In a big city like Portland rent plays a most important part when it comes to fixing prices on goods which are to be sold at retail. Years ago, when they started in business in Portland, Eilers Music House realized this, and as is their custom, began by making definite their custom, began by making dennice plans at that time to in some way off-set what they knew the future would bring them, 1 c., high rents. They succeeded most admirably, and today their books show that they have a rental income instead of a rental ex-panditure enditure. They also figured down every other item of expense in the handling of pianos in an equally clever way, and have so reduced the cost of selling that even if they were compelled to pay as much for planos as all other dealers in this city do, they could still sell cheaper. EILERS MUSIC HOUSE sells more than twenty per cent cheaper than others because of the enormous conomies effected in the cost of shipng, handling and selling.
