions committee is to be received, and what is held of greatest moment, amendments to the bylaws, prepared by a committee appointed two years ago, are to be offered for final action.

Because the association has no delegates, and any active member can vote at the meeting, the unexpected is regarded as more likely to happen than in conventions organized coherently. Tonight, however, the so-called "progressive" or "insurgents" expressed confidence that the nominating committee formally named at tonight's session by Ellis Pingree Young, the president, would name Carroll G. Pearce, of Milwaukee for the presidency.

Mrs. Young Recognized.

Mrs. Young, by custom, will become first vice-president, and 11 other vice-presidents will be named together with a treasurer. Miss Katherine D. Blake, of New York, who presented last year at Boston the minority report, also is regarded as a good possibility. Dr. Irwin Shepard, of Winona, Minn., the present secretary, enters the second year of a four-year term. His efficiency has been commended in several speeches. If Pearce falls of nomination in committee he is to be nominated by minority report, as was Mrs. Young last year.

The report of the resolutions committee will be devoted to questions of school policy and will not deal with the association's politics or machinery, which will be dealt with by resolutions and speeches from the floor.

Amended Bylaws Fought.

As to the report on amendments to bylaws, the "insurgents" intend trying to dispose of it summarily, and to achieve the appointment of a brand new committee on the same subject. They object to all of the report, but mostly to a provision that bylaws may be amended hereafter only by a three-fourths vote of active members present at a session, and that in order to vote, members must "sign up" three months in advance. They assert that it is unusual for three-fourths of the active members present at a session ever to attend the active members' meeting and have a long list of objections to the other proposal.

It was reported tonight that an appropriation of $1000 will be recommended and made for an investigation of general conditions in rural schools. This is about five times as much as the sum of all appropriation made last year for investigations. Other similar appropriations are hoped for.

Mrs. Emmons Blaine, of Chicago, addressed tonight's general session of the convention on "The Opportunity of the Teacher." Charles Zueblin, of Boston, spoke on "The Life of the Teacher."

WOMEN WOULD HEAR TRIAL

the indictments severally as follows:

1. The sale of unsecured Lewis Publishing Company notes. No pretense was made that they were secured.

2. The sale of an over-issue of real estate mortgage notes. Each note is certified by a title company and this charge is knowingly false.

3. The sale of debentures. The funds from such sales were used for the purpose for which they were sold.

4. That the publishing company stock was worthless. The postal office made it worthless, if that is so.

Court Rebukes Juror.

When the grand jury reported to Judge Triebel, Eugene B. Stinde, one of the grand jurors, said he wanted to lodge a protest against one of the indictments. It was understood that he referred to a Lewis indictment and he was allowed to speak. Before the court could interrupt, he had accused the District Attorney of prejudice.

Judge Triebel took umbrage at the juror's speech. He said that it was an improper one and opinion that if a juror wanted to make a speech, he should hire a hall.

Twelve Counts Named.

The indictment, containing 12 counts, covers four propositions laid before the public by Lewis, in which he is alleged to have obtained several millions of dollars by misleading statements circulated through the mails.

It is charged that Lewis, through misrepresentation with intent to defraud, sold unsecured notes on the woman's National Daily Building in University City, of which Lewis is Mayor; Heights Realty & Development Company, operated a "debeture scheme," and that he misrepresented the condition of the Lewis Publishing Company in selling stock in the corporation.

Lewis recently put his corporations in the hands of trustees, with sole power to handle them for five years. At the end of that time it is expected he will receive them back without indebtedness. Certain creditors have attacked the trustees in the Federal Court by asking that a receiver be appointed.

Lewis Indicted Before.

Lewis was indicted in 1905 on charges of conducting a scheme to defraud through his operation of the People's United States Bank, one of his corporations. Other indictments charged him with defrauding the Government of postal funds by sending through the mails a great number of sample copies of his publications that the law permitted. He was acquitted on several of these charges, and all were dismissed later by the Government.

Lewis said today: "The investigation of my claims by Congress begins today in Washington and these Federal officials here are trying to head off the investigation by returning indictments. They did it once before and are trying it again."

