Arrangements as completed yesterday for handling the crowds at the Armory tomorrow night in the Taft meeting promise to eliminate the usual crowding and jamming, which, in the past, resulted in persons being injured and in a general uproar which detracted from the success of the meetings.

The plan as worked out by members of the reception committee, Colonel T. N. Dunbar, of the National Guard, and Chief of Police Slover, will make it impossible for a rush to ensue when the doors of the Armory are opened. Ropes will be stretched across Tenth street on the corners of Couch and Davis streets to prevent the general public from attempting to enter by the east side of the building. Ropes have been placed on the Eleventh-street side that ing in and about the entrance.

site, at Seventh, Park and Stark streets, and the purchase of an entire block for a new building, possibly the property owned by the Laid estate between Eleventh. Tweifth, Yambill and Taylor streets, are under way and the deal bids fair to be consummated soon.

W. B. Ayer, president of the Portland Library Association, said last night that an offer had been made the board of directors of that institution for the half block on which the library building now stands, and that he had obtained options on several centrally-located full blocks, one of which would be selected as the site of the would be selected as the site of the new building.

would be selected as the site of the new building.
While Mr. Ayer declined to make known the name of the prospective purchaser of the present library property or the price to be paid, it is reported that $350,000 is the sum offered for the property and that the Ladd entate managers have agreed to accept $320,000 for their block. A commission of $19,000, it is understood, would have to be paid on the sale of the present library site, and it, would be necessary to occupy the building for probably two years more, while a new structure was under construction. This would make the net selling price about $320,000.

Subject Up Tomorrow. While the act passed by the last Leg-slature provides that the County of islature provides that the County of Multnomah may add a mill and one-half to the tax levy for the purpose of providing funds with which to construct a library building, the bill does not provide that money raised in this manner may be expended in the purchase of a site. In view of this fact, the Ladd estate managers, it is said, have sovreduced the price asked for the Eleventh and Yamhill block that it will be possible for the Library Association.

Eleventh and Yamhill block that it will be possible for the Library Association to purchase it with the money which will be fit its command when the time comes to vacate the present building.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the library association, to be held tomorrow night, the question of the sale of the library property and purchase of a new site will be discussed and some line of action probably decided upon. Mr. Ayer said that after this meeting he would be prepared to make public full details of the proposed changes.

Library Is Inadequate.

The present library building has for years been becoming more and more inadequate to the demands upon it. Last year the library had a circulation of 500,000 volumes, and this year the circulation, according to present indi-cations will mount to 750,000 volumes. The need of a larger building has long been felt. The directors feel that a full block will not be too much space. A committee from the Portland Li-brary Association headed by W. B. Ayer and W. L. Brewster visited the County Commissioners vesterday to County Commissioners yesterday to talk over the transfer of the library to county control, as provided by a statute adopted by the Legislature at its last session. This act placed it within the powers of the County Comdissioners to contract for control of the library. The new board of directhe library. The new board of direc-tors of the library will consist of the Commissioners and those at present constituting it. A form of contract providing for the transfer was sub-mitted to the county by the Library Association several weeks ago, and will be considered shortly.

$468,000 Levy Probable.

The Library Association as at present constituted will retain control of the branch libraries and will have control of the expending of the $105,000 donated by Andrew Carnegie for the purpose of providing branch library buildings. The principal object in having the main library transferred to the county is that it may be possible to add county is that it may be possible to add mill and one-half to the tax levy to provide money with which to construct the new building. Should the property remain vested in a private corporation as at present, this would not be pos-

The assessed valuation of Multnomah County for 1911 will apporoximate, it is estimated, $312,000,000, and, should the tax for library purposes be added to the 1911 taxes, as now seems prob able, the amount raised would be about $468,000, a sum sufficient to insure the construction of a magnificent building and to beautify on a substantial scale the portions of the block not actually covered by the structure.

Mrs. Vera Mueller Testifles That A F. Winslow Duped and Robbed Her-Prisoner Explains.

GIRL SNATCHED FROM DOCK Employes Say That Two Men Nipped

Prospective Voyage.

Unwillingness on the part of one of a trio of girls who were about to embark on the Beaver yesterday afternoon to accompany two men who reached the dock a few minutes before the steamer salled, led employes of the San Francisco & Portland Steam ship Company to report the incident to Harbormaster Speler. The dockmen said that while the young women were approaching the Ainsworth dock they were evertaken by two men who at tempted to force all of the girls to go with them.

Two of the girls eluded their pur suers, but the third was compelled to return to the street with the men. The harbormaster ran to Third street and searched for the two men and the girl as far as Washington street to no avail. The girls who reached the steamer so persistently in the crowd for their chum,
