ENGINEER SAVES TRAIN

New York Police Seek Wreckers Who Piled Ties on Track.

NEW YORK, July 24 .- Bloodhounds are aiding the detectives searching to-day for the highwaymen who made an attempt to wreck a Long Island pass-enger train near Valley Stream, L. L. last night. A 15-car train, crowded with pleasure-scekers, was speeding into this city when Whitford, the engi-neer, saw an obstruction on the track. He threw on his brakes, reversed his engine, and brought the train to a stop within 15 feet of the obstruction. A tie had been planted in a hole dug between the rails, the end tilted toward the approaching locomotive. It had been firmly spiked down between the ties and then securely tied by ropes.

Passengers Left in Italy on Account of Cholera.

QUARANTINE IS FEARED

Health Officers at New York Say There Is No Danger of Spreading of Disease-No New Cases Are Reported.

NEW YORK, July 24 .- For the first ! time in many a year, a great passenger liner between Italy and the United States arrived at New York this mornlog, her cabins empty and steerage void of life, with not a passenger aboard. The cause was the cholera epidemic in New York City and Boston, which United States health officials are fighting with all the vigor at their command. So rigid is the quarantine now in force at this port, that the 70° passengers orginally booked to take passage on the steamship, the San Giorgio, were disembarked at Naples by the officials of the company.

This action followed a cable from the United States that the time of quarantine for passengers bound from Naples to this country had been in-creased from five to 10 days. The steamer was sent on to arrive on schedule time on account of its large onsignment of perishable freight.

The stringent measures taken to prevent further spreading of cholera here vent further spreading of cholora here undoubtedly will prove effective, according to the health officers, who to-day noted that no new cases had developed since last Saturday, when Manuel Bermudes, a Spanish foreman, was found to be suffering from the disease at Bellevue Hospital. The reports from Hoffman Island this morning stated that there were no further suspicious cases of sickness among suspicious cases of sickness among the detained passengers of the steam-ship Moltke and that more of the passengers probably would be released soon from quarantine.

No further deaths were reported from Swiphure Idand, where Berney

BOSTON, July 24.—The body of Mrs. Tomassini Mastrodenico, Boston's first victim of cholera, was buried today in a little graveyard near the quarantine station at Gallup's Island. The woman's two children were taken to the quaran-tine station today, where they were watched by experts. "We are trying to watch every immigrant that comes from New York," said Dr. S. H. Dur-gin, chairman of the Board of Health, today. No trace of the Spanish sailor who recently came to Boston with chol-era was found today.

The speaker's pleadings to "observe the decencies of debate," were drowned in the uproar. The wonder was that CLEVELAND. July 24.—Many shots were exchanged between strikers and guards in a garment strikers riot here today. Two strikers were wounded and the police made many arrests.

The rioting occurred at the home of Charles Sperling, father of E. Sperling, of E. Sperling & Co., cloakmakers.

The garment workers believed that Mr. Asquith from explaining the views of the government. So violent were the were the ministerial adherents that the speaker, after two hours, decided to sus-pend the sitting to obviate graver dis-

Asquith Gives Speech to Press.

The members dispersed amid a scene of violent excitement, with shouts of "traitor," "coward," following the Prime Minister as he departed, to which the Ministerialists hurled back cries of "You are beaten! We will win!"

Mr. Asquith tonight issued to the news Mr. Asquith tonight issued to the news-papers a summary of the speech he was prevented from delivering. In it he con-tended that the principles of the machin-ery of the bill had been before the people at two elections. By no form of referendum devisable could the opinion of the electorate have been more carefully ascertained.

The government has accepted the important amendments in the House of portant amendments in the House of Commons: the purpose of the Lords' amendments was to set the machinery aside. The government had proposed specifically to describe what were finance bills: the Lords proposed to create a committee, which the Premier described as a "junta," to determine what were finance bill and what were matters of great gravity—whatever that might mean—which should be put before the country by referendum. There was not a great budget of the last 70 years which could not possibly have been thrown out could not possibly have been thrown out by such a junta.

Premier Explains Position.

When you have a Unionist majority in both houses." continued the Prime Minister, "the whole thing becomes a dead letter. Measures of the most farreaching effect may be passed in defiance of public opinion and over the heads of the electorate. You live under an unchecked and undiluted single chamber government; but with the Liberal government in power, you would have a House of Commons, fettered beyond all its predecessors, in control of finance, and in all cases where an irresponsible and non-representative body, independent of both houses, should so determine, every deadlock will be settled only by referendum."

"These amendments," added Mr. Asquith, "taken as a whole, amount to rejection of our bills." After quoting constitutional writers and the history of the passage of the reform bills by William IV., he gave his promise to create enough peers to insure the passage of the present bill.

Balfour Is Apologetic.

A. J. Balfour, leader of the opposition, in reply to the speech the Premier was unable to make, received a quiet hearing. He was somewhat apologetic. He went on to denounce the policy of the Government, when he was inter-rupted by the Home Secretary, Winston Spencer Churchill. Mr. Balfour turned hotly upon the Home Secretary and said he remembered him as the ringleader of a gang of disturbers, who, when a constitutional question was at stake, kept a Minister standing an hour without allowing a word to be Mr. Balfour reminded the House that the parliamentary bill had not been re-jected by the House of Lords. "The Prime Minister seems assured that the Constitution provides for the creation of peers as the ordinary ministry for dealing with a deadlock between the two Houses," he continued.

"I believe revolutions may be necessary—but that the Prime Minister is destroying the prerogative of the destroying the prerogative of the Crown and the independence of the House of Lords at one stroke—not to avert war or to carry measures which the masses of the people are passion-ately desirous of—but for one object only—to prevent the people of this country from expressing any new ver-dict on a question which they had twice before expressed in their verdict on home rule."

None is more anxious than he to avoid swamping the historic House of Peers with a battalion of new creations, and if his personal influence can effect it, he will arrange some plan for overcoming the present deadlock. His Majesty today gave audience to Premier Asquith A. J. Balfour, leader of the opposition in the House of Com-mons, and Lord Lansdowne, the Unionist chief in the House of Lords. It was understood that His Majesty would see other leaders later in the day.
