

PORTLAND LOSES LAST INNING GAMES

Beavers' Goodbye to Season and Seals Has Every Aspect of Farce.

LINE-UP SHAKEN AROUND

Tommy Seaton and Bush Leaguer Named Young Bear Brunt of Defeat of McCredie's Team in San Francisco.

LEAGUE SEASON ENDS

The 1911 season of the Pacific Coast League ended with yesterday's double-header. The clubs finished as follows:

San Francisco, Oct. 22.—Portland did not display its championship form today. Rather, the Beavers, with a full knowledge of a pennant roped and tied the forepart of the week, hippered through two positions, the result of which readers have probably guessed before this. The Seals romped home with both games.

In the morning, it was Tommy Seaton who refused to wear himself out, allowing a score of 8 to 1 to be run up against him. Later in the day at Recreation Park, a good-sized crowd that had come particularly for sentimental reasons and to witness the last of the year's work, saw Young, a San Rafael busher, beat 7 to 2. Truly he complets the attention that young Mr. Young wasn't altogether to blame, and if corroboration is needed, take a peek at the nine errors of the Portland pitcher.

McCredie was shy on talent and every man who turned up in uniform had to get into action. There were exactly nine men together out in blue with the boss in citizen's clothes, playing the part of an indifferent spectator. And those nine men were so switched around that they were not even the regulars had to rub their eyes to know whether they were awake.

Goodbye is Farceful. It wasn't baseball—it was just a farcical goodbye—and little wonder that the crowd was disgusted and started for the exits before the game was finished. The Seals were pleased, perhaps, with the outcome, because they helped their batting average on this, the last of last days, and the crowd, well, the crowd was suited with the alarming levity of the game. No records were broken but the eight and a half innings were reeled off in an hour and eight minutes, which is going some.

Double plays were as thick as flies in Summer time, occasioned, not so much by extra bursts of speed on the part of the fielders, as by reason of the "don't care attitude of some of the base-runners in hiking to first.

Line-up is Shifted. The revised Portland line-up was a wonder. Chadbourne was shifted to first, with Harry at second and Barry at first, as on Saturday. Moore, catcher of the day before, found himself out in right field, otherwise the Beavers being left pretty much as they have been all the season.

The morning game was very much of a joke with strong hitting at times and leading by the Northerners. Schmidt annexed the last home run of the season, while Weaver got a peculiar triple. Krueger, thinking the ball was over the fence, turned to the pitcher, instead, however, the ball struck inside the fence and Weaver landed on third, while Krueger was hustling to his last chance.

Managers Act as Pitchers. Wolverton and O'Rourke Mount Hill in Last Game of Season.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 22.—Jack Fitzgerald's shut-out pitching in the first game and the usual end-season comedy stunts in the second game were the features of today's double-header which the Oaks and the Senators divided evenly. Sacramento took the first game, 4 to 6, making all of their scores in the first inning. After that Martini held the locals to one hit. In the second game O'Rourke and Wol-

SMITH SAYS BEST TEAM WON FLAG

Pennant Race in Coast League Equal in Excitement to That of 1910.

MCCREDIE REAL LEADER

San Francisco Sporting Writer, in Review of Baseball Year, Pays Tribute to Manager of Portland Team.

BY HARRY B. SMITH

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22.—Today marked the close of the 1911 Pacific Coast League season. To all intents and purposes, the league season was closed last Thursday afternoon when, by a shifting of the scenes, the Portland Beavers clinched the right to the pennant for which they have been contending since early in the Spring.

In 1910 it was said of the Coast League race that it was the most remarkable known for years. The same assertion can be repeated today, but with added force. In 1910 it was a two-team or a three-team race at best. This season there were five teams that could be classed as contenders during part of the Summer, later four, and still later three, until, during the last three weeks, it came to be a question of individual supremacy between Portland and Vernon.

The unexpected work of Vernon in coming so strongly to the front, particularly in the closing stages of the race, and especially because the more dusting of their trusty line in all quarters, and every indication points to a busy season on the green cloth.

Charlie Draper, formerly amateur champion of Kansas City, will play exhibition games here this week. He will meet all comers at 160 points.

George Stovall, manager of the Cleveland Naps, was presented with a chest of silver by the members of the team last week. The chest contained 82 pieces, the total value being $375.

Two pennants won in a row are proof of the leadership of the man who heads the Portland club and attempts to tick the right kind of ball players. That he has been assisted largely through his connection with the Cleveland Americans cannot be denied.

It may be a ringing statement to say that the second best club in the league ran third and that the Hogs were lucky to keep so far up in the race. Although possibly untrue, it is known that certain reasons that can be given.

Fielding is Inconsistent. The diagnosis of the Oaks and why they are today in this position is far from easy. Wolverton seems to be the right kind of a leader and has a fairly strong team.

Luck broke badly against San Francisco, but at the same time a scarcity of pitching material accounts for some of the games lost. The local pitching strength was far from being equal to that of the year before.

Los Angeles and Sacramento scarcely figured as pennant winners, in proof of which the story of the past year stands at some time or another all four of the other clubs have occupied first position.

As regards next year's line-up of the forces it is rather early to forecast what may happen. Some radical changes will be necessary with the San Francisco club, and, as has been indicated, chiefly in the pitching line.

turn out, the Spring days will have to tell. SOLOMAN OUTPLAYS JOHNSON Oregon Champion Defeats Californian at Bank Pool.

BY ROSCOE FAWCETT. By dropping the final games of the Pacific Coast League's 30-week schedule yesterday at San Francisco, the Portland champions lost their third straight series to the Seals on the coast.

Usually, in every league, the dope will show that some inferior aggregation has put the screws on the leaders. For instance, last season both Vernon and Oakland had it all over the Portland title-winners.
