Hawley and Lafferty, Out to Succeed Themselves, Start Preliminary Campaigning - Multnomah Is District Now.

Though the field is plentifully supolled with "would-like-to-be" candiplied with "would-like-to-be" candidates for Congressional honors, none has come out and definitely announced his candidacy in opposition to either of the state's Representatives in the lower branch of Congress. Representatives Hawley and Lafferty wish to succeed themselves, but those who would relieve them of the responsibility of official life apparently are playing a "waiting game."

At any rate, they are lying low, keeping mum and permitting the guessing to continue as to who finally will Resping mum and permitting the guess-ing to continue as to who finally will get into the contest for the Republican nomination to these offices. At the same time the ranks of this undecided group are increased by recruits, men for whom inciplent booms have been started in differenct sections of the three Congressional districts in the last week.

Hawley Pleased With Trip.

Hawley will be a candidate to succeed himself from the First District, as it has been reorganized, and Lafferty, who was elected from the Second District. who was elected from the Second Dis-trict a year ago, will try to succeed himself from the newly-created Third District, Multnomah County. In the last three weeks both Hawley and Laf-ferty have been particularly active, the former having made a thorough county-te-county canvass of the entire district he represents. His reception at all points was not only cordial but enthusi-natic and he is much gratified with the astic, and he is much gratified with the Hawley and Lafferty will depart for Washington some time this week to be present when the regular session of Congress is convened next month. Lafpresent when the regular session of Congress is convened next month. Lafferly has made the statement that he may obtain a leave of absence and return to Oregon for another two weeks just before the primaries in April.

Most recent of the reported "possibilities" to announce that he probably will oppose Hawley for renomination is A. W. Norblad, City Attorney of Astoria. Another possible Hawley opponent is W. A. Williams, of Forest Grove.

Walter A. Dimick, State Senator from Clackamas County, and George C. Brownell, also of Clackamas, have been

Brownell, also of Clackamas, have been suggested as likely candidates to contest with Hawley for the Republican nomination, but thus far neither has mustered up sufficient courage to tackle the job.

But it is in the Second District, consisting of those countles east of the Cascades, that there is a multiplicity of candidates. More than a dozen favored sons of that section of the state have been "mentioned," but in the last week no less than three other "possibilities" have been added to the list. They are: John W. McCullough, of Ontario, Prosecuting Attorney of the Ontario, Prosecuting Attorney of the Ninth Judicial District; George E. Da-vis, of Vale, ex-Circuit Judge of the same district, and Jay H. Dobbin, of Joseph, newly-elected president of the Oregon Wool Growers' Association. The only candidate who is making active fight for the nomination so is John (Jerry) P. Rusk, of La ande. Rusk was Speaker of the House at the last session of the Oregon Legislature. Immediately following ad-journment of the Legislature, Rusk renoved from Joseph to La Grande and has since been promoting his candi-dacy in most aggressive fashion. In connection with the Congressional nomination from this district, friends of the following men have been urging them to get into the contest: Sinnott and R. R. Butler of The Daller W. H. Brooke, Ontario; W. Lair Thomp Lakeview, and T. J. Mahoney lifforts of Republicans to center on one candidate from the Third district have not yielded satisfactory results, although the plan has not been dropped although the plan has not been dropped. It is strongly suspected that J. Andy Madsen, indorsed by the Workingmen's Political Club, representing one element of organized labor, for the Congressional nomination will not qualify and at the proper moment will step down and out and pave the way for Easten C. Clubs who is believed to be Raiph C. Clyde, who is believed to be the bone fide candidate of the trader unjonists, to get into the fight.

From time to time the names of Cir-George E. Shepherd have been proposed as candidates for this nom-nation at the hands of the Republican voters of Multnomah County. As in the other two districts, these men ay pear to be "sizing up the situation." At the same time Dr. Harry Lane is said to be quietly making some observations of the same situation with a view to becoming the Democratic candidate.

