Prisoner, Unruffled in Bearing, Enters Plea of Not Guilty-Prose-Court Show Him Every Courtesy.

CHESTERFIELD COUNTY COURT HOUSE, Va., Aug. 21 .- With members of the first families of the Old Dominon as the stage characters, the trial of Henry Clay Beattle, Jr., on the charge of slaying his beautiful young wife in a motorcar in a turnpike near Richmond a month ago, began here to a dramatic setting today.

In the couriroom were many whose ancestors a half century ago had borne arms for the South in the Civil War, and who traced their forbears back even to the landing of the chevallers who settled in Jamestown under John Smith.

spite of dark rings under his eyes brought about by his confinement in jail, was trim and almost jaunty in his manner, seemingly indifferent to his fate, sut his gray-haired father, himself one of the last of the old or-der of Southern chivalry of the days before the war."

Prosecution Is Courteous,

curious contrast to proceedings in a Northern court was the manner in which the trial was conducted. Even by the prosecution, there seemed to be pains taken to show every deference to the prisoner. When Judge Watson, after chatting several minutes with representatives of the news-papers, straightened up at the bench, the clerk formally called the case for the commonwealth, and the prosecu-tion asked that the prisoner be arraigned.

After a motion by the defense for postponement until next Monday on the ground that the defense was not ready for trial had been overruled by the court, Beattle was asked to stand up. As he arose to his feet, his aged father arose also and stood beside him, his bearing proud, yet respectfulf But as the clerk read the Indictment against his son, grief momentarily overcame him and he bowed his head. Beattle did not filinch. When it came time for him to plead, he answered "Not guilty" in a clear and firm voice.

The tiny room was jammed as the proceedings began, and to discourage the curious and idle, the court ordered that all disinterested spectators stand up and remain standing. Two women newspaper writers were the only white men in the yard or court building.

Virginia Women Stay Away.

To Virginia's credit, it was noted that not one white woman was in court, ex-cept two newspaper women. Barring those who may be called as witnesses, it is believed that few, if any, women will attempt to gain admittance at

Courthouse, the crowd began to as-semble early, hoping to catch a glimpse of Beattle. Heattle was up early, ready for the 15-mile automobile ride from Richmond to the jall here. He slept well, as he has done since his arrest more than a month ago. He dressed carefully, glanced at the morning papers, ate breakfast and sat waiting in the jail corridor for his first trip in the open air since his imprisonment. Beulah Binford, the pretty 17-year-old girl in the case, has made no preparations to leave the jail in Richnd, where she has been held as a mond, where she has been held as a material witness, but Paul Beattle, the prisoner's cousin, who has sworn that he purchased the gun with which Louise Weliford Owen Beattle was shot, was instructed late last night that he must be ready to make the journey by automobile to Chesterfield. Paul has said little since his incarrent. Paul has said little since his incarceration, but on his testimony the commonwealth hopes to send his 25-year Binford girl may be called as a wit-ness as the trial progresses.

SAN FRANCISCO. Aug. 21.—(Special.)—Charles I. Curtis, of Astoria, Or., six feet two inches in his stocking feet, wrecked a barber shop on Market street, knocked down the proprie-tors, Charles Matis and Archie Ken-dall, and caused a riot call to be sen-to the harbor police station this morning. Then he caused the arrest of the barbers.

Curtis walked into the barber shop early today, took off his hat and hung it up. He removed his collar and tie very carefully and unbuttoned the col Il attempt to gain admittance at a trial. There had been all sorts of rumors possible postponements or continuances, but with more than 50 witnesses subpoenced by the commonwealth and a venire of 32 talesmen en route to the Courthouse, the crowd by the country to the court would, so the barbar desisted that it would, to lather Curtis' face.

Giant's Head Twisted.

The barber gave Curtis' head a sudden twist. Curtis objected, Matis in sisted he was as gentle as a kitten "You're too rough for me," shouted Curtis, rising from the chair.

ROAD'S TIMBER DEBT BIG Denver & Rio Grande Must Pay for Old Tree Trespass.

DENVER, Aug. 21.—By a decision handed down today by Federal Judge R. E. Lewis, the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad will have to pay a large sum to the Federal Government for timber trespass committed years ago, when the road was built.

The Government filed suit in 1902 contending that the road, with its sub-sidiary railroad and lumber companies, took advantage of the grant of 1872, which permited it to cut trees from adjacent public land for the building of its roadbed in Southwestern Colorado.

It accused the road of going far into the interior and of even building railroads of a temporary nature to get at the richest timber lands.
