Real Buckaroos Career on Wild
Horses—Flea Made to Preserve
Roundup for Young of the Future.

"No more picturesque pageant is staged in America than that real-life bit of the West portrayed at Pendleton in the annual Round-Up," said Julius L. Meier on his return from Pendleton. "I would travel hundreds of miles to see the Round-Up. There are tens of thousands of other people in America who would do the same. It has a powerful fascination for the generation that knows the reality of the old West, and yet has not been given the privilege of witnessing its pioneer stages of development. Special trains could be run from the Eastern states with loads of people for that show, for the country was only fully advised of its excellence and the wonderful realism observed in every detail. I fully believe that 5000 or more men and women of Portland would make the journey annually, if they understood that Pendleton's Round-Up is put on by the living workers of the Western range." Mr. Meier saw the finale in the bucking contests, rope work, Indian races and many other issues framed to reveal the skill and craft of the range. He appeals for wider publicity of the event. Instead of sending the notices throughout the Northwest, he would advertise all over the Nation. For four to six months preceding the Round-Up date, Mr. Meier thinks the railway literature of the country should be marked, and pictures placed in dense traffic centers of the Mississippi Valley and Far East.

No Make-Believe There.
"That is not a mere show at Pendleton," he continued. "None of us would go far to see a Wild West production at the circus tents. Fake cowboy horses, fake cowboys, unreal Indians and trained stock in general, with an excess of paint, fuss and feathers make the circus production flat and uninteresting."

"At Pendleton there is no stage, no make-believe, no fiction. Buckaroos who have spent their whole lives in the saddle, bring the horses of the range there. What you see is what the real men do, in the Western atmosphere, and with a truly Western feeling. It was for me the most impressive spectacle I have ever looked upon, for I could not fall to see in the work the lines of courage, adventure and hardihood which have made the West of our fathers. I believe that no amount of historical recitation could convey the lesson of the West so vividly as the type of spectacle which Pendleton is presenting in its old-fashioned manner. If this work is persevered in for a few years, until the entire Nation realizes its merit and regularity, as sure as mankind admires the strength and skill of the plainsmen when battling fearful natural odds, the attendance upon this Round-Up will grow each year amazingly. "It is only a comparatively few years before the Round-Up with real actors will become impossible. The old West is passing. The swaggering cowboys with their picturesque attire and trappings, and their unerring riata, will disappear when the open range goes and the fenced domain comes. The coming generation will not be able to see a real Western spectacle. Every son of an Oregon pioneer naturally thrills at the work the fathers did, and laments the passing of the age when he cannot see it exemplified in material form. "I think that all of us should join to preserve and develop the Round-Up. It will be one of the most eloquent tributes to our appreciation of what pioneer fathers have done in the West, because it depicts the open range and hardy life. "If you want a real thrill, go out there next year and see one of those Eastern Oregon bronco bolts across the arena, giving his back a catapult motion, which taxes the supreme energy and skill of a daring buckaroo. Then watch the swiftest cowboy, single-handed, study the skill displayed in putting a riata onto a wild beast, bring him to the ground and tie him securely within a few moments. Buffalo Vernon did this in 45 seconds, establishing the world's record. And then see the Indians from the reservation in their weird stunts. If you do not get the Western fever in your system, you are immune from everything of an exciting nature. "I hope Portland will co-operate with the people of Pendleton in making this Round-Up a great annual event, as permanent as the vanishing West of olden times can be."

RAILWAY VETERAN IS DEAD

J. T. Walsh, Superintendent of Corvallis & Eastern, Stricken.
ALBANY, Or., Sept. 19.—(Special).—J. T. Walsh, superintendent of the Corvallis & Eastern Railroad, died today at his home in this city after a brief illness. He caught a severe cold about a week ago, but was not seriously ill until pneumonia developed yesterday. He was born in New Orleans 58 years ago and had been a railroad man all his life. He worked in various states of the Union, both as an engineer and in construction work and came to Oregon in 1895 as master mechanic of the Corvallis & Eastern line. He then lived at Yaguna, moving to Albany about eight years ago, when the Corvallis & Eastern shops were transferred here. He was promoted to the superintendency of the line about five years ago. Mr. Walsh is survived by a widow and young son, Jack Walsh, of Albany, and three children by a former wife, Fred Walsh, of Portland, an engineer on the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad; Miss Mollie Walsh, of Portland, and Mrs. Chauncey Trapp, of Albany. He was a member of Albany Lodge of Elks.