Houghton's death, the injured man was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where he made a verbal will, giving his property to Mildred and Ril Ridgeway, aged 12 and 11 years, respectively, the daughters of W. Washington State to See Real Battle After Tacoma Meeting December 5.

SPECIAL SESSION IS WORRY

Plan Is to Secure Control of Various Delegations to State Republican Convention to Laud La Féllette Strength, if Possible.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Nov. 29 .- (Special.)-After the meeting in Tacoms on December 5 to discuss the question of a special session, which gathering Governor Hay has promised to attend, the insurgents of Washington will attempt to organize and propare for the coming campaign. The first battle will be to secure control of the various delegations to the state Republican convention, so as to send to the Na-tional convention, if possible, La Fol-lette delegates instead of delegates instructed to support President Taft to get together.

At the present time the insurgents are not organized and the special ses-sion talk will give them an opportunity to get together.

As for that special session, few expect it to be called, as the question of road legislation is what will keep away from the meeting many of those who at first favored the idea. Likewise they will also decline to inderse the movement for fear of the responsibility that will attach should a prolonged and expensive session result. Grange Fails to Respond.

Grange Falls to Respond.

Becretary Lewis, of the state grange, who sent out about 500 petitions calling for a special session, to be signed up by the grangers of the state, says that less than a score of them have been returned and that he will not be present at the meeting. Master Kegley, of the grange, is in the East and he will not be present, so that the grangers will be represented only by members of their legislative committee.

Senator J. W. Bryan, of Kitsap, who

Senator J. W. Bryan, of Kitsap, who aspires to a seat in Congress from the state-at-large, is also afraid of a special session. He does not advocate it unless the members will agree to be tied down to a programme to consist of a Presidential preference primary and nothing more. To do that, he avers, is impossible.

Just now the question bothering those who would like to get into office is: "What is an insurgent?" or rather, "How long does one have to be an insurgent in order to get a chance to run for office?" This is not so simple a question to answer as it may seem. The insurgents are not urging a fight to start out with and several men are The insurgents are not urging a again to start out with and several men are claiming to be insurgents who are regarded as strong factors and able to swing votes. So far, the answer to the query is "Did he support Poindexter?" but that rule is causing trouble already. Some think it is too limited a yardstick for manufactor purposes while others. for measuring purposes, while others insist that converts shouldn't be ad-vanced too rapidly, or there may be dissension in the ranks.

Insurgent leaders declare there is little possibility of putting an out and out insurgent ticket in the field. The Supreme Court flasco showed the danger of that, according to their way of thinking, so they propose to content themselves with merely indersing men who stand for the measures they ad-vocate. Likewise the special session evement is known to be an insurgent project and there is trouble in securing an issue around which they can rally.

Trouble Internally Not Desired. Senator Bryan says that some would like to see a complete state insurgent ticket in the field, but that others would fight such a movement as savor-ing too much of the old machine meth-ods, and no trouble is desired internally for the present. He believes the in-surgents may content themselves with merely indorsing candidates in the National field and letting other matters, aside from legislative, severely alone. He declares that there will be enough running for Congress in each district and at large to make the sec-ond choice clause operative. If his prediction proves correct the insurprediction proves correct the insur-gents will have a chance to indorse more than one man in each place. This question as to whether or not organizations will be effective in the organizations will be effective in the next campaign is interesting every state official. The primary fight is supposed to be a strictly party affair, although it seldom is, and then will come a test as to whether there is enough left of the old party organizations to put up a good fight.

Following the Tacoma session regarding the question of calling the legislators together, the insurgents intend to try to get together. The are confident that men can be secure in each county to direct the work, they do this, the Republican and Dem ocratic parties will have fights on their hands, as the insurgents, it is said,

Musical Triumph at Heilig Is Pronounced-Violinist Delights With His Wonderful Artistry and Skillfully Selected Programme.

BY JOSEPH M. QUENTIN.

