RUSSIAN'S SHOWING IS MOST PITIFUL

Hackenschmidt's Nervousness Proves Undoing, Though He Asserts Bad Knee.

TERRIBLE TOE-HOLD WINS

"Don't Hurt My Toe" and "Don't Break My Leg" Are Cries Which Issue From Foreigner as He Surrenders to Champion.

(Continued From First Page.) seconds to gain the first fall, the second fall required only 5 minutes 32 1-5 which, Hackenschmidt's friends assert, proves that his knee was in bad condition.

Referee Smith is authority for the statement that, when Gotch secured the fatal toe lock which won him the second fall, Hackenschmidt cried out: "Don't hurt my toe," and a second later, "Don't break my leg," and fell with his shoulders to the mat, frothing at the mouth.

Terrible Toe-Hold Wins.

The first fall resulted from a reverse body hold, after the men had struggled 14:18 1-5. That terrible toe hold for which Gotch is famous was responsible for the second fall. He clamped it upon the left foot of Hackenschmidt and ended the second fall in 5:32 1-5. Scarcely had he obtained the grip when Hackenschmidt acknowledged defeat with his shoulders.

Hackenschmidt's own statement that It was the easiest world's championship ever won tells the story of the bout. Gotch never was in serious difficulty at any time during the match. Neither was he forced to extend himself to win.

The lowan got, in all, a half dozen dangerous holds on his antagonist. Hackenschmidt obtained a body hold on Gotch that brought him to the mat. But the champion was on the canvas only a few seconds. Then he was down only as far as his knees. Almost before the "lion" realized that his opponent was in a dangerous predicament Gotch had wriggled out of the hold and was bounding across the ring to safety.

"Hack" Offers One Excuse.

For his defeat, Hackenschmidt offers but one excuse—that his left knee, which was injured in training two weeks ago, weakened under the pressure of the iron hands of Gotch, and it was useless to continue at the risk of being permanently injured. Hackenschmidt went into the ring with the knee in a bandage.

Regardless of whether Hackenschmidt's knee was in bad shape, he was in no state mentally to enter the contest. Hackenschmidt was unnerved before he entered the arena. Whether It was from worry over his injured knee or his fretting over the match is not known. Like Jeffries, at Reno, the Russisan passed a sleepless night before the battle. His trainers tried every means to make him at ease They had him room with Johann Koch, a German, and one of Koch's chief duties was to sing songs of the fatherland to the Russian and try to make him feel at ease; but Hackenschmidt would not be calmed.

Russian Cries for Drugs. After trying vainly for several hours to go to sleep, he pleaded with his trainers to give him drugs that would make him rest. They refused to do this and Hackenschmidt retired to fret In the minds of the vast crowd that saw the match there was no doubt as to which was the better wrestler. Gotch outpointed, outgeneraled and outgamed his opponent.

The Iowan appeared to be faster than he ever had been before. His condition was perfect. He entered the ring with confidence and never once did he lose his coolness. At every stage of the bout he smiled, as though he never had the slightest doubt as to the out-

On the other hand, Hackenschmidt seemed ill at ease. During the first fall he went about his work with his face set and anything but the glint of confidence in his eye. After Gotch had gained the first fall the courage of the Russian appeared to have coxed out With shoulders stooped and eyes downcast, he sat in his corner awaiting the starting signal.

Mother and Wife Inspire Gotch.

Up in a box in the center of the grandstand sat two women who did more, perhaps, to cheer Gotch on to victory than all the other persons in the audience. They were his mother and his wife. Frequently, while in and his wife. Frequently, while in the thickest of the fray, Gotch found time to look toward the two women and smile. During the ten minutes' and smile. During the ten minutes intermission between falls he did not go at once to his dressing-room, but stood for a moment in his corner, smiling and waving at the women. Hackenschmidt was heartbroken over the result. In his dressing-room he sat for a half hour in his wrestling and province the result.

his trainers. "Go away," he said to all of them. "Leave me alone."

And then his broad chest would heave and the tears would flow unre-strained from his eyes. Gotch only smiled after the match was over. He said the result was exwas over. He said the result actly as he thought it would be.

Wrestling Story Easily Told.