Opening Day Sees Indication of Big Increase in Attendance.
UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Or., Sept. 19.—(Special).—Registrar Tiffany's books at the close of the first registration day at the University today recorded an entry of 282 students. Although this is no marked increase over the opening day's listing last year, the general indications are that the ultimate registry will aggregate considerable more than the attendance of last year. Prediction is made that about 300 students will file their entrance certificates before the year is out. Practically all of those who signed today were newcoming freshmen and some of these were detained temporarily because of indefinite preparatory credentials. Entrants from the upper classes will be received throughout the week and some of the old students will not return for another fortnight. The office reports show that pre-

J. L. Bowman, General Manager, who thoroughly understands the manufacturing of Oregon wool from the time it's cut from the sheep's back until it reaches the man who wears the finished suit.

Until October 1st we give the free pick and choice of any suit in either of our two big stores for only Fifteen Dollars, and there's plenty to choose from that are worth from $25 to $30

In no previous sale in the entire history of these Woolen Mill Stores has there ever been such a tremendous and enthusiastic response. People simply didn't come by the dozens—they came by the hundreds—and on account of their being so many more high-priced suits in the stock than in former sales, they bought freely and were made happy by the enormous bargains.

Reader, please consider carefully what this sale means—that for the sake of gaining new customers and friends—that for fifteen of the best selling days of the entire year, we are willing to not only sacrifice all our profits, but donate several thousand dollars to what we call good advertising.

Walter Holt, assistant manager, also the glad-hand man, who meets you at the door in the Third and Morrison store with a genuine Brownsville all-wool smile.

Robbery of Homes in Vicinity of Salem Traced to Celebrants Who Carry Missing Articles—Revolver Is Identified.

SALEM, Or., Sept. 19.—(Special).—Too much laughing water, the holding up of a rancher for a ride and some Indian arrowheads brought about the apprehension of William Woods and his associates here today, and in their arrest Sheriff Minto believes that he has two of the cleverest burglars in the West. The Sheriff and his deputies have connected them with four burglaries in this county, and they are convinced that the two are wanted for jobs in other cities. The two were on their way from Gervais to Woodburn, and were under the influence of liquor. As J. Leith started to pass them with his wagon, one of them leveled a revolver at him and compelled him to halt and drive them to Woodburn. Upon reaching Woodburn they dismounted and Leith went in search of an officer. Sheriff Minto was communicated with and Deputy Sheriff Esch was dispatched to the scene and took them into custody. Upon searching their persons he found some arrowheads. Remembering that when the home of F. V. Romaine, near the city, was burglarized recently, some arrowheads were taken, he immediately suspected the pair of committing the burglary. An investigation not only proved that his suspicions were well grounded in that case, but also connected them with burglary of the homes of A. C. Simmons, at Gervais, Joseph Shadrek, of this city, and J. W. Yates, of this city. Articles taken from each of the places were found in the possession of the men. From the Shadrek home a revolver was taken, and Shadrek identified the weapon found on one of the men as his, this evening.

KIDNEY TROUBLE OVERCOME BY THE GREAT TREATMENT

I have been a sufferer for years with kidney and bladder trouble and took almost everything a drug store contained, without obtaining any benefit. I suffered so that I became utterly discouraged, as I could not sleep, was always dizzy and had a headache all the time. I saw one of your advertisements and as a last resort, decided to try your Swamp-Root. I am now taking the third bottle and feel like a new woman, sleep well and have no pains whatever. I strongly advise all sufferers to take the only real cure for kidney and bladder trouble, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root was a God-send to me. You may publish this letter if you wish so that it may be the means of bringing some poor sufferers back to health. MRS. MARY O'DONNELL, Lander, Wyo.
