

PARADOXICAL VOTE ON PERMITS CAST

Councilman Maguire Favors Twohy Brothers but Turns Down Mt. Hood Line.

DOWN WARD IS PRIVILEGED

Grant Also Denied United Railways by Council—Date for Charter Election Set at January 9.

Councilman Maguire, of the Tenth ward, blossomed forth yesterday morning as a hard-headed champion of the rights of the people and pounded the air with his fists as he declared that never would he vote for a special permit. This was when the members were considering the proposed permit for the Mount Hood Railway, Light & Power Company to use the length of two blocks on Villa avenue for construction purposes.

After his attention was called to the inconsistency of his votes, Councilman Maguire asked Councilman Clyde to ask for a reconsideration of the Twohy Bros. permit vote, but the other members, having voted to grant the permit, refused to reconsider.

Through his opposition to special permits in general and the proposed Mount Hood permit in particular, Councilman Maguire succeeded in delaying action by reference of the request of the company to a committee for "consideration," although, as Councilman Dunning pointed out, the company has been trying to get permission to enter Portland for two years.

City Attorney Grant, being asked whether special permits are illegal, said they are. He explained, however, that it has long been the practice of the city, in such instances as these, to grant permits because of commercial exigencies to permit construction work, as in the case of the Mount Hood Company, while the company is seeking a permanent franchise.

Maguire Asserts Self. "There is a gang hanging around here which asks everything and anything," said Councilman Maguire, when the Mount Hood permit came up. "This gang has asked for everything in town but this building (the City Hall). And they have gotten everything they ask, without payment of anything to the city. I think it is high time we put a stop to this kind of business, and I shall emphatically oppose any special permit."

Councilman Daily opposed special permits, also, and he and Councilman Wilhelm discussed the affair at some length. Mr. Daily was under the impression that all franchises must first be passed upon by the people, and he thought that, if the Council granted the permit, it would interfere with the rights of the public.

Councilman Clyde said that he believed that the people, in voting for Councilman last June, chose many new members because of the acts of the old Councilmen in "driving away the people's streets for nothing."

Corporation Favoritism Seen. "It has been my observation," said Councilman Clyde, "that this Council does not go out of its way to give something to a poor man, but that all big corporations will be provided for some day. I am opposed to all special permits."

Councilman Joy defended the special permit, saying that the Mount Hood Company has built its line to the city limits, has expended large sums in good faith, and that it should not be hampered by refusal of the Council to grant it sufficient sewerage to construct its tracks. The city, he said, needs more sewer lines, for in this way alone can there be competition and adequate service.

Following its course in refusing to grant the permit to the Mount Hood Company, the Council refused to grant a permit to the United Railways Company to lay a spur track on the north side of Flinders street between Tenth and Eleventh streets. This was desired that facilities be provided for some merchants, who wished to ship supplies.

Councilman Menefee, after listening to the various talks by Councilman Maguire, Clyde, Daily and Wilhelm, said he thought "this is all tommyrot and hot air," and moved that the Council proceed to business.

Charter Election Set. By unanimous vote, the Council passed an ordinance by which the charter election, January 9, as the date upon which commission plan proposed charters may be submitted to vote of the people.

The Council also amended its rules for the purpose of providing for a committee of five to handle industrial problems, as suggested by the Portland Commercial Club.

The Council refused permission to the Hurley-Mason Company to fence up Alder street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, while a building is constructed at Fifth and Alder streets.

"This is exhibiting more gall than I supposed any man in this city possessed," remarked Councilman Maguire, when this subject came up.

For the first time in many years, the police department was represented at the Council session by its Chief, E. A. Riever, acting head of the force, appearing early and remained for the entire session. He said he felt he could keep in closer touch with city business in this way, and intends to continue the practice.

PORTLAND GIRL TO DARE HEIGHTS IN BALLOON

Miss Fay King Declares She Will Make Ascent With Miss Tiny Broadwick at Oaks Next Saturday Afternoon.

A PORTLAND girl is determined that a girl from Pittsburgh shall not outdo the Western girl in real daring. Fascinated by the danger and thrills of an aeronaut's life, Miss Fay King, artist and writer, has announced that she will make a trip to the clouds next Saturday afternoon in company with Miss Tiny Broadwick, the clever little girl parachutist and balloonist at the Oaks.

Miss King was interviewing and sketching Miss Broadwick in the workshop of the Broadwick family at the Oaks Park. The two girls were seated on a big pile of balloons and parachutes. Miss Broadwick told of how she loved the excitement and danger, and said that she had cried that day because she was not permitted to make an ascent.

"Oh, how I would like to go up with you," exclaimed Miss King. Miss Broadwick jumped up, ran to a closet and brought out a tiny red dress. "This is one of my costumes. You are just about the same size that I am. You can wear it and can then go up with me."

"You may be scratched up a bit as you fall, or you may drop into the river for the boats to pick you up," said Miss King.

But how would I stick to the parachute? Miss King queried.