The story of the actual wrestling is got a body hold and put Gotch to the mat. But he was down only an in-stant.

After 14 minutes of wrestling, Gotch started Hackenschmidt downward with a knee hold, faked a crotch and then quickly worked the Russian into a half-Nelson.

Gotch Pivots on Hack's Stomach.

They struck the mat together, head to head. Then Gotch pivoted on his opponent's stomach, clamped on a re-verse body hold and the first fall was

The first five minutes of the sec bout was a replica of that period in the first. But of a sudden Gotch reached down with his right hand, grasped Hackenschmidt's left ankle and unbalanced the "llon." While Hack-enschmidt was trying to regain his equilibrium Gotch struck the Russian's injured leg with his right knee and Hackenschmidt crumbled into a heap on the canvas. Instantly Gotch was on the canvas. Instantly Gotch was on him, his powerful right hand firmly locked on the toes of the under man's Hackenschmidt screamed a couple of times, rolled over on his shoulders and surrendered to the inevitable.

Wrestlers Tell Versions. After the match the two big grap plers gave out statements. Gotch said:
"Honestly, I didn't think it would be so easy. The very minute we locked heads I felt confident that I would win, but I didn't think victory could come so quickly. Hackenschmidt appeared to be afraid. When I saw that he did not try to break down my defense, I became determined to end it as quickly as possible. I am sorry he laid his poor showing to an injured knee." Hackenschmidt said: "It was the cheapest world's championship ever

I entered the contest with an injured knee and had my shoulders pinned to the mat for the first time in my wrestling career. I should not have gone into the match, but I was advised that I could wrestle without further injuring my knee. I am satisfied that my defeat was due entirely to the injury. I did my best under the conditions. That is all I can say."

Referee Smith said: "Gotch won fairly. Hackenschmidt did not show his usual gameness or aggressiveness. I doubt that he was in the beest of condition for he looked worried and frightqued when the match began. He begged Gotch to release his punishing toe hold, and evi-dently was in great pain when Gotch forced him to defeat. On cleverness alone Gotch should easily remain the champion for 10 more years. without doubt the most scientific man I have ever seen on the mat."

AT THE THEATERS

"THE HAVOC," By H. S. Sheldon. Presented at the Heilig Theater. CAST.

D ESPITE the rain last night, the attendance at the Heilig to witness Henry Miller, that diabolically clever actor, usher in the first play of the season, was representative and worthy of the important occasion. As a harbinger of the theatrical season, Mr. Miller's vehicle, "The Havoc," the work of H. P. Sheldon, proved conspicuously welcome, and Portland folk are once again debtors to this actor. For contemporary purposes the play is one of the best of the latter-day dramatic productions, and if it had been the handicraft of a writer better known would long ere now have been accord-

Undoubtedly Mr. Sheldon has found the happy blending of sound construc-tion, logical facts, and timely inspira-tion in "The Havoc."

ed a place as a plece of great artistic

Given Henry Miller's grasp of all the highest values the play possesses, his genius for dramatic expression and the realism of his artistry, the production becomes a noteworthy stage achieve-

There is no question but that the skeleton of the play rattles at its joints in sheer whimsicality, but for all that the rounding out and building up of the completed structure has been done with a beautiful seriousness of intention, that is none the less human, none the less sincere because its au-thor's philosophy does not happen to be that of the average man.

A wife who fancies herself neglected has fallen in love with an idealist, who chatters along Upton Sinclair's lines of thought on marriage. From a condi-tion of general contentment, the husband, a saturnine, grimly-humorous giant, is forced into a knowledge of the liaison, and sets about to find a remedy with a philosophy that pro-vokes smiles that tremble on the edge of tears, and presents views that sends the audience into mild hysterics the while it grips with its inexorable logic and power. Having an intelligence suf-ficient to hold an apparent equanimity, tile wronged husband gives his wife the divorce she asks, sees her marry her lover, and forces them to accept him as their boarder and intimate friend. The playwright fortunately gives this marvelous man strength with which to bide his time until friend. the awakening comes, and he is per-mitted to wreak vengeance more powerful than any he could have executed earlier in the story. The ma-ternal plays no little part in the story: it is for the sake of a baby born to the last union that the vengeful husband takes lesser toll. But he sends the other man away, a forger and thief, and takes back the repentant woman in the capacity of a stenographer.

