INQUIRY IS ASKED

St. Johns Pastor Makes Report of Strange Case.

HIS SUSPICION AROUSED

E. F. Schultz Dying Suddenly and $500 Disappearing Regarded by Informant as Needing Investigation.

At the request of Rev. C. Buechler, pastor of the St. Johns Evangelical Lutheran Church, and some of his parishioners, the County Court has detailed Detective Maher to make an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Ernest F. Schultz, who died at the residence of a family named Moser in St. Johns last month and who was buried in Columbia Cemetery.

The people of the church, of which Schultz was a member, suspect foul play as the body is said to have turned black after death. Their suspicions are aroused by the fact that Schultz is believed to have had about $500 in cash on his person the night he left the Chicago lodging-house, where he had lived for years, and went to visit the Moser family. This was also the night of the man's death. The Moser family gave out the report that he had committed suicide.

OREGON WOMAN WHO LIVED 57 YEARS IN STATE IS DEAD

Mrs. Julia Bell Jones, who died July 7 at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. P. Reddaway, at Salem, Or., from heart failure, was a pioneer of Oregon, having been born in Bethel, Polk County, February 3, 1854, of pioneer parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Bell.

MOSQUITO IS FOUGHT

Health officers throw oil in still ponds. Crusade to be waged until all breeding grounds are visited. Police also aid.

Crude oil was sprinkled over the still ponds in Sullivan's Gulch yesterday by City Health Officer Wheeler in the first of a two-days' campaign against mosquitoes, and a good deal of the water in the gulch south was covered. The health officers started out early in the morning and covered a large amount of territory, working through a great part of the day.

The crusade will be continued today and most of the West Side will be covered. The greater part of the work is on the East Side and the efforts of the health officers will be directed chiefly against that portion of the city. On the West Side a few still ponds near the Willamette River, but the amount of water at the edge of the river runs into the Willamette, although sluggishly.

The large sloughs on the East Side, near the Columbia River, are impossible of treatment, as they drain into the Columbia. Large bodies of still water in the south part of the city will be covered by employees of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, which will co-operate with the health officers in this work.

Members of the police department, acting as health officers, have been busy all day with the effort of identifying names of property owners who violate the law in allowing vacant lots to be encumbered with long grass and refuse. Officers are stopping the spread of the pests through the bodies of still water which will reduce the number of mosquitoes, say the crusaders.