Miss Broadwick showed her visitor a safety belt. "We use these for learners," she argued. "You just can't fall out with this on. Of course, we never use them, for it is not professional."

At the end of the conversation Miss King pledged herself to make the trip. "I have always wanted to be in a show," she said. "My first serious love affair was with a clown, and ever since I have wanted to be with shows, and I sure am going up with Tiny. Just think of the lovely story I can write when I come down. We must have a photograph taken, because no one will really believe I have been up unless we prove it." The ascension will be made at 4:30 P. M. Saturday.

Jack Quinn, a first-class apprentice on the Oregon, is a tinner in Portland; Landeman Nelson and Boylan, of the Oregon, are in Oregon City; Captain's Writer Cradley, of the Oregon, is in Portland, and J. E. Orton, a gunner, on leave of absence but still in the service, is in Portland on a visit.

"Frenchy" Giese, of the Oregon, is in the Circuit Court yesterday as a defendant in a complaint filed by George S. Shepherd, who was removed last Spring from the position of Captain of the Oregon Naval Militia by Adjutant-General Finzer following an investigation by a court of inquiry. The court was made up of the three men whom Captain Shepherd attacked.

The latest move of Shepherd in the Naval Militia controversy takes the form of an ouster proceeding against J. J. Reynolds, who was elected captain as his successor. Shortly after Shepherd filed the complaint Judge McElin signed an order citing Captain Reynolds to appear in court at 9:30 o'clock A. M. August 15, and show by what right he holds the position of Captain of the Oregon Naval Militia. Shepherd asserts in his complaint that Reynolds has "usurped and intruded himself into the office."

The action is really brought by the State of Oregon and Shepherd is the relator. The complaint was signed by District Attorney Cameron, that the courts may decide who is entitled to the position of ranking officer of the organization and have the controversy shelved permanently.

Shepherd declares that John McNulty, commander of the militia, who was also removed, and he is entitled to all the credit for the rebuilding of the organization that they obtained from the Boston and the appropriation of $25,000 made by the Legislature of the state at its last session. Shepherd asserts that the enlisted men were not allowed to vote at the election at which Reynolds was elected captain, and also that the election was held at a point outside the state.

COURT WAR BEGUN

George S. Shepherd Attacks Militia Inquiry Court.

OUSTER SUIT IS STARTED

Ex-Naval Militia Captain Would Rout Reynolds as Commander and Boston's Skipper Is Cited to Appear.

Colonel Sam White, Lieutenant-Commander Cameron and Captain Bowman are referred to as "three ignorant and inexperienced persons" in a complaint filed by George S. Shepherd, who was removed last Spring from the position of Captain of the Oregon Naval Militia by Adjutant-General Finzer following an investigation by a court of inquiry. The court was made up of the three men whom Captain Shepherd attacked.

The latest move of Shepherd in the Naval Militia controversy takes the form of an ouster proceeding against J. J. Reynolds, who was elected captain as his successor. RUSE GETS GAMBLERS

NEGROES IN CRAP GAME TAKE CHANCE ON DISPATCH.

Patrolman, in Disguise as Messenger Boy, Takes Dinky Dice Players by Surprise.

Disguised as a messenger boy, with telegram book and blanks in his hand, Motorcycle Officer Royce, forced his way into a negro gambling joint at 347 Everett street early yesterday morning and held the door while Sergeant Klien and Patrolman Murlock and Stahl followed him into the room and captured the negroes, two of whom were gambling while the others watched the game.

The bones were clicking merrily when Royce, with the telegram in his hand, knocked at the door of the "Colored Club." They ceased rattling and a lookout peered through the peephole in the thick door of the gambling den when a knock was heard.

"Is Mr. Jack Reeves here?" inquired Royce in a small voice, bending down so that his messenger boy's cap came into the negro's view. "Who is that?" inquired the lookout, whose suspicious eyes were lulled, as he opened the door a crack. "There's no Mr. Jack Reeves here that I know of."

Then Royce's coat came loose and the revolver butt in his holster caused the lookout's eyes to bulge. "That ain't no messenger boy," gasped the negro, and tried to shut the door. Royce put his foot in the jamb, forced the door back and the officers piled into the room.

The two exits to the place had been guarded by Patrolmen Hennessy and Murphy and only one of the negroes attempted flight. With Sergeant Klien in hot pursuit, he dashed up the stairs to the story above. As he turned at the landing, the sergeant's foot came down on his toes and he was held fast. All two were taken to the station, where they were charged with gambling and the rest with watching a gambling game.

Catholic Fathers Are Guests. EUGENE, Or., Aug. 9.—(Special.)—Eugene Catholics will give a farewell reception Friday evening to Rev. Fathers J. M. O'Farrell and B. T. Curley, who have been assigned to work at Medford, beginning with Sunday, August 13. Father O'Farrell has been in Eugene for the past five years, and in that time has been instrumental in doubling the membership of the church, besides directing the erection of a handsome new church home and the building of a greatly enlarged parochial school. Father Curley came here from Marshfield a little less than a year ago. The new pastors for Eugene have not been announced by the Archbishop.
