Former Wallace Financier Asserts Indictment Against Him Is Result of Plot of Enemies. Forgeries Cause Failure.

BOISE, Idaho, Oct. 11 .- (Special.) -The treaty between the United States and Canada which does not make violation of the banking laws an extradit-able offense, probably will prevent the Idahe authorities bringing B. The issue of extraditing came up in the Federal Court here after William Kettenbach and George H. After sentence their former bonds of $7500 were raised to $25,000 each, pending appeal to protect the cach, pending appeal to protect the Government, as the offense was not included in the extradition treaties.

O'Neil says the indictment returned against him is the result of a political plot of the part of his enemies. He also asserts he has proof that forgeries in the bank, which he knew nothing about until later, caused the failure.

Counsel for O'Nell applied for an ad-journment until Saturday, October 21, in order to give the defense time to produce several witnesses. It was stated by Mr. Taylor that the defense intends to bring a large number of witnesses from Idaho and will fight

ESKIMO'S IDEA SAVES LIVES

Details of Destruction of Schooner F. S. Redfield Told.

SEATTLE. Wash, Oct. 11.—Details were received today of the loss of the power schooner F. S. Redfield on August 21 on Cape Prince of Wales, which is the point of land of the American Hemisphere nearest to Asia. The Redfield went on a sandy beach during a violant storm.

field went on a sandy beach during a violent storm.

On account of the surf it was impossible to lower a boat. An Eskimonamed Enik devised a plan of escape. Taking a sealskin, he inflated it, attached a rope to it, and threw it overboard, to be washed ashore by the sea. Natives on the beach picked up the sealskin and the rope and the people on the schooner were hauled ashore over a tackle rigged by the sallors and Eskimos.

The Redfield is practically undamaged, but is high and dry at low tide, and is a total loss except that the machinery and rigging are being removed.