As an acting role, that of the in-jured husband fits Mr. Miller, and his work is in every sense powerful and artistic. Ease and confidence marked his portrayal. At one time, when he discovers that the wish has lied about the other man's presence in the house, the illuminating pantomime acting of the actor is really wonderful in its effect. To all of the playeys—there are but four—is given bright, sarcastic and highly humorous lines, and each does justice to his role. Laura Hope Crews is delightfully interesting and an intensely dramatic figure as the wife. Francis Byrne is the acme of realism and admirably fitted for the role of the wife's affinity. Daniel Pennell, in an unimportant, but necessary, part, as an office man, completes the excellent cast. "The Havoc" will be presented this evening, tomorrow evening and at

Director of Hawaii's Experimental Station in Oregon.

NEED OF LINK IS SEEN

E. V. Wilcox Declares Portland, Although Big Importer, Loses by Lack of Direct Connection With Kanaka Land's Center.

E. V. Wilcox, director of the Hawaii government experiment station at Honolulu, who has just returned from trip to the Eastern States, is in Oregon studying trade and industrial conditions and visiting Government institutions in the state which come within the line of his work. Confident that Hawaii has a great future before it as an agricultural center, Mr. Wilcox is interested in seeing the trade with the Pacific Coast increased, especially the trade with Portland.

"At present." Mr. Wilcox said. "Portland has practically no direct trade connections with the islands. The chief regular steamship lines run to San Francisco and Puget Sound ports, while this city, lying between them, is reached only indirectly.

"Pineapples, both fresh and canned, are the chief import that comes to Portland from Hawaii. In this one line, I was informed by prominent plantation owners in the islands, Portland and the State of Oregon are in the lead of all other Pacific States. Pineapples, however, represent only a part apples, however, represent only a part of the products we are able to throw into the Portland markets, once di-rect trade relations are firmly established. Hawaii in turn uses large quan itiles of flour, potatoes and manufac-tured articles, which have to be shipped from the continent. Oregon is able to furnish these perhaps better than either of the two other Coast

Direct Shipments Needed.

"All that is needed is the establish-ment of direct lines of communication, obviating the inconvenience and expense of the roundabout haul to ports of delivery in California and Washington. Hawaii is especially dependent on the United States for manufactured articles, for it is, and always will be, an agricultural and not a manufacturing country."

Mr. Wilcox partially explains the apparent lack of interest shown in Ora-gon for increasing the trade inter-course of the two places, by the fact that Hawaii has not been sufficiently advertised in this state.

"In the year of the Lewis and Clark Exposition," he said, "Hawaii had not yet begun a systematic campaign for advertising her resources and our only representation was a small exhibit in the Government building. When the the Government building. When the Seattle Exposition was held, we had advanced considerably in our development work and our display there was one of the finest on the grounds. Nat-urally, the Puget Sound cities, where our strongest exhibit was shown, and San Francisco, where practically all of our Summer tourists go, are more interested in us than Oregon

Tourists Miss Oregon.

"Tourists from Oregon who spend their Summers in Honolulu are doing much to create an interest in the islands at home, and to increase the trade between Portland and Honolulu. This tourist travel has been provided to the contract that the contract the contract travel has been been provided to the contract travel has been been provided to the contract travel has been provided to the contract travel to the contract travel has been provided to the contract travel to the contract travel This tourist travel has heretofore been one-sided, however, for persons coming from Hawaii usually land at San Francisco and do not come far north. Hence Oregon is practically unknown to them, although the Summer climate here is in many respects superior to that of California, and the opportunities for business are far better."

Mr. Wilcox believes that an active effort to encourage Summer travel between the islands and this state would do much to bring about a business in-crease that would be of profit to both. He suggests concerted effort on the part of merchants here to obtain estab-lishment of more direct steamship lines between Honolulu and Portland. Mr. Wilcox will remain in Oregon until about September 19, visiting the State Agricultural College and Government experiment farms in differen sections of Oregon before returning to resume his duties as director of the Hawalian experiment station.