Lewis has given $5000 bond.

The postoffice of this country handles annually about 14,000,000 pieces of mail, while that of Mexico handles about 185,000,000 pieces.

"INSIDE TIPS" HELP, TOO

Favored Customers of Railroads Declared to Be Helped by Advance Information as to Changes in Rates.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Railroads give, or are still forced to give, rebates to big corporations and to the detriment of small concerns, declared Frank C. Lowry of New York, general salesman for the Federal Sugar Refining Company, before the "sugar trust" investigating committee today.

Information Given in Advance.
Frank L. Neils, a Philadelphia shipping agent, testified that while uniform rates are in operation, big concerns with "inside information" about intended changes in rates or which receive advance notice of changes of freight put smaller dealers under a handicap.

"Rates are so complicated," said he, "that a big concern like the American Sugar Refining Company must employ a rate expert at $25,000 a year to 'work out' rates or all of its directors would go to jail for violating the interstate commerce laws."

Representative Fordney, of Michigan, expressed an opinion that any wide-awake man would know about proposed changes in rates.

"Yes," added Representative Baker, of California, "the same kind of wide-awake fellows have been cheating the public for 20 or 25 years."

Lighterage Profit Huge.

The witness said "artificial reasons" led the sugar trust to make a large percentage of the sugar refining business from Philadelphia to New York, although Philadelphia received an advantage in freight rates to the west coast coal cheaper and had better water facilities.

He referred to the Brooklyn Terminals sugar, owned by the American Lighterage Company, which is a large concern in New York harbor, and to the opportunity to commit customs' frauds as possible reasons.

Eagle Delegate Beaten, Robbed.
ABERDEEN, Wash., July 12.—(Special.)—Sydney Grayson, of Elma, was brought from Westport today and taken to a local hospital suffering from a beating he received after being robbed at Westport last night. H. E. Roberts and Elmer Wilkins, were arrested at Westport by Deputy Sheriff Ingram, as Grayson's assailants. Grayson was not only beaten but robbed of a diamond pin and $40 in cash. Grayson who is a delegate to the convention at Herndon, Monday night, departed yesterday to attend the clam bake. He remained at Westport last night expecting to return today.

Drug Plant Soils Found.
SOUTH BEND, Wash., July 12.—(Special.)—A thorough survey of the soils of Pacific County is now being made under the supervision of Professor H. K. Benson, of the State University. Professor Benson is also using a sectional map of the county, accompanied by all the information he could procure from the report on soils. It is his opinion that the logged-off lands of this county can be profitably used in the cultivation of drug plants.

Centralia Church to Build.
CENTRALIA, Wash., July 12.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the board of trustees of the First Presbyterian Church of Centralia, Monday night, it was decided to call for bids for the erection of a new church building. The congregation has outgrown its present place of worship. The new building will cost between $5000 and $9000. More than $5000 has already been raised by subscriptions.

Vancouver Shipyards Burned.
VANCOUVER, B. C., July 12.—A spectacular fire early this morning destroyed the Wallace Ship-Yards at North Vancouver, opposite the city waterfront. The blaze lighted up the entire bay, and for a time threatened to spread to a sawmill and other buildings in the vicinity. The loss was $50,000.

There are 25,000,000 acres of forest in the Philippine Islands, said to be, acre for acre, four times as valuable as forests in the United States.

GRAY HAIR MAKES YOU LOOK OLD

A Simple Remedy Brings Back
the Natural Color.—Dandruff Quickly Removed.

How often one hears the expression, "She is gray and beginning to look old." It is true that gray hair usually denotes age and is always associated with age. You never hear one referred to as having gray hair and looking young.

The hair is generally the index of age. If your hair is gray, you can't blame your friends for referring to you as looking old. You can't retain a youthful appearance if you allow your hair to grow gray. Many persons of middle age deplore the gray hairs in a few days. It is also guaranteed to remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

It is a pleasant dressing for the hair, and after using it a few days itching and dryness of the scalp entirely disappear.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special agent, Owl D.