AN KUBELIK and his wonderful |

$50,000 "Emperor" violin achieved | another remarkable musical triumph at the Heilig Theater last night, winning enthusiastic plaudits from a $4000 house. Every seat was taken, and late comers had to be content with standing room at the rear. What is the secret of Kubelik's popu larity, and why does the musical public hall him delightedly as one of its very own? The answer seems to be: he never plays "above" his audience, but takes it into his confidence; he is the most skillful programme maker in the ranke of world-famous artists; his se-lections are invariably tuneful ones, and he never inflicts upon a long-suffering audience a puzzling maxe of violin gymnastics, called exercises, to show off technique; he makes each phrase a lovely, personal offering; and, lastly, he plays into your very soul as if he directed a great white light Violiniat Not Stranger Here. This is Kubelik's ninth world tour, and he has appeared several times in concert in this city, the last occasion being four years ago. The record audience this tour has been the one at the Royal Albert Hall, London, England, where the receipts were $14,000.

that when the music in a selection gave him, say, five or six bars' rest, audience broke in with enthusiastic applause, and might have spoiled the ac-curate rendition of the music, had Kubelik not been a collected, resource-rul artist to his very finger tips. Com-mon sense might have told the tooeager enthusiasts to wait until the selection was concluded. But this very circumstance shows how much of a favorite Kubelik is. He had one dozen recalls that were entreaties for more music at any price, so long as it was violin music by the great Kubelik. It is to the credit of the eminent artist that his head was not turned by this laudation, and that he was modest, shy and retiring in spite of it all. The women and girls who were "gone" on Kubelik might have waited for him at the stage door, but probably the knowledge that he is married, is devoted to his wife and that he is the father of twins made them pause.

Two Encores Given. The programme was as printed, the most magnificent offering probably being the Tschalkowsky "Concerto in D major." The only encores Kubelik consented to give were two Randegger numbers: "Pierot Serenade" and "Bobantar Dence." The piane accompany hemian Dance." The plane accompanist was Kubelik's fellow Bohemian Ludwig Schwab, who played with rare sympathy and conspicuous ability. The concert was under the direction of Lois

Then the Socialist vote is worrying

Then the Socialist vote is worrying the people who follow politics closely. That the Socialists will get a good vote next time is conceded. At the last judicial election they polled three times as many votes as two years before and now few will argue that they will not get 50,600 or better at the coming election. That vote, with the women exercising the right of franchise for the first time in state affairs, is causing much uneasiness in political circles.

At present there is a lull in political matters, but the Tacoma meeting on the special session question is expected to bring matters forward that will have a big influence in the 1912 primaries and general election.

Thousands of cheerful Oregon homes are made still more cheerful this day because of the presence of a good piano supplied by the house of Eilers.

Hundreds of the best homes have recently received player pianos from us. Every member of these households will play the piano today. Hundreds upon hundreds of our foremost homes have lately received one of the more or less expensive styles of that modern musical wonder, the Talking Machine. Suitable records will practically bring the stage of opera house and theater right into these homes.

Because of furnishing musical instruments of the very best types at substantial reductions in price, Eilers Music House is grateful because it has made possible the ownership of many a good musical instrument in Western homes which otherwise would not now enjoy having one.

In extending thanks to the thousands upon thousands of patrons who have by their generous support built up the great chain of Eilers houses along the Pacific Coast, we again pledge, ourselves to render the best service in every way in future.

Splendid new facilities have fortunately come to us during the good year of 1911; additions to our wholesale department at 15th, 16th and Pettygrove, also our magnificent new retail establishment at 7th and Alder, as well as our splendid new building completed only last week in Spokane. These, we are confident and thankful, will enable us to still more successfully carry out the underlying principles of this institution.

Our methods shall always mean positive satisfaction to the purchaser. We can and do supply the very choicest and best in the music trade for a great deal less than the same thing is obtainable for in any other establishment or agency.
