Southwest Development Men Promote Harbor Route.

LOGGED-OFF LANDS FACTOR

Resolutions to Be Drafted to Open Peninsula From South-Grays Harbor and Aberdeen Active in Coming Meeting.

ABERDEEN, Wash. Oct. 1.—(Special.)—Development of the Olympic-peninsula from the south by way of Grays Harbor, its natural outlet, and not from the east by way of Puget Sound, probably will be the demand of the Southwest Washington Development Association when it meets here October 12 to 14. This is expected to be one of the big features of the meeting, which is to be attended by prominent members of the Olympic Development League and prominent men throughout Western Washington.

The idea of the development of the peninsula from the south is to make Aberdeen and Grays Harbor the avowed trading center of the southwest. ABERDEEN, Wash., Oct. 1 .- (Spe

Aberdeen and Grays Harbor the avowed trading center of the southwest, and to this territory the peninsula is declared to be attached naturally. The same question is to come up before the meeting of the Olympic League at Bremerton next week, and a large delegation of harbor residents and the southwest will probably attend that meeting with the expectation of laying the matter before the league and outlining the plan of development, which the harbor proposes.

Route Advantage Urged.

It will be pointed out to the Olympic boosters that three transcentinental roads already have their termini on the barbor, and that all three have surveys into the Olympic region. One of the main objects, it will be shown, for the building here of the lines of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company and the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound, was to reach the Olympic peninsula. It also will be urged that about the only land rail route into the Olympics is through the harbor, all other projects from another direction involving ferry uses. Route Advantage Urged.

The southwest argues that if the Olympic people tie up to the development idea from the Sound side, the entrance through Grays Harbor may entrance through Grave Harney he neglected, and it is proposed to avert this if possible, though it is recognized that the rathroads will proceed with their own plans despite the taken by the course that may be taken by eninsula towns along the straits.

Both the Olympic League and the development association are expected to draft resolutions calling for the opening of the peninsula and both are expected to give their hearty indorsement to the bill, fathered by Congressman Humphrey and now pending in Congress, providing for the opening of the monument to mining prospectors.

Settlement Plan Feature.

Another feature of the development association meeting will be the presentation of the completed plants for the settling of logged-off lands throughout the southwest. The corporation providing for that object has been organized tentatively and it will ask the association to approve its plans and widen its scope so that Scattle will be represented on the board of trustees. This will undoubtedly be done, J. E. Barnes, secretary of the association, who returned here today frem Seattle, reporting that the Sound city was anxious to have such repre-Another feature of the development and would be glad to co-with the southwest in the operate

Lane County Farmers Demonstrate That Cultivation Is Practicable and Crops Raised Are Made to Pay.

E. V. D. Paul, who broke into the ranks of the Oregon hopgrowers this year, declares that Oregon hops, in order to compete with foreign and California hops, must be clean a condition which has been ignored in the past, and which still prevails in nearly every hopyard in the state. Mr. Paul paid a 18-cent bonus on every box of hops picked in his year this year in order that the product be clean.

Mr. Paul owns two large hopyards at Buell, near this place. At a recent hopgrowers' meeting it was agreed upon that all growers who had not contracted their hops, would pick dirty hops, paying a cent a pound for picking.

Mr. Paul opposed such an attitude, and refused to agree to any such com-Understatements, however have been raising corn, not as an experiment, but as a crop that pays. W. O. Starbuck, who lives on the McKensie River seven miles east of Eugene, has grown corn for several years. This year he has more than 15 acres planted, and the yield and size of the ears compare favorably with that of states in the Mississippi Valley. Mr. Starbuck is an iowa farmer, who came here four years ago. He feeds his crop to hogs, turning them into the field, and letting them fatten. Pumpkins are grown in the same field. He considers corn one of his most profitable crops.

William Kerr, who lives on the River Road, along the Williamstte, has a field of 20 acres that compares very favorably with Eastern cornfields. Mr. Kerr is a dairyman, and cuts the green corn into ensilage. A Qualif, also living on the River Road, has made a success of corn growing. Last year he secured the astonishing yield of 100 bushels to the acre from one of his fields, and his prospects are equally good this year. Sixty bushels are a good average crop in the corn country. There are many smaller growers along the bottoms of both rivers who husk their crop, and find a ready sale for it at 50 to 50 cents a bushel for putting the finishing touches to fat hogs. It makes a profitable crop when grown between the rows in peach and wainut orchards.

Owing to early frosts and lack of dry, cold weather later in the Fall, corn does not harden as much as in the Middle West. Its feeding value, however, is not impaired by this fact, although its shipping and keeping qualities are affected. "Corn and hogs" are always associated. Nothing fattens a hog so quickly, or gives so fine a flavor to bacon, as does corn. Nor can it be done as cheaply with any other feed.

One of the reasons why so few hogs are raised in Oregon is that fattening

One of the reasons why so few hogs are raised in Oregon is that fattening is expensive. Farmers who have had experience say that increased growing of corn on river bottom lands that are suited to it will not only make it possible to lower the price of pork to the consumer, but to increase materially the profits of the producer. With a little increased attention given to corn growing, "Made in Oregon" bacon will not be so rare.
